STOWE

The Stowe Civic club committees are completing arrangements for a carnival of winter sports on Washington's birthday. There is plenty of snow here. The program will include skiing, tobogganing, snowshoeing at Simon's slide and trips may be made to Mount Mansfield and Smuggler's Notch. It is expected that Lady Luella of Ottawa, Canada, who holds the championship for high ski jumping, will be present and it is safe to say that some thrilling stunts will be carried out. A new pastime, the toboggan snake ride, invented for the occasion by R. R. McMahon, will be carried out for the first time. The new bicycle toboggan, invented by C. O. Burt, will be on exhibition and for use, and other toboggans are being built for the occasion and will be for sale or rent.

The committee of arrangements numbers 25 and to this number should be added every man in Stowe, who is interested in putting Stowe and its resources on the map. Arrangements have been made to handle the crowd and to see that all present have a good time. Maple sugar or snow will be served in the evening in the "open arena." Prizes will be given to town teams winning highest marks in the sports. Visits to the mountain or notch should be planned for the day before or after. The C. E. and F. O. Burt tractor will go to Morrisville for a load of visitors. Trolley cars will meet the trains at Waterbury and special cars will be run if necessary.

S. H. Warren acted as welcoming committee at the Community church Sunday morning service. Miss Jessie Southard acted as organist and a quartette, Mrs. H. W. Barrows, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Douglass and C. A. Riley, rendered an anthem and led in the singing. The subject of the pastor's sermon was, "What We Can Know of Christ." The pastor's Thanksgiving sermon, preached on Community Sunday to an audience of 250, has been printed by request and folders containing it and also a cut of the church were on the table. There were 139 present at Sunday school. There was a large attendance and an interesting service conducted by Mr. Hayward at the Moscow schoolhouse Sunday afternoon.

The teachers' training class, conducted by Mrs. Hayward, met with Miss Ruby Shaw Sunday evening, the study being the first chapters of Genesis. The class will meet with Mrs. Dorothy Nelson next Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Raymond spent the week end with friends in Burlington, the latter part of last week.

Mrs. Anna Abbott of Bethel is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Dwight F. Smith.

Melvin Wilson of Newfield, N. H., is passing a few days with his mother, Mrs. F. E. Bailey, on his way to Montpelier, where he has employment.

Miss Rachel Slayton of the Waterbury Center telephone office visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Slayton, over Sunday.

Mrs. Walter Shephard has returned from Morrisville, where she has been caring for Mrs. C. M. Lawrence for several weeks. Mrs. Lawrence is gaining slowly and is able to sit up a part of the time.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Burt are ill. Mrs. Della Moody is caring for them.

A program, carried out at the meeting of Mansfield Mountain grange Saturday afternoon, includes solos and music by Miss Florence Austin, roll call, quotations and readings from Lincoln—the Gettysburg speech, Miss Vivian Campbell; patriotic reading, Mrs. Mattie Sanborn; question, practical health hints, responded to by Rev. C. E. Hayward. The next meeting will be held on the evening of Feb. 6.

Miss Margaret Taylor of Montreal has been called here by the illness of her sister, Mrs. R. H. McMahon.

Change of Trade. Not long ago a cotton man inquired at a large bank regarding his note, which the bank held for a sizable amount. "Yes," remarked an officer, "it falls due to-morrow and we expect it will be paid." The cotton man made no reply for a moment, then asked abruptly, "What is your business?" "Why, I am a banker," was the surprised response. "Well," mused the cotton man, "to-morrow you are going to be a cotton merchant."—New York Times.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

How Did Lillian Gish Baffle Storm in "Way Down East"?

The backbone of February was broken. But the winter of New England was still with us. February is a treacherous month, and so it was toward the end of last February that Lillian Gish was turned out into that New England snowstorm from the house of Squire Bartlett. And the greatest of all stage climaxes had begun with this frail, yet strong, heroine of "Way Down East."

Miss Lillian Gish. As She Appears in "Way Down East."

as she was literally swept out into night's highway by God's elements. That directing low-commanding voice of Griffith could scarce be heard above the howl of winter blasts and the blinding snow clogged the air like the veriest London fog. But out and on went Lillian Gish inspired with the staunch soul of Anna Moore within her own.

So great was the upheaval of the elements that signals had to be used between Griffith and his brave little star. That magic word from the lips and voice of D. W. Griffith of "cameras" pierced the howl of the winds and with an uplifted hand through the blinding snows came Lillian Gish staggering in her thin raiment of black. Little Anna was weak. She gasped, homeless, deserted. In the walk one sees at the Playhouse theatre, Montpelier, daily there is registered in every tissue of that body and face what misery and cruelty can be wrought upon the human being in this work. She struggles against the wind but the gales swirl her from her feet and she falls only to rise to try to move on to some undiscovered place where there might be a measure of strife from soul and body. What you see upon the screen of the cinema art at the Playhouse theatre, Montpelier, of Lillian Gish, as Anna Moore, was no make-believe suffering. It had to be done and Lillian did it that we might all realize it.—Adv.

NEWBURY. In the Barre Times of Feb. 11 we noted the death of Mrs. Sarah (Worthen) Nye one of that city's oldest residents—80 years. What makes this item of interest to the readers of the Newbury Journal is that her brother, the late Jacob Worthen, was for many years a respected citizen of this place; and also the widow of Silas Worthen, a brother of the deceased, is now a resident of this
