 Here shall the press the people's rights maintain, Unawed by influences and unbribed by gain.

A PRAYER.

O thou great source of truth and knowledge, we remember before thee the writers of books, the newspaper men, and all whose calling it is to gather and win new facts and to inform the people. Grant them a determined love for honest work and a staunch hatred for the making of lies, lest they pervert the judgment of our nation and teach us to call light darkness and darkness light. Suffer them not to drag the mind of our people with falsehood and prejudice. Since the sanity and wisdom of a nation are in their charge, may they count it shame to set the bitter passions of men on fire for the sake of gain.
 Grant them boldness to turn the unwelcome light on those who love the darkness because their deeds are evil. Put into their hands the shining sword of truth, and make them worthy sons of the champions of the people in the past who held truth to be a holy thing for which men should die. Make them realize that they have a public function in the commonwealth, and that their country may be saved by their courage and undone by their cowardice and silence.
 Grant them the heart of manhood to cast their mighty influence with the forces which make the people strong and free, and if they suffer loss, may they rejoice in that as proof to their own souls that they, too, have been friends of the common man and servants of the higher law.

Wellman is attracting much attention, but don't forget The Review's big contest. Locally the people are more concerned in it.

The papers of the large cities are all right if you want them, but it is your own home paper that advertises your churches, your numerous societies, sympathizes with you in your afflictions and rejoices with you in your prosperity. In short it is the local paper that mentions the thousand and one items in which you are interested during the year, and do not find in the papers of the large cities.

Speeding along through the beautiful farm sections of Virginia along the Southern Railway between Monroe and Alexandria on a beautiful morning in October, one cannot but be impressed with the grandeur of the scenery. The farmers are very prosperous and active; they are sowing seed for a wheat crop ere the corn stacks are removed from the field. Hands seem to be more plentiful in this section than in North Carolina.

Many a young woman who deserves a good man for a life companion has jumped in at a tender age and married a Johnny, and gone through life embarrassed the rest of her days. Johnny is alright as an ice cream boy and as a slot machine, with which to get chewing gum and bon bons, but when it comes to measuring up, in after years, with the men who do things, and whose wives make up the budget of satisfied ones, he is down and out before the race starts. Girls, if you must marry, and you must, if you would be happy, be sure and marry a man, or at least what is going to be a man.

BALTIMORE—A SOUTHERN CITY
[Editorial Correspondence]

The farthest north to be a Southern city is Baltimore, and the city is proud to be hailed as a Southern city for here the merchants and business houses of the South find their way to do their trading. It is built up of Southern people and from Southern patronage and of course the city should always be loyal to the southland. There's quite a vast difference between the old and the new Baltimore—before and after the great fire. This big loss for the time was Baltimore's big gain. More modern buildings, more business houses and more people followed in the wake of the conflagration of a few years ago. Comparing quiet old Washington to lively Baltimore—quite a vast difference. Here everything is push, while in the capital of the nation, things go a long in a quieter way. Just now there is a milk famine and you can only get enough to put in your coffee, due to dry weather, the farmers depending upon the pastures. Milk here sells for 25 cents a gallon, while in High Point we pay 40 cents, so you see things like this come cheaper even in a city.

WELLMAN, THE COLUMBUS OF THE AIR

People stand ready at all times to die for glory, for science, to surmount obstacles which seem impossible. The daring flight across the Alps ended in death, yet the aviator won undying honor. The attempted flight across the Atlantic by Walter Wellman has come to a tragic end, yet Wellman and his air ship America have set two world records—the distance covered and the time of remaining in the air, the big dirigible balloon having gone about 1,000 miles in 72 hours. Then, too, wireless telegraphy has won a victory. By the aid of wireless message Wellman was able to secure the aid of the British Mail Steamer Trent. All of the crew of the air ship America are safe having been picked up by the Trent in latitude 35.43, longitude 68.18. This brings to an end one of the most remarkable flights by air ship ever undertaken.

Occasionally one will hear the remark, "I wish I was out of this town," and then one feels like saying, "I wish you were," for a man who stands on the street corners chewing and spitting, telling obscene stories, cursing the town, finding fault with his grandmother because she was a woman, claiming that the merchants are a lot of thieves, that the doctors and newspaper men would skin a man to a finish, and a whole lot more, is a nuisance and an abomination. Any town pestered with one or more such people would be justified in exercising cowhide authority on the bosom of their pants. No one is obliged to live where he is not suited. If one hasn't an encouraging word for the business enterprises and institutions of his town, he should shut up and "go way back and sit down." If things don't suit you, move to where they will. A growler and a sorehead in a town is an enterprise-killer every time. It would pay a town to donate him $5 and tell him to move.

AN ADVERTISING TALK

This might properly be called the age of advertising. Advertising has helped to build some of the biggest successes in the country. It sells eastern goods in the west and western goods in the east; it has brought the North and South closer together commercially. It has done more to educate the people to values than any other one force.

The advertising columns of the weekly newspaper are the family market place.

Merchants tell us that many women shoppers bring the advertisement with them and make their purchases from the list advertised.

The advertising columns of The Review are the market place of 3000 families.

GABY, MANUEL AND COMPANY

Gaby would work for Manuel. That is the latest word that has come from the little Deslys, that Parisian danseuse who carried Manuel's heart around in her chateleine and who, incidentally, brushed him off the throne of Portugal.

Gaby is playing to capacity audiences in Vienna. Folk scoured by curiosity pay two or three prices to see the twinkling feet and the saint-wanton face of the toy-actress who enacted the feminine role in the little dramatization of "cherchez la femme," with the boy-king of the peninsular kingdom.

Also Gaby is heart-stricken that people should clothe her course with a commercial motive. "It is true," she admits, "that Manuel showered fortunes upon me, but it is cruel to say that I had anything to do with the loss of his throne. Why, it was a case of love at first sight between us both. All the trouble comes from the ladies of Lisbon, who were jealous of the attention he paid me. Oh! they are ugly, those ladies. But Manuel I still love him. I will go to him, when I conclude my engagement here. And then I will go to America, where the so kind theatrical managers pay such big prices and I will lay my fortune at his feet and he can regain his kingdom."

Beautiful! Parenthetically, would it not be better if both Gaby and Manuel should come to America, and enact their parts together before enchanted matinee girls and morbid dowagers at night performances?

Why, not a theatrical manager of America but would give ten years of his life to bill such an attraction!

"Gaby, Manuel and Company." How would that look as a vaudeville headliner?

Evidently the press agent has penetrated to the old world.

SENATOR GORE'S WONDERFUL SUCCESS AN INSPIRATION.

There is nothing comparable, within our limited knowledge, to the success of Senator Thomas P. Gore. Other blind men have wrought wonderfully in the realms of authorship, and even in sculpture, but as we recall, they were not deprived of sight before obtaining an education. Milton wrote "Paradise Lost" and Prescott his famous "Conquest of Peru," after being deprived of sight, but both had stored their minds with the treasures that come through the "Eye Gate" through long years of reading. The blind Senator from Oklahoma was left in physical darkness in his ninth year, just as the rudiments of his education were being instilled. Since then he has not looked upon the face of man nor upon the printed page, but at the age of thirty-nine he occupies with honor a seat in the highest deliberative body in the world and is recognized as one of the most brilliant and scholarly men in public life. It is literally true that he represents a State he has never seen. He has triumphed in a field in which a man needs two good eyes, for more is revealed in a glance than in many words. He is a wonderful orator, yet he misses the inspiration that comes from the upturned faces and kindling eyes of his audience. But he knows something of what Henry A. Wise said was "the sweetest incense that ever filled an orator's nostrils—the applause of an appreciative audience." He has a face as handsome as Apollo's, a voice as musical as the rippling brook, and a humor as genial as Zeb Vance's. He plays upon the emotions as did Mozart upon a cathedral organ. He possesses to a wonderful degree that indefinable something which Clay and Blaine and Bryan and other masters of men have wielded—personal magnetism. But we set out to point a moral. The first is that there is a place in politics for an honest man. Brilliance without honesty soon comes to grief. Our second point is that all things are possible to the boy who has the grit. Mind is superior to matter, and man to circumstances. We cannot clinch the point better than by quoting the following lines:

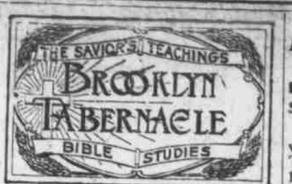

"Don't give up hoping when the ship goes down.
 Grab a spar or something—just refuse to drown,
 Don't think you are dying just because you are hit,
 Smile in the face of danger, and hang to your grit.
 'Folks die too easy—they sort of fade away,
 Make a little error and give up in dismay.
 Kind of man that's needed is the man of ready wit,
 To laugh at pain and trouble and keep up his grit.

Ten thousand men and women look in the advertising columns of The Review every week for news and other information—men and women who are willing to pay for good merchandise and good service. Is this little bit of information not enough to arouse you sufficiently to look into this matter as a purely business proposition? Will you not give us a call and let us explain more about it?

WILT THOU THAT WE COMMAND FIRE?

Luke 9:51-56—October 23
 "And it came to pass, when the days were well-nigh come, that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem and sent messengers before his face."

THIS week's study relates an incident which occurred on the occasion of our Lord's journey from Galilee to Jerusalem just before his crucifixion. He knew that his hour was come; that his sacrificial life of three and a half years should be accomplished. The Great Teacher was full of courage. "But of the people there were none with him in the sense of sympathetic appreciation of the conditions. True, he had informed the twelve Apostles respecting the consummation of his work and its nearness, but they had been slow to believe all the things written in the Law and the prophecies concerning him. Their minds naturally grasped the glorious things spoken of the Messiah. They were so busy thinking of his glorious Kingdom, and of their glorious association with him in that Kingdom, that they failed to note the other prophecies which, with equal distinctness, foretold his sufferings and ignominy. Similarly, they overlooked the Master's own words concerning his death. They thought of him as speaking in some figurative, hyperbolic manner. And Peter even attempted to rebuke him, saying, "Be this far from thee, Lord; it shall not happen unto thee."

Refused by the Samaritans
 Another account intimates that James and John visited the Samaritan city for the purchase of bread and supplies for the party. The Samaritans recognized them and inquired, would the Great Teacher recognize the Samaritans and heal their sickness or would he treat them as Jews in general treating them unkindly? They believed the latter. The Apostles frankly told them that the Great Teacher was sent only to the Jewish nation and would not stop to heal their sick ones, because he was "not sent save to the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

Naturally enough the Samaritans resented this and were angry. They said, Very well, Buy bread from the people whom you instruct and whose sick you heal.
 St. John and St. James were greatly incensed at this. Was not Jesus the greatest Teacher? Was he not the Messiah? Had he not, as such, the right to determine the will of God respecting who should and who should not receive his benefactions? With this answer they came to Jesus and, relating the circumstances, asked, "Wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven to destroy these men and their city?"

What Spirit Are Ye Of?
 We listen with keen interest for the Master's response. As we once viewed the matter of the Divine program it would have seemed right for the Great Teacher to say to the Apostles, Never mind, my dear Disciples; wait just a little while and all those Samaritans will die and my Heavenly Father will deliver them over to the devils for an eternity of torture. In comparison with eternal torture that which you purpose in the way of burning up their city and incidentally burning them for a few minutes would be as nothing. I appreciate, my dear disciples, your spirit, that it is God-like; that you desire to do all the roasting and burning within your power, and I commend you for it. Continue to this copy your God and to cause suffering to as many as possible of your fellow-creatures who do not think exactly as you do.

Was this the answer of the Great Teacher? Thank God, No! His teaching was the very reverse—sympathetic, loving, kind. And he had the Father's Spirit and understood it and followed it perfectly. In answer to their query, we read, "Jesus turned and rebuked them" and said, "Ye know not what spirit ye are of: The Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them!"

"A Savior and a Great One"
 The language spoken in Palestine in Jesus' day was the Syriac. One of the Great-Teacher's titles is The Savior. And this, in the Syriac language, signifies, "The Life-Giver." The whole world was damned enough before Jesus came. He came not to damn (condemn) them more, but that they through him might have life (John x, 10; ill. 17).

Life! Did they not have life? No. All human life was forfeited through father Adam's disobedience. All mankind are dying as a result. A Life-Giver, a Savior from death (and not from eternal torment), was what was needed.

The first work of the Savior is the redemptive work of Calvary. His second work is the selection of his Church to be his joint-heirs in the Kingdom. His third work will be the saving of Adam and all his race from sin and death—from all the mental, moral and physical degradation which came through father Adam's disobedience.

and through his children being born in sin and shapen in iniquity and in sin conceived by the mothers.

The saving of the Church is a great work! How faithful we should be if we have heard, if our eyes have seen, if our hearts have tasted of the grace of God in this wonderful privilege of becoming members of the Bride of Christ. However, we cannot suppose that the saving of merely a handful of select ones is the purpose of God in the creation of the world and in the redeeming of the world. On the contrary, this elect "Little Flock" is spoken of as a "first-fruits unto God of his creatures" (James 1, 18; Revelation xiv, 4). This implies an after-fruitage much more numerous. While God does not propose to save anyone out of death and to life eternal contrary to the individual will, he does propose that every creature lost in Adam and redeemed by Jesus shall be brought to a clear knowledge of the Truth, that they may be saved. He does propose that only the willingly obdurate shall be lost; and their loss will be the loss of life—as the Apostle declares, "everlasting destruction."
