Bave Chipped His M

Near the center of the south wall of the nave is a monument to Major Andre of Revolutionary note. The very long inscription upon it begins, "Sacred to the memory of Major John Andre, who, raised by his merit, at an early period of the British forces in America, and employed in an important but hazardous enterprise, fell a sacrifice to his zeal for his king and country, on the 2d of October, 1780, aged 29, universally beloved and esteemed by the army in which he served and lamented even by his foes."

About the base of the monument, which is a nanel set against the wall. are several small figures. These project from the panel, and represent the presentation of Major Andre's letter to General Washington on the night before his execution. The ease with which the beads of these figures could be broken off has been too great a temptation to In this they are mistaken. Southey, the poet, when a boy, was a pupil at the Westminster school. Later in life he was exceedingly sensitive in regard to his political principles, and for a time a serious quarrel existed between himself and Lamb, because the latter, speaking in regard to this injury to Andre's monument, deraw notions of transatlantic freedom.' Then, addressing Southey, he added, 'The mischief was done about the time that you were a scholar there. Do you know anything about the unfortunate

It is no ticed, for instance, that many horses which shy usually start away from objects on one side more frequently than from objects on the other. This is probably due to defects in the vision of one or other eye. In nearly all cases of shying the hors takes fright at some unfamiliar object, though this is commonly quite harm less, such as a wheelbarrow upsid down, a freshly felled log or a piece of paper resing before the wind. This instantly becomes an illusion, is interpreted as something else, and it is a cu rious question in equine neuropathy to know what it is that the herse figures these harmless objects to be. When Russian ponies first began to be shipped to Harwich, they usually objected to pass near a donkey. This reluctance was explained on the hypothesis that the ponies seldom saw donkeys in Russin and mistook them for bears,-London Spectator.

The Corpulent Bourbons.

Where does the Duc d'Orleans get his fat? From the Spanish and Neapolitan Bourbons, of whom he is unquestionably a descendant, even though Louis Phi lippe were a Chiappini. I cannot think of any French Bourbons, except Louis XVI, his sister Clotilde and Philippe Egalite's father and the Comte de Chamberd and his sister, who were very fat. The two latter were, however, decended from the Neapolitan and Spanish Bourbons. Obesity has been an oft this temperature has persisted for a recurring malady of the Spanish royal period of two weeks and is associated family ever since Elizabeth Farnese married Philip V. She was the heiress of the fattest Italian that probably ever lived. He was a prince for a Barnum show whose legs had to be propped up by buckram and whalebone cases to pre vent them overlapping his feet. Fatty togeneration impaired the usefulness of Charles III of Spain and destroyed the activity of the late Queen Christian, grandmother of the Comtesse de Paris. The Empress Frederick is ready to help feminine unions, but for handicrafts requiring trained skill and talent, and not to get poor scribbling or painting shot into the market. The queens of Sweden and Denmark are of the same mind. But the queen of Sweden likes to patronize authoresses on the side of religion and good morals. The empress of Russia writes of the defacing of this very mon-ument in this way in his "Essays of me that the Prince of Wales' daughters are credited in northern courts with shrewdness and insight into the motives

The general causes which act on the ovement of the atmosphere are defined by Professor Cornu, in an address lately delivered before the British Royal institute, as gyratory influences, and, when once the movement is set going, it continues of itself and sometimes increases in amount. In the first place, Professor Cornu declares, the movement of the rotation of the earth is to be cited, which always brings with it a small component of rotation for a displacement of a gaseous mass in latitude or altitude, and, in the second place, and as decisive a cause, the solar heat, which warms the air near the surface, or the clouds. Thus related, and as the ascending tendency of the heated gas cannot be equal over the whole surface expesed to the rays of the sun-as much because of the nature of the ground as because of its inequalties-the equilibrium is upset in parts and gaseons columns ascend. When once gyration is established, the causes producing it keep it up and augment it.

First Sign of Consumption. Dr. C. W. Ingraham says: A rise of emperature of from one-half to one degree at some period of greater or less duration every 24 hours may be regarded as the first symptom of pulmonary tuberculosis, occurring previous to every other symptom, and before the general health of the individual is influenced to a noticeable degree. The temperature will be most elevated following bodily fatigue. Excluding other morbid conditions that would cause a similar elevation of temperature, it is safe to diagnose the case as one of pulmonary (or laryngeal) tuberculosis when with loss of weight and vitality, even though there has been no accompanying cough or expectoration and though physical examination gives negative results -New York Ledger.

The Yellow Jacket.

The yellow jacket of the great Chinese statesman Li Hung Chang is more of a vest than a jacket. It is made of rich yellow satin, has no sleeves, firs the wearer closely, and reaches a little below the waist. It does not fasten in front, but at the side, with small buttons, and on the front is embroidered the royal dragon of China. Only five men in all the empire of China are entitled to wear it, and you may guess our recent guest, the wise and kindly Li Hung Chang, enjoys his high privilegs. —New York Times.

WOMEN WHO MADDEN MEN.

Women may be charming, wholly evoted to their homes and their husbands, and yet be so tactless, though less and aggravating as to drive hus-bands to the extreme of misery. Any observant bachelor could recall numbers of instances of women who from want of tact and intelligence are almost driving their husbands mad by getting on their nerves. They forget that busy men require absolute brain rest, change of cene, change of subject. They forget that, however worrying the little affairs of a household may be, the anxieties of a great business upon which the whole family's present and future depend are far greater. A friend of mine who is now nearly a millionaire told me in confidence that while he was sitting one eventful night over his smoking room fire won-dering whether he could next day possibly survive a terrible crisis which was hanging over his bead and might lead to disastrous bankruptcy, with debts to under £50. It is on such occasions that a mar wants a helpful wife—one who will tell him about or read aloud the la. good novel, who will say: "Come, let us go to the theater tonight. You need change of scene." And, above all, one who knows just when her husband requires nothing more than to be left alone. It is women who get on their husbands nerves that drive them to take bachelor holidays when they ought to be getting more enjoyment from the wife's com-

Of course there are men who are a ways out of sorts—dyspeptic bears with sore heads, who require strong minds to manage them-but there are very many others who only want judicious, sym pathetic treatment to be the best hus bands in the world. Forgeries In Collection The question of forgeries which dis figure our national collections canno pass unnoticed. I do not assert that the South Kensington museum contains more of them than are to be found in similar institutions on the continent, though it probably does, for with such exquisite and beautiful skill are these objects nowadays forged or "faked" that the most practical expert may now and again be victimized by them almost without disgrace. So perfect has the art of the forger become and so fine an artist the forger, so elaborate his plots and conspiracies to catch even the wariest of irectors and collectors, that often the only safety lies nowadays in written guarantee and proved proveniance from one reputable collection to another. I need not refer to any even of the most notorious forgeries in South Kensington museum, for that is obviously the duty of a properly appointed committee of experts, which should at the earliest possible moment be constituted. I do not agree with Sir J. C. Robinson's first roposal, that such francis s stroyed out of all existence.

I believe that a far better purpos would be served by branding them indelibly as forgeries and bringing them together in a single room, to form an edifying forgery exhibition by them-selves, with all particulars as to the dealers from whom they were obtained and the price which was paid for them. The educational value of such a collection would be considerable and as an object lesson instructive in distinct ways to collector, student, forger and director, and only a little moral convacwould be required to act on the sugges-tion. Moreover, the fine artists who made them might be thus discovered and encouraged in more honorable work. At the same time the revision of the museum labels should be proceeded with and the numerous errors which at present mislead the public remedied .-Contemporary Review.

A Carjously Named Garden. There is a garden in Brixton kept by an old gentleman which presents some curiosities in floral nomenclature. The owner has been seized with a desire to label his flowers after the manner of botanists, but knowing nothing of scientific terms consulted an acquaintance. The result is more amusing than appro-priate and proves the felly of wisdom where ignorance is bliss. Scientific names have been affixed to all the flowers, but strictly on the principle that "a rose by any other name will smell as sweet." One row bears the inscription "Nux vomics," another is boldy labeled "Nisi prins," a third is affirmed to be "Ipecacuanha" and another to be "Par-ticeps criminis." The amateur gardener is exceedingly proud of his collection. and no one has enlightened him on the incongruity of the descriptions. - London Telegraph.

Effect of Open Air Exercise. Mr. Sargent of England has published some remarkable facts showing the in-fluence of outdoor occupations and exercise in lessening the rate of mortality and that of all indoor occupations, if long continued, in raising the rate of
