

For the Ohio Organ.

Mr. Editor:—As the subject of temperance is now agitated in most, if not all parts of the State, and as information in regard to the progress of this great cause is sought for and stimulates to action on the part of its friends, therefore a word or two, from the land and once loved home of the Wyandots, may be read with pleasure.

It has been but a few years since the subject would bear investigation in this vicinity at all, as the public mind was not prepared to suffer agitation on anything that affected their "spiritual liberty." A great change, by gradual agitation, has finally been produced, and on Sabbath last we had one of the best meetings of the kind ever held in this vicinity. Many have already become convinced of the necessity of a prohibitory law.

The speakers on this occasion were A. Lanbach, of the "Seneca Whig," and J. C. Lee, Esq., both of Tiffin. These men are in the field, ready at every point to meet and battle the enemy, whether in the form of man or liquid poison. Beebe himself, with all his cohorts, is not sufficient to answer their arguments. Mr. Lanbach, who led the way, did good work in showing the effect of the liquid poison upon the moral condition of our country—showing its cost in life, happiness, intelligence, &c., as well as in money. Mr. Lee followed, showing the constitutional right to enact prohibitory laws, as well as to deny to intoxicating drinks that property which will secure to them protection by law, thereby making it a public nuisance—to be treated as such by the tribunals of our country. A good and lasting impression has been the result of this meeting. Thus moves the ball in the land where once the tall Seneca and Wyandot chiefs held converse in the then unbroken wilderness, far from this curse to society. But with the white man came this curse of liquid poison, threatening ruin and destruction wherever it went, until, becoming alarmed, our tall white chiefs have buckled on their armor and gone forth to the conflict, fully determined to do their whole duty. The darkest clouds are now past, and we behold the sun of temperance and of hope rising in the East, while his healing beams are fast spreading over the valleys, towards the mountains of the West; and man, in his created power, is proclaiming the glad tidings to millions of God's intelligent creatures who have longed to see the day when they could say in reference to this subject, "Lord, now lettest thou, thy servant, depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

With such men as Lanbach and Lee, the cause of temperance must be onward. They fear no evil, shrink from no danger, thrust truth-like daggers at the head of the man who still persists in murdering his fellow-men, and then look to a grateful people for their reward. May there be many such men in the State, and may the time soon come when reason will again fully occupy her throne, and disseminate truth, righteousness, temperance and mercy among all people.

WYANDOT.
SYCAMORE, O., Sep. 10th, 1853.

The opposition of some editors to the present temperance movements may easily be accounted for. They are fed on still-slops until they can only write still-slop editorials. The effects of the slop are singular—the editor who takes it can smell nothing disagreeable about a still-house, can see no misery caused by drinking, and can hear nothing to condemn but Maine Law fanaticism!—Wonderful thing that still-slop!—Brookville American.

The Drunkard's Home.

BY E. D. HOWARD.

AIR—Old Folks at Home.

Dark fall the shades of evening dreary,
Sad, and am I,
Slow drag the cheerless hours away,
Coldly the storm sweeps by,
Hopeless and fearful of to-morrow,
Weeping and tears,
I'm watching in my home of sorrow,
Grieving o'er vanished years,
Oh! my home of joy and gladness,
Thou art lost to me!
Now darkened with distress and sadness,
Weeping, I mourn for thee!

Once happy was our sunny dwelling,
William was true;
Now anguish in my heart is swelling,
Deep as the joy I knew;
He yielded to the fell temptation,
Friends led him on;
Till, resting from his lofty station,
Manhood and truth are gone.
Oh! my home of joy and gladness,
Thou art lost to me!
Now darkened with distress and sadness,
Weeping, I mourn for thee!

Once happy were my children's voices,
Unhushed by fear;
Gone now the music that rejoices,
Famine and grief are here!
Once tender were the words of greeting,
When my William came;
Now fearfully my heart is beating,
Scared at the once loved name.
Oh! my home of joy and gladness,
Thou art lost to me!
Now darkened with distress and sadness,
Weeping, I mourn for thee!

One hope within my heart is glowing,
One rising star,
One strain, as of a bugle blowing,
Tells of a glorious war.
First came its blessed note of gladness
Floating from Maine!
Trembling, I turn from thoughts of sadness—
Home may be bright again!
Oh! the hope new-born and glorious,
May its promise be
Crowned with the blessed law victorious!
Giving the old home to me!

That's the Man for Me.

A short time ago when Mr. Lewis spoke at Georgetown, Brown county, a goggerly keeper who had a heart larger than common goggerly keepers, by listening to Lewis became so excited that he could neither eat nor sleep for some two or three days; and finally concluded to roll his liquor out into the street, and knock his barrels to pieces; which he did in sight of all the rummies in the town. His old customers came round and wished to drink the "critter" that was running to waste, but he would not let them touch it, and told them that he was "going to live like a white man" the remainder of his days.—*Wilmington, (O.)
