MARRIED AGAIN AFTER 33 YEARS SEPARATION

Couple Who Were Divorced Came Together by Efforts of Son After Each Had Married Again.

"It isn't as if it was a stranger," said Mrs. Delilah Williams Dobbs Butler yesterday, as, at sixty-four, she was again married to the man to whom she was married at nineteen. She and her husband had been separated thirty-three years since she got a divorce from him after twelve years of life together, and for fifteen years she has been Mrs. Butler.

After Mrs. Dobbs had become Mrs. Butler Mr. Dobbs married the correspondent in her action for divorce. Both partners in the second marriage have died. A reconciliation was brought about through the son of the couple, Wilbur Dobbs, forty years old, an actor.

"How it did seem different to be married this time than before?" said Mrs. Dobbs last night, blushing beneath her gray curls in answer to a question. "Well, I was a lot more nervous this time. My hand shook so I had to hang on to the minister, and I guess I held Mr. Dobbs' hand longer than I was supposed to."

"Sixty-four is pretty old to get married, isn't it? But it isn't as if it was a stranger. Both of us know just whom we are getting."

Six years ago Mr. Butler died, and soon afterward Mr. Dobbs was left a widower. Wilbur, the son, while travelling in the west, met his father and told him of his wife's affairs.

Didn't Mind People Hearing. Mr. Dobbs vowed he would come back to New York to see her. He did, and, as Mrs. Dobbs says, "he kept calling, off and on," and after a second courtship of three years they were remarried yesterday at the home of Mrs. Lina Kimball, No. 96 Palmetto street, Brooklyn. Mrs. Kimball, sixty-seven years old, was the matron of honor. Her husband, who also was in the bridal party, is seventy.

"When we went to the Marriage License Bureau and I showed them my divorce papers so I could get married again," said Mrs. Dobbs, blushing again. "I said to Mr. Dobbs that the newspapers would hear, some way, of us old folks being married again. And he said, 'Do you care?' and I said, 'Well, I guess I shouldn't care about people hearing about it, if you don't.' So then he had to say he didn't care either."

"The papers didn't all get it right. They said we had been separated only twenty-seven years. It is thirty-three. That's a long time, isn't it? But then, when you get married again you know each other and yet you don't, so it's all right."

Malaria.

There are many cases of malaria now with various manifestations. Some cases have bronchitis or dysentery, some have chills and high fever, some have continued high fever and others very vague indefinite symptoms. Many children are sick of malaria.

REASON—Stagnant water, following the rains and acted upon by the summer heat, has bred thousands of mosquitoes. These mosquitoes are carriers of the germ. They prefer to bite the babies, with tender skin and delicious blood.

REMEDY—Drain all stagnant water, apply kerosene oil to the standing water every ten days. Prevent the breeding of mosquitoes by good drainage and kerosene oil. Screen out and kill out all the mosquitoes in sight. You can fumigate them out of the house with formaldehyde gas.—H. D. Stewart.

People who think before they speak seldom say much.

A strong will is firmness; a strong won't is obstinacy.

Correspondence of The Journal.

Rev. R. H. Kennington delivered an excellent address at the Methodist church Tuesday night, which was highly enjoyed by all present. His subject was Sunday school work.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Trull and Master Oscar Trull visited relatives in Charlotte Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Jim Outen and family of Prospect visited at Mr. Lon Helms' Sunday night and took in the night service at the union meeting.

Miss Blanche Starnes of Kershaw visited Miss Lola Starnes last week. Mr. Tom Garland of the Smyrna neighborhood visited relatives here this week.

Mrs. George Eagler and Mrs. Andrew Bowers visited Mrs. Lon Forbis Wednesday of last week.

Mrs. John Williams and children of Charlotte are visiting Mrs. Williams' sister, Mrs. Coyte Trull.

There will be a box supper at the residence of Mr. A. C. Hilton on E. Brown street Saturday night, Aug. 5. Ice cream and other refreshments will be served. Proceeds will go for the benefit of the Methodist church. The public is cordially invited.

Say, Joy, are you rid of those mosquitoes yet? If you are, please pass the remedy up this way, for I think they have swarmed here and we certainly would appreciate a remedy that would exterminate the little critters.

Mrs. Henry McCoy of Wingate visited her sister, Mrs. H. A. Privett, last week.

Mrs. Adell Ellis of Gaffney visited Miss Sallie Newsome last Sunday.

Mr. Reece Winchester spent a few days in Norfolk last week.

Miss Ada Deese of Gastonia is visiting Miss Vigar McGinnis.

Mr. Artie Womack of Mt. Gilead visited in our community Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. R. L. Dry of Mt. Ulla is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Helms.

There will be preaching Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at North Monroe M. E. church by the pastor. The text of the morning is found in Matthew 6: 23. Everybody welcome.—S. M.

James Whitcomb Riley, Poet of Country Life.

Progressive Farmer. James Whitcomb Riley, who died in Indiana the other day, was born and bred one of the plain country people of the Middle West, and no other poet has probably so beautifully voiced the joys and sorrows of the folks he loved. The poem, "The Walton's Prayer," which we are printing on the next page, expresses in rarely beautiful language one of the fundamental virtues of our country people—love of home, of wife, and little ones:—

"The cricket's call and the wee cot, Dear Lord of all, deny me not!"

There seems almost a tragedy in the fact that the poet whose heart went out so warmly to all children had himself no child. The idea occurs in touching language in his poem, "Bereaved":—

"Let me come in where you sit weeping—aye, Let me, who have not any child to die, Weep with you for the little one whose love I have known nothing of. "The little arms that slowly, slowly loosed Their pressure round your neck; the hands you used To kiss—such arms—such hands I never knew. "May I not weep with you? "Fain would I be of service—say something, Between the tears that would be comforting— But ah! so sadder than yourselves am I. Who have no child to die."

Riley loved the beauty of nature, but even more he loved the beauty of neighborliness, friendship, and love of fellows in the human heart. While he rejoiced as Wordsworth might in the sheer natural loveliness of "The Old Swimmin' Hole," for example, he thought first of the good times the boys had there and second only of the limpid depths of the water, the flickering light and shade on its surface, or the nodding of the blue-blossomed pickerel-weed, where the stream bubbled away over the pebbles. The neighborliness of country people was what most endeared them to the warm-hearted Hoosier poet, as he reminds us in "Griggsby's Station," a poem in which the farmer has gotten rich and moved to town: "And right here in earshot of at least a thousand people, And none that neighbors with us or we want to go and see; Let's go avistin' back to Griggsby's Station—

Back where the latchstring's a-hang from the door, And ever' neighbor round the place is dear as a relation— Back where we used to be so happy and so pore!"

III Riley was one of the country's great men who, in spite of his illness, responded promptly to our request when we asked him to send a little message of cheer and recognition to our Southern farm boys. His letter, as published in our issue of January 29, 1916, is worth reprinting here—and it will be noted that in the last two lines he broke into characteristic verse which, so far as we know, was Riley's special message for the boys who read our paper. Here is his letter: "To the Boys on Southern Farms: "The good editor, Mr. Poe, fancies some word from me, in honor of the fine record the farm boys of the South are making, would be welcome to you, and that you would find interest in my notion of the qualities which will help you win success as men or farmers. May I suggest that cheer and love and faith, coupled with a resolute jaw and a liking for good poetry will help you mightily on your way. Simply do your honest best, God, with joy, will do the rest. "Loyalty and confidently, "James Whitcomb Riley."

Stegall-Snyder

Marshallville Home. A beautiful wedding was solemnized at the home of the officiating magistrate Esq. W. H. Braswell in North Marshallville township, on last Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, when Miss Annie Stegall became the bride of Mr. James W. Snyder. There was quite a large crowd in attendance, as it was the Esq's first effort in the knot tying business. The bride is a charming young lady of the Wingate vicinity and is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Stegall. The groom is an industrious and prosperous farmer of New Salem township and is possessed of many business qualifications, and enjoys the esteem and confidence of all who know him. The couple went on a short automobile tour, and will be at home to their many friends after August 5th.

Back where the latchstring's a-hang from the door, And ever' neighbor round the place is dear as a relation— Back where we used to be so happy and so pore!"

News From Rock Rest.

Correspondence of The Journal.

The people of our community are enjoying good health at present and some of our young people are taking advantage of the free treatment for typhoid fever.

After spending several weeks with her sister, Mrs. J. P. Griffin, Miss Jessie Funderburk returned to her home in Charlotte.

Mrs. Vann Williams returned to her home last Monday after spending a few days with her father, Capt. C. J. Delinger, who has been very sick. Miss Brownie Gathings of Charlotte spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Griffin. Misses Annie and Etta Williams returned home Tuesday from a visit to their uncle, Mr. Lex Davis in Charlotte, and Rev. S. W. Bennett in Concord.

Miss Atha attended the 25th wedding anniversary of Rev. S. W. Bennett. The silver wedding presents were numerous and beautiful. Several preachers and quite a number of friends and relatives attended. Fortunately, we haven't heard of any one getting sick who partook of the different courses which were served from four to eight o'clock.

Rev. Mr. Taylor of the Marshallville circuit is holding a meeting at Center this week.

Quite a number of our people attended services at the Union meeting at Monroe and were highly pleased with both preacher and singer.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Williams of Sanford are visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity.

We will announce the time for the reunion of the Williams family to be held here at the old home place when we hear from brother James H. Williams of Leesburg, Fla., who is expected to be in the county some time soon. Whether we have an all-day reunion or afternoon, the members of the family and connection are cordially invited to attend.

We hope to have the sermon at Rock Rest some time in the near future by Rev. C. J. Black, which was called in on account of the burial services of our dearly beloved Belle Stephenson. This was one of the saddest and one of the most beautiful services that we have ever attended. To the bereaved husband, Mr. Joe F. Stephenson, little Hester, and the entire family, we extend our sympathy.—Farmer.

The temporary bridge over the Catawba at Mt. Holly will be used for the first time this afternoon. It will be used both by the Seaboard and the Interurban.

Love and philosophy are sworn enemies.
