AT HIS OLD HOME

HIS FACE VIEWED FOR LAST TIME

An Immense Crowd Awaits the Arrival of the Train-The Procession to the Court House-Thousands of People Take Their Last Look at Their Old Friend and Fellow Townsman - Body Removed to McKinley Residence-Burial This Afternoon

Canton O., September 18.-Tenderly and reverently those who had known William McKinley best, today received his martyred body into their arms. They had forgotten the illustrious career of the statesman in the loss of a great personal friend who had grown dearer to them with the passing of the years. They hardly noticed the president of the United States or the generals or admirals in their resplendent uniforms The beautiful flag-draped casket which contained the body of their friend and fellow townsman held all their thoughts. He had left them two weeks ago this very day in the full tide of the strength of a glorious manhood and they had brought him back dead. Anguish was in the heart of every man, woman and child.

The entire population of the little city and thousands from ad over Ohio. the full strength of the national guard of the state, eight regiments, three batteries of artillery, one battalion of engineers, 5,000 men in all, the governor, lieutenant governor and a justice of the supreme court, representing the three branches of the state government, were at the station to receive the remains. The whole town was in deep black, the only house in all this sorrow-stricken city, strange as it may seem, without a touch of mourning drapery was the of familiar McKinley cottage on north Market street to which so many disdistinguished men in the country have made pilgrimages in the days that have gone. The blinds were drawn, but there was no outward token of the blow that had robbed it of its most precious possession. There was not even a bow of crepe upon the door when the stricken widow was carried by Abner McKinley and Dr. Rixey through it into the darkened home from which the light, for her, had flown forever. Caly the hitching post at the curb ir, front of the residence had been wathed in black by the citizens in order that it might conform to the ger eral scheme of mourning decoration that had been adopted.

Sad as yas the procession which bore the body to the court house where it lay in state this afternoon, it could not compare with the infinite sadness of that endless double line of broken hearted/people who streamed steadily through the dimly lighted corridors of the building from the time the coffin was opened until it was taken home to the sorrowing widow at nightfall. Perhaps it was the great change that had come upon the countenance which moved them more than the sight of the familiar features. The signs of discoloration which appeared upon the brow and cheeks yesterday at the state ceremonial in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington had deepened. The lips had become livid. All but two of the lights of the chandelier above the head were extinguished in order that the change might appear less noticeable, but every one who viewed the remains today remarked the darkened features and the ghastly lips. When the body was taken away thousands were still in line and the committee in charge of the arrangements was appealed to to allow a further opportunity to review the remains to corrow morning before they were taken to the church; but this had to be reluctantly denied to them and the casket may never be opeed again.

The funeral services will take place tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock p. m., at the First M. E. church of which the martyred president was a communicant, and trustee. They will be brief, by the expressed wish of the family.

President Roosevell his naval attache, Captain Cowles; secretary Root and Assistant Secretary Hill are at the spacious residence of Mrs. George D. Harter on Market street. A company of the Ohio militia guards the house. During the afternoon the president walked over to the McKinley residence to inquire after Mrs. McKinley. He was informed that she had stood the trip from Washington bravely, but in the opinion of the physician it would not be advisable for her to attempt to attend the services at the church tomorrow. She will therefore, remain quietly at her home with Dr. Rixey. The cabinet officers and the generals and admirals composing the guard of honor are at pivate residences. President Roosevelt and the official journey to Washington at 7 o'clock to. the court house. The strains of "Nearmorrow night. ARRIVAL OF FUNERAL TRAIN. Canton, O., September 18.—The sight were removed and the coffin lid taken was profoundly impressive as the funeral train drew into the little station and neighbors of the martyred president, while drawn up back of the stapresent arms. Immediately in the rear of the station, at the mouth of Tenth street; was Troop A, of Cleveland, mounted on their black chargers, keeping the entrance of the line of march clear. All about were the black symbols of mourning. The approach of the train was unheralded. No whistle was blown, no bell was rung. In absolute silence it rolled into the station. At the mere sight of the train, the people who had been waiting there for hours were greatly affected. Women sobbed and men wept. For a full minute after the train had stopped no one appeared. Judge Day and his committee moved slowly down the platform in front of the line of soldiers to the catafalque car, and waited.

Suddenly Abner McKinley, in deep black, his face tense and drawn appeared in the vestibule of the car next that conveying the remains and a moment later Dr. Rixey appeared, half carrying a frail and broken form. It was Mrs. McKinley, arrayed in the minutes gazing into the face of his distinguished kinsman. He then passed slowly down the hall, his head bowed, his lips twitching convulsively.

THE REMAINS AT CANTON deepest mourning. Beneath the heavy black veil she held her handkerchief to her eyes and her slight figure shook convulsively. Gently she was lifted THE DEAD PRESIDENT LYING IN STATE from the car and, supported by Dr. Rixey and Abner McKinley, was practically carried to a carriage in waiting at the east end of the station. The door of the carriage was closed and Mrs. McKinley was driven hurriedly to her forlorn home on north Market street, which she had left only two weeks ago, with her distinguished husband in the full vigor of manhood. Colonel Bingham, the president's aide, then gave directions for the removal of the casket from the car. The coffin was too large to be taken through the door and a broad window at the side was uncrewed and removed. While this was going on the floral pieces inside were carefully lifted out and placed upon the ground at the side of the

When all was ready the soldiers and sailors who had accompanied the remains all the way from Buffalo emerged from the car and took up their places. The soldiers trailed their arms at their sides and the sailors held their drawn cutlasses at their sides. Only the body bearers were bareheaded and

The casket was then lifted through the window and taken upon the brawney shoulders of the body bearers. Only the flag was there now. At sight of it, tears came unbidden and flowed freely.

The sad procession was then formed. It was headed by Colonel Bingham, in full uniform, a bow of crepe at the hilt of his sheathed sword.

Following, and immediately preceding the casket, was the local committee headed by Judge Day. Then came the soldiers and sailors. Slowly they moved down the paltform to the turn at the western end of the station where the president and cabinet stood. As they reached the head of this line a clear drawn bugle call sounded a silvery re-

Meantime Admiral Devey, Lieutenant General Miles ar I the other high officers of the array and navy who compose the guard of honor had moved around the east side of the station. They also entered carriages and took their place in the large procession that was now forming. All were attired in the full uniform of their ranks. They were fairly ablaze with gold lace. The shrillness of the bugles had given the first sign to the waiting multitude outside the station that the casket was approaching. Instantly the long lines of soldiers became rigid, standing at present arms. The black horses of the Cleveland troop, immediately facing the station, stood motionless, their riders with sabers lowered.

Slowly through the entrance came the stalwart soldiers and sailors with solemn tread bearing aloft the flag cover- with the improvement here, at the ed coffin of the man they loved so well. As it came into view a great sigh went up from the dense throng. After the first glance many of the men and women turned away to hide their emotions, which they could not restrain. When the casket had been consigned to the hearse, three mounted trumpeters gave signals for the melancholy process to move.

A moment later the sound of "Nearer My God, to Thee" came through the air, as the Grand Army veterans with their band swung into line and took up the march toward the court house.

troops came the hearse bearing its flag covered burden. The sight set a hush along the dense long lines of humanity stretching for a mile away to the court house. As the casket passed every head was bowed and every face evidenced the great personal grief which had come upon the community.

Immediately following the hearse came the carriage of President Roosevelt, who rode with his brotherin-law. Captain Cowlest of the navy. and Secretary Gage. The carriages of the other members of the cabinet and those who had been near to the late president in public life were lined out for half a mile. Back of them marched the national guard of Ohio, regiment after regiment, in platoon front formation and filling the broad thoroughfare from side to side.

As the head of the procession reached the great square of the city, the military ranks swung about, forming solid fronts facing the approaching hearse. As it was driven to the curb, the bearers stepped from their places alongside, and again took up their burden. Before the eyes of the vast concourse filling the square, the casket was tenderly raised and borne up the wide party will start back on the return stone steps leading to the entrance of

Word was quickly passed to President at Canton at exactly noon today. All Roosevelt and, followed by the members about the station and banked deep in of the cabinet, he stepped briskly into the surrounding streets were the friends | the hall. He glanced down as he reached the casket, halted for the space of a breath and went on. The members of the cabinet followed him one by one.

The members of President McKinley's old commandery of Knights Templar, Canton commandery No. 38, had asked the previlege of posting a sentry over the casket while it lay in state, and throughout the afternoon the guard was relieved every thirty minutes. Four detachments of militia were marched into the hall and drawn up in a line reaching from the entrance on the south to the bier. Another line stretched from the bier to the place where the hall diverged and down each side hall were other lines. Strict orders were given to see that there was no delay in the crowd as it passed out of the building. When everything was ready for the public to enter, Joseph Saxton, uncle of Mrs. McKinley, an aged man bowed deeply with the weight of years, entered from the east hall and passed up to the casket. He stood for fully two minutes gazing into the face of his dis-

A few final details were arranged and then the door was opened to the public. Two little girls were the first to approach the casket. Directly behind them was a tall, powerful man with a red moustache. As he gazed into the casket he caught his breath in a quick. sharp sob that was audible in every part of the hallway. He then gave way entirely and, weeping bitterly, passed

Many of the people as they looked upon the face of their dead friend whom they had seen but two weeks at the change that was there. The president's face was much thinner than they had expected it would be, and the sight that met their eyes shocked them greatly. The crowd was admitted four abreast, passing to the right and left of the casket by twos. No delay was permitted and fully 150 a minutes passed the bier.

All through the afternoon the crowd passed the catalfalque approximately at the rate of 100 every minute, making in the five hours in which the bodly lay in state, a total of 30,000 people, practically a number equal to the popula-tion of Canton. When the doors were closed at 6 o'clock, the line, four abreast, stretched fully one mile from the court house and people were still coming from the side streets to take their places in line. At 6 o'clock preparations began, for removing the body to the McKiwley residence on North Market street, several squares from the court nouse. Canton commandery of the Grand Army of the Republic acted as escort and there was no following. Arriving at the house, the escort formed in line presenting arms, while the coffin borne by the body bearers was the front parlor where it will remain until it is removed to the church tomorrow afternoon. Guards were posted around the house tonight and a num-ber of sentries wer placed in the front

Cotton Futures.

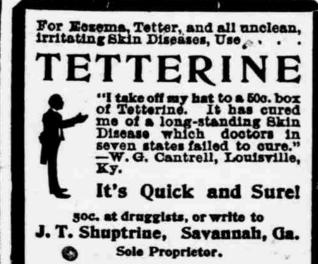

New York, September 18 .- The market for cotton futures opened steady, with prices 4 points lower to 2 points higher. The decline was in near months only and was in response to disappointing Liverpool cables. The late months stiffened upon very bad crop and weather news. Following the call the entire list advanced quite sharply to 5 points above last night's close, on a scare of shorts and very tine. active new buying.
