A Russian Doll. The Russian exhibit in the Woman's building at the World's fair contained a great variety of toys, and especially dolls. These dolls represented not only babies, but many of them were diminutive copies of men and women in the various walks of Russian life. One of the most interesting was a type of the present woman of north Russia. It was dressed in a long white linen overgarment that seemed to be a cross between an ulster and a Mother Hubbard. This was bordered with a narrow linen braid in which magenta and bright yellow were mingled. The dress was of dark cotton, in which there was much red. A long apron elaborately embroidered in gay colors covered the front of it. A bright cotton kerchief was tied around the head, and from the waist, suspended by a red cord, hung a little basket. The sandals on the small feet were of woven bark fibers tied in place by strings.

How an Elephant Fights. The elephant, although a very large animal, is not a good fighter. A lion can jump upon his back and tear off his leg, loose hide in a way which will make the elephant roar with agony, and the tiger and the panther can do the same to him. Even the kangaroo, whose front legs are mere paws, has the advantage of the elephant, for it can jump underneath him and scratch vigorously with its two powerful hind legs, while its forepaws dig deeply into his sensitive trunk. So the elephant in warfare has to resort to strategy. One of his tricks is to stand very still until the lion or the tiger, as the case may be, has jumped upon his back, and then, before there has been time to do much damage, Mr. Elephant lies down and rolls over, crushing his enemy.

There is a pretty story told by an African explorer of how an elephant killed a whole family of lions by backing with them, one by one, into deep water, until they were so far in the stream that they could not swim to the shore. The elephant, who was a cunning fellow, would dip very low into the water, and the lions would have to give up their grip upon his back. Elephants are very intelligent fellows, and good hearted, too, if not provoked. -New York Ledger.

Can Animals Blush? It is hard to tell whether animals blush, for their faces are covered so thickly with fur or hair or feathers that we do not know what may be going on beneath the hide or skin. Were they as barefaced as man is, it is more than likely we should see them blush, especially the more bashful sort and those with some sense of shame.

It is the case that the faces of vultures flush, and several of the monkeys become purple with rage, which may be considered as a kind of blushing. This may be proved any day in any zoo, where the monkeys seem to fly into a passion on the smallest provocation. -New York Journal.

An Infantile Orchestra Leader. Little Ranol Koczalski, the pianoforte "prodigy," whose recitals created so much interest in London last season, has now come out in Leipzig as a concert director. The boy, who is said to be only 9 years of age, was rather too small in stature for the musicians to see his beat, so they put the little fellow on a chair, and he seemed to have secured a very good performance. -London News.

The Tag of War. The Little Girl With a Company Face. Once on a time in a far away place lived a queer little girl with a company face. And no one outside of the family knew of her everyday face or supposed she had two. The change she could make with wondrous celerity. For practice had lent her surprising dexterity. But at last it chanced on an unlucky day, or lucky perhaps I would much better say, that her diurnal dismay and complete consternation. She failed to effect the desired transformation. And a caller, her teacher, Miss Agatha Mason, surprised her with half of her company face on. And half of her everyday face peeping out. Showing one grimy tear track and half of a point.

Contracting something to her eyesight. That alone on her company side all the while. The caller no sooner had hurried away than up to her room the child flew in dismay. And after a night spent in solemn reflection on the folly of features that can't bear inspection. She came down to breakfast and walked to her place. Calm, sweet and serene, with her company face. Thereforward she wore it, day out and day in. Till you really might think 'twould be worn very thin. But, strange to relate, it grew more bright and gay. And her relatives think 'twas a red letter day. When the greatly astonished Miss Agatha Mason surprised her with half of her company face on. -St. Nicholas.

FAMOUS SILVER SPIND.

Lost by an Express Company and Valued by the Owners at $15,000. Thomas J. Bradley and wife, Mary E. Bradley, want $15,000 of the American Express company. Their petition, filed in court recently, alleges that on Sept. 19 they shipped a lot of silverware from Memphis to St. Louis, but the goods never came. The value of these goods was not less than $2,000, but there are reasons why the plaintiffs think they ought to recover $15,000.

Nearly all of the property was the accumulation of a lifetime by the plaintiff's grandfather, who was no less a personage than the late Lieutenant General N. B. Forrest of the Confederate States Army of America, and the rest of it was presents from friends. In the list of articles were four cups and a pair of silver spurs, all of which were manufactured during the late civil war from the silver trimbles and silverware belonging to the ladies of the states of Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

These patriotic women presented the articles to General Forrest as a token of their respect and high esteem, as well as that in which he was held by the people of the south, for the distinguished services he had rendered in many battles in defense of a cause which he and they believed to be just. The plaintiffs aver that by reason of this fact, in addition to the intrinsic value of the property, it had acquired and had at the time of delivery to the defendant a value of at least $10,000. The plaintiffs sue for $15,000 for the non-delivery of the goods. -St. Louis Republic.

Terrapin 372 a Dozen. Terrapin, the now greatest delicacy known to the epicure, are a little lower in price this year than they were last, although their comparative scarcity makes them one of the most precious luxuries. "Countess" - that is, terrapins that measure six inches or over - which brought $55 per dozen last year, are now selling for $50. The largest specimens are highly prized for their flesh, and have brought even this year as high as $72 per dozen. The more common varieties, which have not changed materially in price, sell for $15 to $30. Terrapin farming has proved a lucrative business. Of late years many have entered into it and have earned a good living. -Baltimore American.

To Light the Bosphorus. A Greek engineer who pursued his studies in this country has prepared a plan for the electric lighting of the Bosphorus from Kamak to San Stefano, on the sea of Marmora. He proposes to accomplish this by building three machines or engines at Armut Koei, Kandilli and Fera-Burum, where the current is unusually strong. The plan has appeared so simple and feasible that a society of capitalists took it up and applied to the Turkish government for permission to carry it out. The ministry now has the matter under consideration, and it is believed that it will be favorably answered. -New York Tribune.

Lost One of Its Points. One of the most magnificent peaks of the Mont Blanc range - the Dent du Midi - which, like an enormous steeple, straight and narrow, shoots up into the sky 12,500 feet, has lost quite a mass of its rocky side. The Dent du Jaune, one of the points which, like Gothic ornaments on a church steeple, stud its sides, recently tumbled into the valley. The track of the mass over the clear ice of the glacier can be plainly seen. -Charleston News and Courier.

Two Stopping Stones

to consumption are ailments we often deem trivial - a cold and a cough. Consumption thus acquired is rightly termed "Consumption from neglect."

Scott's Emulsion

not only stops a cold but it is remarkably successful where the cough has become deep seated.

Scott's Emulsion is the richest of fat-foods yet the easiest fat-food to take. It arrests waste and builds up healthy flesh.
