WOMEN WHO POSE.

The Secrecy That is Maintained by Artists About Their Models.

Every artist keeps in his studio a little book that he guards most sacredly. It contains his list of models. In some art studios of New York the "model book" contains 500 names of men and women who earn their living by posing. The betrayal of a single name by the artist would injure his reputation with the craft and make it difficult for him to employ the better class of models.

The chief reason for this secrecy is the fact that the outside world is prone to look askance at professional models. Most of them, however, are perfectly modest and good women, whose business, though apparently violating the letter of morality, preserves its spirit. In fact, behind the model's professional career is little but the commonplace. American models are characterized by the same qualities of self respect and independence as American art. The principal fault artists and illustrators find with them is their lack of expression, but for beautiful figures and perfect features they are unexcelled.

The best models in the world are found in France and America, where the most general intelligence prevails in the class from which they chiefly come. In America many of them belong to middle class families who have met reverses.

He Had Followed Directions. A little black boy sat on the soap box which served as a front step to the tumble down shanty. His skin was more than black. Here and there it looked as if it had been varnished. His fingers clung together when he attempted to open his hands, and films of silky sweetness were spun about him as he threw back his head and opened his mouth in epicurean ecstasy. Household Words explains this happy condition:

"Goodness, law!" exclaimed the old mammy, who came suddenly round the corner. "What yo' sittin' dat way for when I jes' been tryin' to clean yo' up? Ef yo' ain' went an' molassed yo'self I'm head to foot!"

"Dat ain' lasses, mammy." "Whut's de use of tryin' ter make yo' look 'spectable, 'd like ter know? I wash yo' an' dress yo', an' den I tells yo' ter go an' use de comb, didn't I?"

"Yes'm. An' I comb aroun', an' all de comb I could fin' was dis yere honeycomb. But I don use dat, mammy; I sho'ly did."

The Wonders of Color. A small and simple experiment can be tried by any reader which will go far to convince him or her what a debt we owe to color and what a good thing it is to have sunlight, which enables our eyes to take advantage of the beautiful hues of nature. Make a room quite dark and then burn some carbonate of soda in the flame of a bunsen gas burner. It will burn with an orange yellow light sufficiently strong to illuminate everything in the room, but you will realize with a sudden shock that, bright though the light is, all distinctions of color have vanished. Only light and shade remain. A crimson carnation, a blue violet, a red tablecloth, a yellow blind—all look gray or black or white. The faces of those present look positively repulsive, for all natural color has disappeared.

No other experiment will so well convince those who have witnessed it how great a loss would be that of our sense for color.

Oriental Weddings. At wedding festivals in Arabia, Persia and Morocco the women guests hold carnival all day, sometimes several days, but the poor little bride is in a room by herself fasting. She is "decorated." Depilatories and tweezers remove all superfluous hair. She is scrubbed with pumice stone; her toes, fingers and hair are stained with henna, and her face is dabbed with red and bits of gold paper. An oriental maiden has no voice in the selection of her husband. She seldom sees him till she is his wife, and he is not supposed to see her face until she unveils after marriage. Sometimes Cupid gets ahead of parents and guardians, the "wind" blows the veil aside, and the young eyes meet. Then there is some anxious maneuvering that the elders may make the right selection.

Unique Way to Secure One's Pay. Tattling is still a favorite personal decoration with some of the natives of Samon, though not so fashionable there as formerly. Those who practice the art have an effective way of securing their pay. The color extends from the waist to the knees, no other part of the body being marked. In the snail of the back the design shades off to a point which is never finished by the tattooer till his bill has been paid. As the incomplete design is public evidence of the wearer's indebtedness the artist seldom has to wait long for his money.

Cholera Infantum. This disease has lost its terrors since Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy came into general use. The uniform success which attends the use of this remedy in all cases of bowel complaints in children has made it a favorite wherever its value has become known. For sale by all druggists.

Taken With Cramps. William Kirmse, a member of the bridge gang working near Littleport, was taken suddenly ill Thursday night with cramps and a kind of cholera. His case was so severe that he had to have the members of the crew wait upon him and Mr. Gifford was called and consulted. He told them he had a medicine in the form of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy that he thought would help him out, and accordingly several doses were administered with the result that the fellow was able to be around next day. The incident speaks quite highly of Mr. Gifford's medicines.—Elkader (Iowa) Argus.

This remedy never fails. Keep it in your home; it may save life. For sale by all druggists.

At the Theatre.

One of the most pronounced successes of the past dramatic season was the production of the four act comedy drama, "Sweet Clover." It is again meeting with success this season, for people who witnessed it before are appreciating it even better and discovering new beauties in the presentation. It is one of those plays that will live for more than one season, for it is a clean, healthy play and decidedly interesting. "Sweet Clover" is full of heart interest, rich in comedy and possesses strong dramatic scenes. It tells a pretty and strong story and in a simple and direct manner; its odor is that of the clover fields and the fireside, and certainly those who enjoy heart-reaching stories in dramatic form cannot afford to miss seeing it. The original company will appear here, Otis B. Thayer as "Jerome Holcomb" and Edna Robb as "Lola," his daughter, stand out prominently as the general figures in the drama. To preserve atmosphere, special scenery is carried for every act, together with some handsome costumes, quaint old furniture and appropriate lighting effects. "Sweet Clover" will be presented at the Illinois theatre Sunday evening, Aug. 16.

Water Trips From Chicago. Some of the most attractive summer resorts in the country are along the shores of Lake Michigan. There is Frankfort, with its new and beautiful hotel; Charlevoix, Petoskey, Bay View, Harbor Point and Mackinac. At these places the climate is all that can be desired. At most of them there are golf links, tennis courts, boating, bathing and fishing. The ideal way to reach them is by water from Chicago. Fast and splendidly furnished steamers leave that city almost every day in the week. The trip across Lake Michigan is delightful. If you are looking for a thoroughly good place to spend the summer and have not yet decided where to go, take our advice and try northern Michigan. Full information at this office.
