Py dint of much perseverance and hard work, says the Register, Secretary of State Hinrichsen has placed the state house grounds in a wonderfully beautiful condition, and they now look better and prettier than in years. The trees on the lawn have been whitened for several feet up and trimmed at their tops, giving them a hand ome appearance. Much trouble has always been had with the grass, the soil underneath being mostly refuse from the work of erecting the building, and composed largely of brick, cinders and clay. Last fall the top soil was carefully removed and many loads of rich black dirt placed underneath the sod. This has given the grass new life, and will make it more beautiful than
