

OPPORTUNITY EQUAL FOR ALL

Program Contemplated By Republican Party, Says Harding

IN FINAL APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE

Republican Party Purposes An Association of Nations, He Says

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—Senator Harding, in a final pre-election statement to the American people, made public here last night, declared the Republican party "goes to the people assured that they will recognize its superiority as an instrumentality of administration and that in the election now impending they will give it the certificate of their confidence and trust."

The Republican presidential nominee criticized Democratic administration of governmental affairs, declaring "the nation is determined to be done with democracy, under the mere guise of Democratic forms. The Republican party, he asserted, has proposed in its platform and developed in the utterances of its leaders, a program which contemplates equal opportunity for all, and recognizes the views of exploitation and profiteering."

As to the league of nations issue, Senator Harding summarized his party's position as follows: "The Republican party purposes such an association of nations as will most effectively further the aspiration for world-wide and permanent peace without sacrificing any part of the independence of the American nation. It believes America can and must bear its full part in the responsibilities of the world, but it always believes that America alone must decide what that part shall be."

Senator Harding's statement follows: "In asking the suffrage of the American electorate this year, the Republican party has in mind both the record of service from its beginning, whereof it is very proud, and the vision of opportunity for service in the future, which its spokesmen have presented during this campaign. We are asking that great responsibility be imposed upon us. It is a responsibility that must be measured by both the gravity of the crisis that confronts the world and the incapacity with which the present administration has met the problems of the last few years. One of us is the responsibility we seek, our party has no thought of evading, for it never has been guilty of that. "Democratic economic and administrative policies had brought this country to the danger of disaster before the outbreak of the war in Europe. The vast expansion of our export trade and demands upon our producing facilities, which came with the war, saved us from immediate precipitation of that disaster. But that phase has now passed and nothing but a return to those constructive and progressive policies which have always characterized the Republican administration can save us from early realization of the danger that confronted us at the middle of 1914."

It devised a budget system in the hope of putting an end to the treasury deficit and bringing economy and system into our national finances. But the president vetoed that measure. The administration went right on spending vast sums in excess of our revenues, offering no constructive inspiration or leadership, apparently forgetting our domestic difficulties in its engrossment with the chimeras of world reconstruction. "This, in a word, is the record of the administration, now about to retire from power, which seeks to have its policies perpetuated. The country will decline to give its confidence and its mandate to that party or those policies. It remembers that the Republican party fought the Civil war and afterward restored and unified the nation. It believes that the Republican party is capable of repeating that service, and because it so believes, it is going to return the Republican party to power."

Saving Her Worry. Miss Elizabeth Marbury, at a tea in New York, said of marriage: "Too many married men regard marriage as a contract of 'Heads I win, tails you lose.' "In Belgium one day I heard two American business men talking about married life. "Do you think," said the first man, "that a husband should take his wife into his confidence about his business affairs?" "Yes, if he isn't making any money," said the other man with a cunning look."—Detroit Free Press.

Warning the Rats in Vermont. Away with ferrets, traps and cats. There's niter ways to lose your rats: At least our ancestors employed a different means when rat-anoyed: To 'pend on methods such as these: Consume your comfort, coin and cheese: I own a roll of paper small. That once cartouched the sullen wall Of Aunt Priscilla Pettingill. The time she lived in Cuttingsville.

There's easier ways than traps and cats, Or used to be, to lose your rats: The paper that I said was mine, In stanza first, the seventh line, Reveals the way to free your place From each rodential form and face. It shows the whole occult routine, The deus ex the rat machine. The legal, swift and manly mode Of handing Mr. Rat, the road.

It ain't as though you had to bring a case in court and try the thing: You warn 'em off with words, and tell 'em where and whence to go and dwell; And spell just as you always do: "Be off you rats," is how it reads, "To Byron Buck's or Martin Mead's." Then sign it with a careless scrawl And stick it in the sullen wall.

The jiff the varmints read, they feel An onward urge from head to heel: The urge that juzzed the Wandering Jew. Beside this urge, is weak as dew; But, warn 'em 'trot no running stream. They're afraid of trout, or so 'twould seem; Select a neighbor 'twixt whose lands And yours, no water runs or stands, Then go to bed and smile a smirk And let the warning do its work.

And warn 'em not on frosty nights, Or else you'll see some awful sights— 'Twas Aunt Priscilla, too, that told Of having had her eyes behold One morning in the road a pack Of rats as cold and stiff as black— I think 'twas twenty-three or four, But what's one rat the less or more— And, frozen tight to each one's tongue A scrap of warning paper lung. —Daniel C. Cady in Burlington Daily News.

HOW MRS. YOUNG RECOVERED FROM EXTREME DEBILITY

Thin Blood Had Robbed Her of So Much Strength She Was Exhausted After Climbing Stairs.

People who suffer from the many symptoms which appear when the blood becomes thin will find comfort and encouragement from the experience of Mrs. F. P. Young of Fiskdale, Mass. "I began to be pale and weak some time ago," says Mrs. Young. "I was not sick in bed, because it is not my nature to give up if I can hold my head from the pillow, but I didn't go upstairs after I came down in the morning until bed time. "Not only were my limbs weak but my heart jumped as if it would leap out of my body when I exerted myself. It was for this reason almost impossible for me to go upstairs. My stomach too seemed on fire most of the time, and my complexion was as white as paper."

"One day my sister read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she wanted me to try them. It was about the first of May when I got a box and I continued to take them until October. I felt a decided change for the better within a week after I began to use them. The color began to come back to my lips which were quite colorless before. My condition steadily improved, until I had secured the best possible results in every way. My cheeks became pink again and I am real well. I wish I could let everyone who suffers as I did, know the benefit I derived from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves. They have been used with benefit for anemia, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, nervous indigestion and, in fact, for every disorder caused by or dependent upon thin blood.

Write to-day to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for the free booklet "Building Up the Blood." Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 60 cents per box—adv.

Marine League of Nations in Himself. A puzzle in nationality has the marine puzzling. Louis C. Pinette, accepted for enlistment in the United States marine corps at Tulsa, Okla., said that his mother was an American who married a Frenchman in Italy. He was born on a ship flying the Spanish colors while lying in the English channel. At the age of five his parents died in Sweden, and he was adopted by a German who brought him to the United States. His adopted father is not a naturalized citizen.

"Would you class him as 'The Man Without a Country'?" the recruiting sergeant was asked. "Man without a country nothing," said the sergeant. "I'd class him as a league of nations."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Nautical Objections. "I see where some sailors were not allowed to land on this side because they refused to be bathed at the quarantine station." "Well, wasn't it very natural for sailors to feel pride in not being washed ashore?"—Baltimore American.

Inquiry Misinterpreted. He—Does your mother object to kissing? She—Now, just because I allow you to kiss me, you needn't think you can kiss the whole family.—Boston Transcript.

Chemical Industry Attains Power.

No development of greater industrial and commercial significance has occurred in recent months than the amalgamation of five of the largest chemical companies in the United States, the final details of which have just been announced. The organization of the new company, which will be known as the Allied Chemical & Dye Corp., with a capitalization of more than $250,000,000, stands out as a commercial achievement of the highest magnitude, and it symbolizes the rapid progress made by the chemical industry in this country in recent years.

Prior to the war the American chemical industry struggled against great odds. German manufacturers long dominated the domestic market, and through their highly developed organization, which amounted to no less than a world monopoly, they successfully countered every effort which tended to upset their supremacy. The advent of the war divested them of this power. It was from this position of comparative obscurity that the manufacturers of chemicals and dyes in this country, becoming a matter of urgent necessity, underwent a complete revolution in a few years.

Today the American chemical industry is in the position to meet not only the requirements of chemicals and dyes of this country but to bid strongly for its share of the world's business. To facilitate this end a unification of the leading manufacturers of this country has become a logical development. Despite the penalties imposed by the peace treaty the chemical industry of Germany continues vigorous. English manufacturers are active in the development of their industry and are receiving the backing of their government. In fact, every great power has been taught as a result of the war, the commercial and military importance of maintaining a strong, well-organized chemical industry. It is to be expected that as time goes on a keen competition will develop between these nations. The recent merger

Women Magistrates for Juvenile Courts.

Women magistrates for courts dealing with children's cases are advocated in a report just issued by the British board of education, according to information received by the children's bureau of the United States department of labor.

Juvenile offenses against the law are on the increase in England. The old methods of punishment by whipping and imprisonment have failed. In 1916 the number of young persons sent to prison totaled 2,890; in 1918 it had increased to 5,090. Of all those who were punished by detention, one-sixth were back in the court within a month. Whipping has proved even more of a failure, as one-fourth of the offenders reappeared in court within a month. The treatment of juvenile offenders in England has been greatly improved since the passage of the children's act in 1908, but many of the magistrates have not had a sympathetic understanding of child life and they have not been keen to avail themselves of the many facilities for consideration placed at their disposal. The principle of rehabilitation was recognized in the law, but the practice has been neglected. The report recommends that juvenile court, not only in the city but also in the rural districts, which has to deal with any considerable number of offenders, should have a chief probation officer. His duty would be not only to supervise each himself, but to secure the cooperation of teachers, scout masters, officers boys' and girls' clubs and other organizations so that every child whose charge should be introduced one or more of these agencies.
