

MURDER AT GENESEO.

William Horston Killed in a Gambler's Quarrel Yesterday.

THE LOSER BECOMES ANGRY.

And Fires a Bullet Into the Head of the Winner.

William Horston (colored) was killed yesterday afternoon at Geneseo as the result of a quarrel over a game of chuck-a-luck. A crowd of colored men employed on the Hennepin canal construction after receiving their pay went to Geneseo and proceeded to paint the town red. When they had their fill of liquor they adjourned to a spot on the outskirts of town to indulge in their favorite pastimes, craps and chuck-a-luck. Horston won nearly every time the dice were thrown in the latter game. The dealer grew angry, but that did not disturb Horston, who kept on pocketing the shekels.

Winner Shot Down.
A friend of the dealer's handed him a revolver and told him to go after Horston. He did as he was ordered. The ball entered Horston's head, killing him instantly. Three colored men are under arrest, but the man who did the shooting is still at large.
