ANOTHER PLEADS GUILTY

Of the Grand Rapids Water Scandal Charges—Ex-City Physician's Testimony Is Very Strong.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 26. — Ex-Alderman Daniel E. Lozier, accused of accepting a bribe to aid the Lake Michigan water deal, has changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. Sentence was deferred. The trial of Gerrit H. Albers was resumed. The testimony of Alderman Renihan, whom Albers is alleged to have offered a bribe, was concluded. He swore that he did not change his vote upon the water deal because of the talks with Albers, and that after the first talk in which Albers made the bribery proposition he still remained friendly with Albers, though after the last one he did not.

Dr. Uilke de Vries, who was city physician when the water deal was being put through, and a close friend of both Albers and Lant K. Salsbury, testified as follows: "I knew about the water deal, and Salsbury talked with me Oct. 22 about getting Albers to approach Renihan. I sent for Albers to come to my office. I told him that parties interested in the deal wanted to secure Renihan's support, or at least his silence. I told him that he could offer Renihan any part of $3,000, and if necessary could go as far as $5,000, not in money, but in ad interim receipts. Albers finally consented to see Renihan. That evening I saw Albers again, and he said Renihan would accept the proposition and would vote for the deal. He said he had offered Renihan the whole $3,000."
