FATE OF MRS. HART

Rock Island Woman Burned Beyond Recognition in Chicago Theatre Fire.

IS IDENTIFIED BY HER SHOES

Body Not Found Until Thursday Night—Other Victims.

Mrs. E. C. Hart, 1010 Twenty-first street, who lost her life in the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago, will be buried tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from the home of her father, John English, at Atkinson, Ill.

The telegrams that came to the husband Thursday were misleading. One read that Mrs. Hart was at the "Home hospital," but what it was meant to convey was that she was at "some hospital," as she was numbered with the missing. This information was sent by John English, a cousin of Mrs. Hart, in the hope that she would be found alive during the day.

The body was not located until 9 o'clock Thursday night. Mr. Hart was accompanied to Chicago by County Clerk H. B. Hubbard, his friend and neighbor. "We arrived in Chicago at 5:30 in the afternoon," said Mr. Hubbard today. "Mr. Hart was prostrated when he learned the worst. We prevailed upon him to stay at a hotel while Mr. English, Mrs. Hart's father, and myself took up the search that anxious relatives had been pursuing without success since the afternoon of the fire. At 9 o'clock we discovered Mrs. Hart's body in Sheldon's morgue. She was beyond recognition, and the only means of identification was her shoes, having purchased a new pair here the day before her departure for Chicago."

Clothing Burned From Body

"The clothing was burned from the body down to the waist. Two other men were standing before the body, and one of them had about made up his mind that it was that of his missing wife. I was positive, however, that it was Mrs. Hart, and at my request an officer removed her shoes. The one on the left foot had no identification marks, but on the one on the right foot appeared the name of Dolly Bess, Rock Island. Mr. English also identified the overgaiters, having placed them on his daughter's feet when she left the home of her cousin, Dr. Fred Smith, for the theatre Wednesday afternoon. The jewelry had been removed from the body and stored. We afterward secured it, but it was so badly charred that it would have been impossible to identify the body by it."

"Mrs. Hart went to the theatre with her cousin, Mrs. Fred Smith, and the latter's daughter, Maurine Smith. Mother and daughter perished also. Their bodies were found in two different morgues in parts of the city remote from where Mrs. Hart's remains were located. Dr. Smith had bought three seats for the matinee in the second gallery, intending to go with his wife and daughter. After securing the seats they were surprised to have Mrs. Hart and her father drop in on them for a visit."

Did Not Wish to Attend.

"Dr. Smith endeavored to secure an additional seat with the three already procured, but was unsuccessful. Mrs. Hart did not wish to attend the performance, stating she preferred to remain at the house for a rest, as she was fatigued from travel, but when the doctor and Mrs. Smith insisted, she consented. Dr. Smith got standing room in the parquet. He escaped, but probably would have been killed, as the police prevented him rushing into sure death, as he made immediately on the breaking out of the fire for the section of the house his wife and daughter and Mrs. Hart were seated in."

Mrs. Hart was 35 years of age. In the past year there have been two other funerals from the English home, where the obsequies of Mrs. Hart will be held tomorrow, her mother and sister having preceded her to the grave. She is now survived by her husband, father and brother.

Coriolia Girl Among Dead

Eva M. Hirc, aged 15, whose picture appears in today's Chicago Tribune as among the dead, is a daughter of the late David Hirc, who died a year ago, and her mother is a niece of George E. Bailey, of this city. She was born in Coriolia and was well-known in this city, having spent last summer visiting here and with her grandfather, R. C. Cool, at Cordova. She attended the theatre in company with Ruth M. Robbins, who was also killed. The funeral was held today at Chicago and the remains will be brought to Cordova to be interred beside those of her father.

Former Residents To Be Buried

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Harrold, 816 Twenty-third street, have received word that their cousins, Miss Pet Bell and Mrs. Rena Reiter, formerly residents of this city, are among the victims of the Iroquois theatre disaster. Mrs. Reiter has been identified, but Miss Bell is still among the missing. The remains will be brought to this city for interment. Miss Bell and Mrs. Reiter were daughters of the late "Uncle Billy" Bell, an old settler of Rock Island county. They are survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. Paul Jones and Miss Ella Bell, of Toledo, Ohio.

Arthur, 10-year-old son of F. E. Steinhilz, of Rockford, who a year ago was a candidate for the presidency of the Three-Eye league, perished in the fire.

Mrs. C. W. Bartine and Mrs. Zach Suiter, of Le Claire, were reported among the missing, but happily the information proved misleading. Mrs. Suiter writing her husband that both are safe, having gone to another theatre on the afternoon of the catastrophe.

Miss Cassel's Good Fortune. Miss Louise Cassel, daughter of C. E. Cassel, of this city, had planned, with friends, to attend the performance at the Iroquois on the afternoon of the disaster, and that she or her friends did not do so was simply because they could not get desirable seats. Accordingly they attended another theatre in the neighborhood, and when they were returning home were horrified to see dead bodies being carried from the play house they had tried in vain earlier in the day to secure seats in.

ILLINOIS SAID TO BE ONE OF SAFEST OF THEATRES

Chicago's theatre tragedy naturally has resulted in the examination of the play houses in every city in the land in order that there shall not be absent during a future performance the precautions the lack of which brought the death list of last Wednesday to such an appalling number.

In Rock Island the people have made inquiries concerning the safety of the Illinois, despite that they have been assured time and again that no fears are warranted, as the house can be emptied in a few minutes. From the exterior it would appear as though there was no exit from the top gallery except the one small stairway on the inside. While there is no fire escape on the outside wall of the building from the top gallery, it should be stated in justice to the management that there is a large door opening into the hallway dividing the offices at the front part of the gallery. There is always some one present whose duty it would be to throw open this door in case of an emergency. The gallery, it is claimed, could be emptied in three minutes.

From the balcony there are two wide stairways emptying into the foyer on the first floor, this furnishing adequate exits for the second floor. There is also a fire escape on the west side of the building leading from the balcony. For the parquet, aside from the main entrance, there are three doors opening into Sixteenth street that are opened at the conclusion of each performance.

"Despite the fact that the Illinois is as well protected as any theatre in the state, the owners of the property and the management are to have a meeting and thoroughly examine the building to see that if usage of the past two years has made any precautions necessary."

Throat Trouble.

"You look bad, old man. What's the matter?"
"Throat trouble."
"I didn't know you were subject to it."
"Yes, I am. This throat belongs to the new owner in the next house, who practices singing at all hours of the night."
