"In my college days I learned to believe that legislation should be for the benefit of all the people, and not merely to promote the interests of a privileged class; at the same time I became convinced that from our position we are entitled to become the great commercial nation of the world, and to secure this we must remove all high tariff and other artificial barriers which tend to restrict our trade with other nations. I also came to the conclusion that the great end of all good government should be to bring its people the largest amount of happiness and comfort, and to allow each individual to develop himself to his highest capacity. and that this could only be secured by allowing him the largest possible personal liberty consistent with the rights of others. I need not add that, Senator Hill, 'I am a democrat.'

"Wills," said Lord Coke, "and the enstruction of them do more perplex a man than any other, and to make a certain construction of them exceedeth jurisprudentium artem." An old proverb says that every man is either a fool or a physician at 40. Sir H. Halford happening one day to quote the saying to a circle of friends, Canning humoroasly inquired, "Sir Henry, mayn't he be both?" At any rate experience teaches that lawyers who draw their own wills sometimes make great mistakes. Sir Samuel Romilly's will was improperly worded, Chief Baron Thompson's will became the subject of chancery proceedings, while the will of Bradley, the eminent conveyancer, was actually set side by Lord Thurlow. -Temple Bar.
