SHOOTING ON THE SWAIN.

Mate and Engineer Battle With Revolvers, the Former Being Shot.

Passengers on the Verne Swain were thrown into a panic this morning as she was about to pull out from Clinton for Rock Island by a sensational shooting affray between the mate, George Ashworth, and the engineer, William Walker. The clash was a climax to a series of quarrels that the men had indulged in. The story is that after an exchange of angry words Ashworth struck Williams across the face with his fist. Both drew revolvers and fired, but only one shot took effect, lodging in Ashworth's leg. He was removed to Mercy hospital, in Clinton, after which the boat proceeded on her way. It is said Ashworth's injury is not serious.
