Life and Husband Go Together. "HARTSVILLE, Conn., Nov. 17.—Anne Downing Kent, wife of Albert H. Kent, of this city, died at 2 p. m. at North Andover, where she was visiting. At 2:30 p. m. her husband died at the residence of his mother in this city...

THIRTEEN CONTESTS TO DATE.

Republican Congressional Committee Gets Notice of Prospective Struggles.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Republican congressional committee has been notified of the following contests for seats in the next house: Seventh Kentucky, Denny, Rep., vs. Owens, Dem.; First Louisiana, Kernochan, Rep., vs. Meyer, Dem.; Second Louisiana, Coleman, Rep., vs. Buck, Dem.; Third Louisiana, Beattie, Rep., vs. Price, Dem.; Fifth Missouri, Van Horn, Rep., vs. Tarsney, Dem.; Sixth Nebraska, Dougherty, Rep., vs. Kern, Pop.; Second North Carolina, Cheatham, Rep., vs. Woodward, Dem.; First South Carolina, Murray, Rep., vs. Elliott, Dem.; Tenth Texas, Rosenthal, Rep., vs. Crowley, Rep.; First Virginia, McDannold, Rep., vs. Jones, Dem.; Second Virginia, Bealand, Rep., vs. Tyler, Dem.; Seventh Virginia, Walker, Rep., vs. Turner, Dem.; Eighth Virginia, McCaull, Rep., vs. Meredith, Dem. It is also regarded as likely that contests will be instituted by all other defeated Republicans in Virginia by Hopkins, Rep., against Kendall, Dem., in the Tenth Kentucky.

Morganfield's Morphine Allowance Cut.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17.—The physicians on Tuesday reduced the allowance of morphine for Charles A. Morganfield, the train robber, who is at the hospital with a broken leg. He has been using opium for years, and became savage as soon as his allowance was cut off. On Tuesday he attacked nurses, guards and physicians, and has been held in his bed with difficulty ever since. He cannot be prevented from using the vilest and most abusive language. He will be taken to Virginia on crutches early next week for trial, but he will not be able to walk without crutches for weeks.

Change in an Old Firm.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., under its present title, will expire by limitation on Jan. 1, 1895, and it is understood that the firm will be reorganized to continue business under the title of J. P. Morgan & Co. The deaths of Mr. Anthony J. Drexel and Mr. C. H. Wright will necessitate changes in the composition of the firm and a new partner will be taken in. The London house of J. P. Morgan & Co. will remain unchanged, while the Paris house will be Morgan, Harjes & Co. J. P. Morgan will retain his interest in the Philadelphia house of Drexel & Co.

Young Man Shot by a Woman.

STOCKTON, Cal., Nov. 17.—Frank Quinn, well-known young man of this city, was shot and killed in a lodging house by a young woman named Edith Elder, who subsequently shot herself in the right side, but she will recover. The woman confessed that she intended to shoot Quinn because he had wronged her under promise of marriage.

Woman in a "Queer" Gang.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., Nov. 17.—Chief Lutton and Detectives Earnshaw and Purchase of the Superior police department, have captured three counterfeiters and complete outfits and molds for making coins ranging from 5 cents to $20 pieces. The persons arrested were Mr. and Mrs. Parliards and Frank Teurgoon.

Discussed Relief of the Poor.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—The evening's session of the Episcopal church congress was largely attended. The topic of the evening—how to relieve the poor without pauperizing them—created unusual interest and those who spoke on the subject were men who have had a long practical experience.

Cut Dobby Off with Nothing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The will of Josephine L. Peyton, who leaves $1,000,000 and disregards her husband, has been filed with the probate court. Her husband, William K. Peyton, was provided for in a codicil which is entirely revoked by a later codicil, which says that Peyton "has not acted in a manner befitting a husband."

Two Railway Men Lose Their Lives.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 17.—James Floyd was killed in the Belt railway yards in East St. Louis. Both his legs were cut off and he resulted instantly from the hurt by falling in front of a moving switch engine as he attempted to step on the footboard. A. Benditt, another switchman, was run over by freight cars and fatally hurt.

Will Lynch Him if They Catch Him.

ATCHISON, Kan., Nov. 17.—Between 4:30 and 6:30 o'clock a. m. an unknown negro entered the homes of four highly respectable white ladies living within four blocks of each other and outraged them. Searching parties are looking for the negro in every direction and most summary justice will surely be meted out to him if captured.

The Reckless Duke of Argyll.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Realm, of which Lady Colin Campbell is the editor, appeared yesterday and was favorably received. In its first issues Realm announces that the duke of Argyll is engaged to Miss Knox Little. This will be the duke's third venture into matrimonial seas.

Burned a $100,000 Breaker.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 17.—The large breaker over No. 3 mine of the Delaware and Hudson company at Plymouth was entirely destroyed by fire. Six hundred men are thrown out of work. The loss is $100,000. It will take eighteen months to rebuild the breaker.

Contests Dismissed.

ATLANTA, Nov. 17.—The Georgia house of representatives has dismissed twenty-three contests brought by Populists and two brought by Democrats.

A Bureau of Information.

When the cook, disturbed by the fierce barking of the dog, opened the kitchen door, she observed a tramp hanging from a tree on the top of a clothes line post, with the dog jumping for him. She called off the dog, but he still hung on.

Why don't you come down off that post?

"Don't ask me, lady," answered the tramp; "don't ask me. Ask the dog."

MOTION TO QUASH

Made by the Defense in the Debs Strike Case.

TRIAL PUT OFF UNTIL JANUARY.

Provided There Is Any Trial, for the Defendant Attorneys Are Attacking the Indictment—Arguments To Be Heard on Dec. 4 and if the Motion is Denied the Trial Will Come Up a Month Later.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—In the United States district court were many labor leaders whose names were familiar during the strike troubles last summer. Eugene V. Debs' tall form was conspicuous among the number. He and the other directors of the American Railway union, together with sixty other men, had been called into court to plead to the indictments for conspiracy and overt acts charged against them during the great strike. When their cases were reached, however, their counsel gave notice that a motion to quash the indictments would be made. The labor men were represented by Messrs. Darrow, Wade and Geeting of this city, and Judge T. W. Harper of Terre Haute, who appeared for J. J. Hannahan, late Democratic candidate for congress, and for several other defendants.

Motion to Quash.

R. A. Wade represented twenty-three of the indicted men, while Mr. Darrow and Mr. Geeting appeared for the directors of the union. For the government were Messrs. Walker and Milchrist and Assistant District Attorney Rosenthal. Mr. Darrow was on hand in the interests of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. When the cases came up Mr. Milchrist spoke for the government, stating that the defendants had been served with notice to plead. Mr. Darrow said that before this was done counsel desired to interpose a motion to quash. All the defendants would file such a motion and arguments would be made on one case only. Judge Harper asked that the argument be set for the first week in December and after some discussion this was done, the date fixed being Tuesday, Dec. 4.

Will Select One Indictment.

In case the motion to quash be overruled the trials will begin Tuesday, Jan. 8. Counsel for the government stated that one indictment would be selected against prominent members of the union, presumably Debs and the directors, and the fate of minor cases would follow the outcome of that. The indicted directors are: E. V. Debs, George W. Howard, Sylvester Killip, L. W. Rogers, William Burns, Leroy Goodwin, M. J. Elliot, John F. McVein, and James Hogan. Mr. Debs appeared in excellent health and spirits. He said he had been making political speeches in the east. There was nothing new of interest in the labor world that he knew of.

WAS BURIED ALIVE.

Frightful Fate Which Overtook a Man at Alma, Mich.

GRAND LODGE, Nov. 17.—Elam Musott, formerly a fruit tree agent, who for about two years made Grand Lodge his home and headquarters, while on a trip to Alma a little over a year ago, was taken ill and, supposedly, died suddenly. He was buried by strangers. A few days ago his friends decided to take up the body and removed it to Williamson. When they opened the coffin they found that the body had turned over, and that the hands were clutching the hair, handfuls of which had been torn out. The face was terribly lacinated and torn, giving evidence of the desperate struggle he had made to free himself from his tomb.

Quit Work for the Winter.

PRINCETON, Ill., Nov. 17.—The contractors for the lock excavations of the Hennepin canal quit work for the winter and shipped their tools to the government works at points along the Mississippi River. The men were paid off, this city, and many of them becoming intoxicated, a general fight ensued. As a result two of them, James Malley and George Murphy, are serving out fines in jail and a third, William Milvaney, is held to the circuit court. The contractors for the trunk line of the canal will continue work the greater part of the winter.

Costly Conflagration.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 17.—The western Canada block, on the corner of Main street and Portage avenue, was completely destroyed, and the stores underneath, occupied by Weight Bros. & Mitchell, druggists, burned out. Loss, $50,000. The Grand Union hotel on Prince street was swept out of existence, in addition to several stores and houses adjoining. The fire then crossed the street and consumed the large warehouse of Merrick, Anderson & Co., which was filled with valuable stock. The loss in this connection will exceed $125,000.

Death of a Noted Character.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Caroline Agnes Bessford, dowager duchess of Montrose, known in the racing world as "Mr. Mantou" and also known as the "Red Duchess," is dead. The duchess expired at her London residence, 55 Belgrave square, S. W. The late dowager duchess was a remarkable character. She maintained a splendid stable and raced horses under the name and colors of "Mr. Mantou." Owing to her costumes being of fery colors she became known as the "Red Duchess."

The Estate of Chauvin.

DETROIT, Nov. 17.—William T. Trombley has discontinued the suit brought by him against John H. Seitz of the allegation that Seitz had secured plaintiff's half interest in the estate of Chauvin, the murdered hermit, by misrepresentation. Trombley says Seitz has paid him $23,000 in cash and that he is now satisfied with the deal. Trombley denied his prospective interest in the Chauvin estate to Seitz some years ago.

Denied by the Faculty.

LEXINGTON, Nov. 17.—The faculty of the Kentucky university deny the story that twenty students are seriously ill from drinking impure water and three deaths have occurred within the past week. They say nine students at different times have been ill, but there have been no deaths among them from fever.

Aged Preacher Hangs Himself.

MIDDLESBORO, Ky., Nov. 17.—Rev. Richard Carroll, a prominent Baptist preacher, hung himself near Maynorville. He was 89 years old and had been preaching sixty-five years.

HARDENED BY CUSTOM.

The Diverged Woman Did Not Feel Comfortable About Her Children.

The conversation took place at a table in a Chicago restaurant within earshot of half a dozen persons, so it is presumed that it is not to be considered particularly sacred. The woman in the brown dress had evidently just come in from Denver. The one in black had met her at the depot. There was an animated description of the details of the journey; what time she started, how tired she got, what a terrible draft there was and so forth, interspersed with exclamations of sympathy from her hearer. Then she leaned forward and asked with more than ordinary interest: "Have you seen George since?"

Her companion's face took on an expression that seemed to betoken resignation to all the evils the human race is destined to come in contact with.

"Yes, twice," she answered.

"And the children?"

"No, I haven't seen them."

"Nor his wife?"

"No, but they say she is quite pretty and sensible too."

The woman in brown sighed.

"I never heard a word of it until about a week ago. You can't imagine what a shock it gave me. He was married in December, wasn't he?"

"Yes, just a month after you were."

"I'd like to see the children, but I'm afraid I couldn't bear it. It makes no difference how good George's new wife is, she won't be like an own mother to the poor little things. It's against all reason, you know that."

The woman in black admitted that the argument was indispensible.

"And I'd never feel right again," the speaker continued, apparently giving her conscience a few affectionate little pats and lulling it to rest. "When I left George, I tried to get the children for myself; but, you see, I had no idea what I should do. I knew it would be out of the question for me to try to struggle along with all three of them. I had faith enough in him to believe that he would do the right thing by them, even though my own life with him had been a perpetual martyrdom. If I had only known that I should marry again so soon and so well, nothing on earth could ever have compelled me to give them up. But, you see, I didn't know. So, all things considered, I guess I'd better go right on east. As I said, it would be a terrible trial to see them under the charge of somebody else and hear them call another woman 'mother.' It would break my heart."

The two women finished their lunch and went out. The baldheaded man at the end of the table dropped his fork with a clatter.

"Well," he said emphatically, "it's my opinion that those three children are better off with that new mother if she's anything short of an amazon than they would be with that woman. Heaven grant she won't be like their own mother."

The little audience looked as though it agreed with him individually and collectively.—Exchange.

ANTICIPATING FAME.

BESANT'S PATHETIC STORY OF "PAUL THE WANDERER."

The Quiet Dignity of a Man Who Was Living For Posterity—A Pretty Little Unit Written in the English Novelist's Inimitable Style.

I knew him for several years before his death. When I first made his acquaintance, he was already an old man. He was also, as was evident from the first, a very poor man. He went about shabbily dressed. He carried biscuits in his pocket to the reading room on which he lunched or took snacks at intervals during the day. Perhaps he had dinner afterward, but I always suspected his dinner to be an uncertain and a movable feast. It was understood that he was something in the literary way. I got to know him by sitting next to him day after day. We exchanged the amenities of the reading room, apologized for crowding each other with books, abused the talkers, remarked on the impudence of those who go to the room in order to flirt and so forth. When I got to know him better, I made little discoveries about him, as, for instance, that he liked a glass of beer in the middle of the day and that he could not afford the twopenny. I may say, not boastfully, that I was able to offer him this little luxury. We used to go out together for the purpose. He was good enough to take an interest in my work. He proved to have a considerable knowledge of books and gave me considerable help in this way.

One Sunday I met him in the street. We stopped to speak. He launched the closing of the museum on Sunday. For his own part, he said, he would have the reading room open every day in the week. Why close the avenues of knowledge? Why damn the fountains and springs of wisdom? So we walked and talked. He was perfectly dignified in his manner, though his great coat was so thin and shabby that one might be ashamed to be seen with him. He stopped presently at the door of a house in High street, Holborn.

"I lodge here," he said. "Will you come up stairs and see my hermitage?" I remember that he called it grandly his hermitage. He led the way; the stairs were dark and dirty; he took me to the fifth, or fifty-fifth, floor. He lived in the back attic.

"This," he said, "is the cell of the recluse. I live here quite retired. There are other lodgers, I believe, but I do not know them. I live here with my library in simplicity. The air is wholesome at this height."

He threw open the window and sniffed the fragrance of the neighboring chimneys. The room was clean; the furniture was scanty; there was no fire in the grate; on a shelf were about 25 books—his library. The man looked perfectly contented with his hermitage. There were no papers on the table, nothing to show that he was a writer.

I do not know how he lived—certainly he did not work at the museum—but he never borrowed. In one corner stood a wooden chest. He lifted the lid and nodded and laughed.

"Ah!" he said, "now I am going to reveal a secret. You didn't know, nobody at the museum knows, the people in the house don't know, that I am—what do you think?—a poet. It is 30 years since I paid for the publication of my collected poetical works. Yes, sir, and I am going not only to communicate this secret to your honor—in safe keeping—but to present you with a copy. There, my young friend!" He produced a thin volume. "I am Paul the Wanderer." In fact, the title page bore the legend, "Collected Poetical Work of Paul the Wanderer."

"Thirty years," he repeated. "There were 500 copies. The press received 50, the public bought four; there remained 446. I have now given you one. There now remain 445. I have bequeathed these to the public libraries of the nation. Sir, you are young. You will yourself perhaps publish your poems. Remember for your comfort that it takes 50 years, or two generations, for the noblest poets to take their proper place. Greatness—true, stable, solid greatness—does not come, given to an ephemeral favorite—requires 50 years at least. Go, sir! Take the book I have given you, and in after years, when I am gone, tell the world that you knew—Paul the Wanderer!" I wrung his hand in silence and left him. More than 50 years have passed since he published that work. No one has yet spoken to me of Paul the Wanderer. But I now understand his dignity, his self respect and his content. He was anticipating and enjoying his future fame. He was living for posterity. Present poverty and neglect were nothing.—Walter Besant in London Queen.

Another Mammoth Statue.

The sculptor Nikolaus Geiger is putting the last touches to his statue of Barbarossa, which is to symbolize the ancient kingdom in the Kyffhauser monument, to be unveiled in 1896. The Barbarossa appears at the end of a vestibule in the style of an ancient castle, on the steps of the throne upon which he is sitting like the sleeping figures of the courtiers, with fabulous animals of the old mythic world. Barbarossa is represented at the moment of waking from his long sleep. In his right hand is his sword; his left hand strokes his long waving beard. Contrary to all other figures of the old hero, he is here represented as an actual emperor, with features of a noble man. The whole monument, hewed from the rock, will be about 80 feet high. The figure of the seated monarch is about 30 feet high.—London Sun.

Catarrh

In Its Worst Form Life Almost a Burden

A Glorious Change Due Solely to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. C. King, Geneva, Ohio.

Catarrh is a constitutional disease, and therefore it can only be cured by a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read what it did for Mrs. King, concisely expressed in her own voluntary words: "C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: 'Gentlemen:—From a grateful heart I write what your grand medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, has done for me. Five bottles cured me of catarrh in its worst form. I think it was only a matter of time, when it would have ended in Bronchial Consumption. I can scarcely realize wherein a few months ago I was almost a burden, sick and discouraged, now I am well and happy, gaining flesh and a new being. And all owing to Hood's Sarsaparilla. I will never be without it. Yours gratefully, MRS. CLARA KING, Geneva, Ohio. Hood's Pills cure liver ills, jaundice, biliousness, sick headache and constipation. No.
