Aldo C. Poletti and Ralph W. Daffine of Barre, students at Harvard college, have been awarded Price Greenleaf Aids for the current year, on the basis of their fine record before admission to Harvard. Poletti and Daffine, who prepared at Spaulding high school, are two of a limited number of men selected for this honor by the college office. The Price Greenleaf Aids are virtually scholarships awarded to freshmen who show special promise. The awards are based in each case on strong evidence of the candidate's character and scholarship furnished by the school from which he comes.

Two more scars of honor have been added to Archie Allen of 150 1/2 South Main street as the result of a surgical operation at the Prince of Wales hospital in Montreal, P. Q., about six weeks ago, performed by army physicians for the removal of two sharp-edged pieces of iron or German shrapnel, souvenirs of the battle of Cambrai. This was a continuation of events which resulted from wounds received in October, 1918. He can now count nine prominent scars on his body, the last two being made on his back; yet he remains a picture of health and ruggedness and the proud father of four robust children. Allen's life in the trenches was short, so to speak, arriving in France Sept. 2, 1918, and remaining there no later than October 1, when he was wounded. After being a patient 10 days in the Camiers hospital in France he was shipped to Carlisle, England, to convalesce, remaining three months and finally securing a homeward voyage in better health. Since March, 1919, he has been working at the Barreley Bros. granite plant. At the suggestion of the Canadian army officials, he submitted to this final operation, in which an incision three inches and a half deep had to be made to extract the small pieces of shrapnel, that eventually would have caused him trouble and suffering. The pieces of iron Mr. Allen brought home with him, not that he will forget the battle of Cambrai while with the 1st Quebec regiment, but to keep for souvenirs. He enlisted in Montreal Feb. 2, 1918, with the Royal Montreal regiment.

The Growing Child.

A Series of Articles Prepared Especially for Barre Daily Times. By the United States Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.

Questions relating to child health and related problems will be answered by experts of the U. S. Public Health Service. Address Child Health Editor, United States Public Health Service, Washington, D. C. (Please mention this newspaper.)

Physical Education and Posture.

In any scheme for the upbuilding of human efficiency, physical education must necessarily be one of the fundamentals. It must be acknowledged that the average man or woman, boy or girl is most efficient when he or she is physically fit.

Moreover, physical education, in the modern sense, does not stop at physical fitness, but tends to mental and moral fitness as well. The boy whose nerve cells are fed by the quickened circulation due to physical exercise, and whose mind is rendered alert and keen by the demand for the quick response to command in a drill or the necessity for prompt and decisive action in a game, is usually in better condition to solve a problem in mathematics than one who has not had these advantages.

Furthermore, the loyalty, courage, and social qualities developed in team play, together with the self-respect that comes from the erect carriage of a well-poised body, strengthen the moral fibre of the individual and the nation.

The school owes physical training to your children just as truly as it owes them mental training. The educational program that aimed at the production of a few lightning calculators or erudite bookworms rather than a well rounded education for every pupil would be considered absurd and freakish. In the same way, the physical training that produces a few spectacular athletes to the neglect of the needs of all the pupils is fundamentally wrong. When all the boys and girls of the country are placed under the instruction of adequately trained teachers of physical education, the work will consist of corrective and recreational exercises in well-balanced proportions. These two forms of exercise—the first aiming at the production of good posture, and the second offering the advantages of healthy sport will contain also all the essentials of educational and hygienic exercise.

The mother who has not at one time or another, told her boy or girl to "stand up straight" or "sit up" is the exception. Thoughtful parents are always concerned about the poor posture of their children, and rightfully so. Bad posture is detrimental from the standpoint of health, appearance, material advantage and, in a way, of character.

When the body is held erect and well poised, all the organs are in the best position for carrying out their special functions. When this is not the case, it is easy to see how derangements of the health may come about. This fact, together with the vastly more attractive appearance of the child with good carriage, is enough to convince any parent of the importance of any measure designed to secure good posture. It is well, too, to remember that a well-set up boy is more apt to be confident, intelligent and efficient, and more likely to be chosen for important work than if he slouches into an office with an awkward body awkwardly handled.
