

HANCOCK AND ENGLISH.

These are the Names that Constitute the Democratic Ticket for President and Vice President.

The Convention Concludes its Labors and Adjourns at 3:30 this Afternoon.

POLITICAL.

The Democratic National Convention—The Nomination of Candidates for President and Vice President.

Cincinnati, June 24.—Indications are that Hancock will be nominated early today.

The southern view is voiced by Gov. Marks of Tennessee. He said, "I think Hancock is the strongest man who can be nominated."

The Hancock men claim their favorite will receive 331 votes on the first ballot.

Chairman Stevenson stepped the convention to order at 10:30, and Rev. Chas. Taylor of Covington, Kentucky, invoked the Divine blessing.

Peckham, of New York, rose to make a statement on behalf of the state of New York. That delegation heard with great sensibility the votes in convention yesterday for the honored statesman of New York, S. J. Tilden.

Thomas, of Kentucky, offered a resolution. At this point a motion was put and lost, to read Tilden's letter.

The resolution of Thomas declares it unconstitutional to deprive any citizen of the right of suffrage.

Roll call was then proceeded with and it resulted as follows: Alabama, at the opening of the second ballot, cast eleven votes for Hancock.

When Illinois was reached the vote came for Hancock, forty-two votes. Wild enthusiasm followed the announcement, as yesterday she had voted solid for Morrison.

Wisconsin got permission to change her vote and cast twenty votes for Hancock. Here there was another wild scene of excitement.

When Ohio was called, Long said the delegation asked leave to retire for consultation, and the state was passed.

When Ohio was called again, Mr. Hill said the most of the delegation was absent and the chairmen were instructed to cast 300,000 democrats of Ohio for Hancock.

When Pennsylvania was called, she cast her vote and cast twenty votes for Hancock. Here there was another wild scene of excitement.

When New York was called, she cast her vote and cast twenty votes for Hancock. Here there was another wild scene of excitement.

When South Carolina was called, she cast her vote and cast twenty votes for Hancock. Here there was another wild scene of excitement.

When so much of the regular report was received, it was interrupted by electrical storms in eastern Iowa and Illinois. Bulletins received in the forenoon announced the nomination on the second ballot of Gen. Hancock, of Pennsylvania, for president, and Mr. English, of Indiana, for vice-president.

Stealing a Golden Fleece Collar. Milan June 24.—During the examination of Gen. Boet, charged with the theft of Don Carlos' golden fleece collar, he declared that at a meeting in Paris he the Duke de Castora, Gen. Claret, Francis the second of Naples, and Don Carlos, the last named stated that having inherited from the Duke of Mosena a collar of golden fleece which was worth a million francs, he had sold it and divided the profits to the furtherance of the Napoleon cause.

THAT MAN IN THE GALLERY. Free Lance, June 12. It will be remembered that in his speech nominating Sherman at the convention, Gen. Garfield, after delivering an appropriate eulogy upon that candidate, said, "Who do you want? Whereupon a voice in the gallery shouted 'Gar-

That unknown man called upon the general on Tuesday afternoon, just as the future president was washing his hands to prepare for a general shake. He was a one-armed soldier, and rather sedate in his make-up.

"I am at your service, my good friend," said the general, "but no later from you."

"Did you hear dot man shout out, m'de gallery 'Garfield' when you say 'Was haben sie?'"

"Ah yes, I remember it well. Do you mean to tell me—Garfield, my identical name?"

"My friend, I shall never forget as long as I live. Let me hear from you any time."

"And the man went away happy. Passing through the rotunda on his way to the carriage, the general felt a thundering slap on his back, midway between his shoulders and hips, accompanied with a familiar, "Hillo, old Gar."

"Hold on, old fellow," said the little chap; I want to have just a word with you on my own hook. Didn't you hear that fellow up in the gallery when you made your Sherman speech shout 'Gar-

"I did; I did. Do you mean to say—" "Guess I fixed you that time, old man. I knew it was bound to go that way. Now, I consider I am the man who saved the republican party."

"My dear, good little fellow," said Garfield, "you deserve the thanks of the nation. I shall give you a new club. Come down and see me in Ohio, and I'll tell you all about the next cabinet. Perhaps you'll be in it."

Just as the general was boarding the train, a bottle-nosed politician from the seventh ward plucked him by the coat-tail and shrieked, "General, General, one word—only one word."

"What is it, my man?" "Do you remember when you made your speech in the convention nominating Sherman that a man up in the gallery shouted 'Garfield?'"

"D—that man in the gallery."
