THE OLD GENERAL'S SCHEME.

Effective as an Indian Extremist, but Too Merciless to Try.

"A good many years ago the Comanche Indians used to harry and annoy the people of Texas by predatory incursions, pretty much, I fancy, as the Scottish highlanders did their brethren who dwelt in less mountainous regions," said Colonel Alf Mason of the Lone Star State. "The Comanches, too, had exactly the same purpose in view that animated the adherents of Rob Roy—the lifting of cattle—and it would be hard to say which made the greatest success of the business, the sturdy footers of Scotia or the copper hued denizens of the American plains. The Texans of course resented to the utmost this conduct of the redskins, and many a brave paid the death penalty for trying to get away with horses or cows that did not belong to him.

"Many a poor settler, too, in trying to save his little homestead, fell a victim to the barbarous foe. Some unusually cruel raids, in which a number of white women and little children were butchered, about the year 1859, in Williamson county, not far from the state capital, caused the resentment of the people to rise to a boiling pitch, and vengeance was sworn against the whole tribe of marauding red demons. The affair was so ruthless in its atrocity that it came very near being the cause of a wholesale slaughter of the Indians, which could have scarcely been justified.

"The proposition came from one of the noted frontiersmen and Indian fighters of that day, who has long since crossed over the river, General Henderson. The old man advanced it coolly and could with difficulty be persuaded to abandon it. It was to invite, under the guise of pretended friendship and reconciliation, all the Comanches that could be assembled in a great scope of surrounding country to a big barbecue, where there was to be eating and drinking galore and a general smoking of the pipe of peace. It was to be a grand feast, especially in the roast beef part of the menu, said beef to be artistically dressed with poison enough to kill every son of a gun of an Indian that partook of it. Well, they wouldn't let the old general carry out his scheme, and he got very hot over it and to the day of his death cursed the sentimental fools that interfered with his plans for reducing the Comanche census."—Washington Post.

Coal Tar in Masonry.

The announcement is made in The National Builder that what was at first considered a doubtful experiment—viz, the use of coal tar as a means of rendering masonry impervious to water, especially in positions exposed to direct contact with the latter—has proved a practically valuable resort. Used as a coating for masonry built up of very porous stone, tar renders it quite impervious, even at a depth of some 50 feet of water, and, according to the experience of those who have had much to do with it, the article should be utilized in all public buildings, particularly those designed for the preservation of works of art, the dissolving action of water, even upon mortar of superior quality, being well known; also the unfavorable effect of the exudation of water charged with lime salts from the mortar. Two methods of using the tar are named—viz, in a boiling state in one or several layers, this being suitable for surfaces exposed to the air, or it may be made to flame up before using, this being appropriate to surfaces which have to be covered up.

Kept the Crown.

Orleans House, Twickenham, where Louis Philippe lived when duke of Orleans, is in the property market. In later days, staying as an exiled king at the Star and Garter, Richmond, he walked one day to Twickenham for the purpose, as he said, of seeing some of the old tradesmen who had served him when he resided there. The first person to recognize him was an old man, who doffed his hat and hoped his royal highness was well. The recognition, however, was not mutual. "Perhaps," said the old man, "your royal highness will remember me when I tell you that I kept the Crown?"—an allusion close to the entrance of Orleans House. "Do you?" said Louis Philippe. "Let me congratulate you. You are able to do what I am not."—London News.

A Plagiaristic Boy.

One of the boys of a Capitol hill family had been instructed by his teacher to write an essay. A rather abstruse subject was given him, and he had been referred to the dictionary. His elder brother, who was also giving suggestions, had promised if the composition was good he would write it on the typewriter. The little fellow went to the dictionary and found the word he was looking for and under it a quotation that just suited the subject. He considered life a little too short, though, to copy the quotation, so he hunted up his mother's shears and in a way that argues a great deal in favor of his future journalistic ability clipped through the big, handsome dictionary and clipped wherever a word or phrase suited his fancy.

His brother, who rewrote the composition, discovered the plagiarism and informed the father, and the boy now takes his meals from the shelf.—Washington Post.

F. J. WALK, Observer.

Parade at a Boston Fire.
BOSTON, Oct. 12.—One man was killed and six men and one woman were badly burned or injured by jumping and dropping from the windows of the four-story wooden tenement house 111 Hanover street in a fire which started in the building. The name of the dead man is Charles Swensen, and his age about 20 years.

SEVERE EXPOSURE

Often results in colds, fevers, rheumatism, neuralgia and kindred derangements. We do not "catch cold" if we are in good condition. If the liver is active, and the system in consequence doing its duty, we live in full health and enjoy life "rain or shine." To break up a cold there's nothing so valuable as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They keep the whole system regulated in a perfectly natural way. If we do not feel happy, if we worry and grumble, if we are morbid, if the days seem dreary and long, if the weather is bad, if things go awry, it is the liver which is at fault. It is generally "torpid." A common sense way is to take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. We generally eat too much, take insufficient exercise, by means of which our tissues become indolent and incomplete. Be comfortable—you are comfortable when well when you have taken "Pleasant Pellets."

No constipation follows their use. Put up sealed in glass—always fresh and reliable.
