Miss Charlotte Smith is spending the day in Charlotte.

Mrs. Hall Hostess
Last evening Mrs. G. W. Hall was hostess to the Hickory Music Club with a large attendance of the members. Roll call was answered with quotations on "music." Miss Margaret McComb read a history of the life of John Neell Paine, the composer of the evening. Miss Essie Seagle read a paper on the fortunes made on popular songs, giving as an illustration the composer of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Miss Lillie Bell Hallman played Nocturne, Opera 45, and Mrs. J. L. Murphy sang the matin song. Wood notes from in the Country was rendered by Mrs. G. N. Hutton, and Mrs. E. A. Smith concluded this delightful program with Beneath the Starry Arch. Delicious refreshments were served before adjournment to meet with Mrs. J. H. Hatcher.

That Chicago Riot
Houston Post.
Mr. Wilson's visit to Chicago furnished the occasion for a striking demonstration of one of the drawbacks to women's active participation in politics.

Some of the women on the street—they were political women—carried banners that others thought were disrespectful to the president, and a mob in the crowded thoroughfare charged the group and destroyed the banners and placards and otherwise handled the women roughly.

Of course, the men who engaged in this ungalant enterprise were hoodlums, but there were women among the attackers, too, and the dispatches say it was a near-riot.

While it is disagreeable to think that men or women either could participate in such discreditable disorder, political excitement often results in rioting, especially in the larger cities of the country, where the restraints that are inviolable in lesser communities do not operate.

And yet, women must expect to encounter such lack of consideration when they become active in political campaigns because it is unfortunately true that all men are not gentlemen and the respect for the gentler sex which is always the mark of a gentleman can not be invariably expected in the motley throngs of a city's streets.

It is one reason why so many good men look with regret upon the suffrage movement. Their regard for womanhood is so high that they can not contemplate with equanimity their wives, mothers, sisters and daughters being subjected to rough treatment by street mobs.

It is becoming the thing to sneer at what men say about the "pedestal" which woman occupies in the regard and respect of true men, but there is such a pedestal and it will be a sad day for civilization when from any cause whatever it crumbles.

Politics is not a gentle activity by any means. We have seen that even in Texas, although we do not believe that the scene enacted in Chicago could have taken place anywhere in this state, men become excited and intolerant. At times friends become so estranged that they hate each other, and all because of political differences.

It is not strange that men—many of them, at least—can not think of the women becoming similarly embittered without feeling that it would be better for politics to remain an arena for masculine disputation.

Apparently, the suffrage movement under way is not to be halted until it triumphs completely, and when it does the women themselves will ultimately come to see their anticipations disappointed. The country has recently had opportunity to observe that there are spheres of activity which women can not afford to inhabit.

Some of them have been beaten and even killed in strike demonstrations, and some of them have also participated in such disorder in a way to invite rough treatment. We shall see much more of this kind of things as the so-called "emancipation" of woman proceeds to its fruition."

PRICE OF COTTON IN '68; QUOTATIONS FROM OLD PAPER

The Landmark has received abundant testimony to fix the price of cotton at figures exceeding the present price for several years after the Civil war. Mr. T. M. Pifer of Statesville furnishes a copy of the New York Day-Book, a weekly paper published in New York and bearing date of July 18, 1868. On that date the Day-Book quoted "Ordinary" cotton, "upland and Florida," at 27 1-2 cents; Mobile 27 3-4. New Orleans 28, Texas 28 3-4. "Good ordinary" was quoted, under the headings named, at 29, 29 1-4, 29 1-2 and 29 3-4 respectively. Low middlings 30 1-2, 30 3-4, 31 and 32 3-4. "Ordinary" has now disappeared in the matter of cotton grades.

This Day-Book was a Democratic paper and it was boosting strong for Horatio Seymour of New York and Frank P. Blair of Missouri, who had just been named as the Democratic candidate for president and vice-president. The notification ceremonies at Tammany Hall are described as "one of the grandest of the grand scenes of this continent since its discovery by Christopher Columbus." Gen. Grant, who was the Republican candidate for president, was described as "a stolid, ignorant, matter-of-fact soldier." The paper has many

CORN SHUCKINGS PASSING; CANDY INSTEAD OF BOOZE

Interesting things which the Landmark hopes to draw on when time and space permit. —Statesville Landmark.

"Around Town" in Newton Enterprise.

Among autumnal delights corn shuckings formerly held a high place in the life of the glorious countryside, and in the far days there was always plenty of corn whiskey or applejack with a sumptuous midnight supper to top the whole thing off. And often there was a dance with some old-time fiddler juggling with the bow in such a way as to make the feet move around. Now and then, to be sure, some fellow stuck a knife into some other fellow, or pulled a gun. It was all in the night's work. But these things have almost passed. I heard a farmer say this week that corn shuckings had ceased to be worth the trouble. "Last year there were three tables full of women and children who never shucked an ear," he said; "but they eat—good gosh!" With ham climbing the phone poles, chicken meat roosting on the lightning rods and biscuits and cake tangoing with the bullbats, it is no time for entertaining non-producers at a corn shucking where every shuck
