The Two Angels.
 God called the nearest angels who dwelt with him above:
 The tenderest one was Pity, the dearest one was Love.
 "Arise," he said, "my angels! a wall of woe and sin
 Stands through the gates of heaven and siddens all within.
 "My harp takes up the mournful strain that from a lost world swells,
 The smoke of torments clouds the light and blights the asphodels."
 "Fly downward to the under world, and on its souls of pain
 Let Love drop smiles like sunshine, and Pity tears like rain!"
 Two faces bowed before the Throne veiled in their golden hair,
 Four white wings leavened swiftly down the dark abyss of air.
 The way was strange, the flight was long; at last the angels came
 Where swung the feet and nether world, red-wrapped in a single flame.
 There Pity, shuddering, wept; but Love, with faith too strong to fear, Took heart from God's almightiness and smiled a smile of cheer.
 And lo! that fear of Pity quenched the flame
 whereon it fell,
 And with the sunshine of that smile, hope entered into hell.
 Two unveiled faces full of joy looked upward to the Throne,
 Four white wings folded at the feet of Him who sat thereon!
 And deeper than the sound of seas, more soft than falling flake,
 Amidst the hush of wings and song the Voice
 Eternal spake:
 "Welcome, my angels! ye have brought a holier
 joy to heaven:
 Henceforth its sweetest song shall be the song of
 "in forgiven!"

Justice in Tennessee.
 From the N. Y. Herald.
 A Nashville negro shot a policeman dead. The negro was arrested and imprisoned. The people assembled and in their anger broke open the jail and took the negro to the bridge to hang him. A rope was put around his neck and the poor wretch suspended from the bridge. But the rope broke, the negro fell over ninety feet upon the rocks beneath and rolled into the waters. Two shots were fired at him and his body sank. We do not remember to have read for a long time of an act more cowardly and brutal than this killing. The negro was in custody. There was no chance, no pretext that he would escape. The laws of Tennessee are clear and supreme, and in a city like Nashville—a southern city controlled by the whites—there was no fear that an indulgent public opinion would arrest the operation of the law. But the man was a negro, and the old brutal feeling of the whites toward the negro was allowed to bring dishonor upon justice in Tennessee and upon the American name.
 Says a floating item: "Every species of snake may be permanently driven away by planting geraniums." Would it be deemed impertinent to suggest that the editor of the Courier-Journal plant a few geraniums in his boots?—St. Louis Republican.

 The North Platte (Neb.) Republican produces a map of the Black Hills which conclusively proves that North Platte is the only eligible starting point for people bound to the gold fields. The map was made by some one in white pantaloons sitting first on a puddle of printing ink and then on the paper. It is very faithful.
 A colored man, while digging for roots lately, in Fayette county, Kentucky, unearthed about one bushel of half dollars. Their appearance, except badly tarnished, was good, and they bore date of 1825.
