METHODIST CONFERENCE REJECTS PROPOSITION AIMED AT ROMAN CHURCH.

Los Angeles, May 10.—The attitude of the Roman Catholic church toward the public school system of the United States furnished the subject of a sensational debate in the Methodist general conference. While there was a strong disposition on the part of certain delegates to have the conference to adopt resolutions putting it on record upon the subject there was an overwhelming sentiment, as it developed, against any such action, and the entire matter was finally disposed of by referring it to a committee from which it is unlikely ever to be reported.

Rev. D. J. M. King was the mover in the matter of the Roman Catholic church, and he was on his feet as soon as the convention was ready for business. He commenced by reading an extract from a letter written by Rev. Father Peter Harnett, vicar general of the Roman Catholic diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, appearing in a local newspaper, and based upon an utterance of the episcopal address read before the conference by Bishop Foss on Thursday last. In this letter Rev. Harnett took exception to the statement in the address that the Roman Catholic church is opposed to the public school system of the United States.

KAISER CRITICISED

Bebel, the Socialist Leader in the German Reichstag, Assails Emperor Wilhelm.

SAYS GERMANY IS FOR JAPAN

Takes a Slap at Two Gifts of Statues—Reply of Von Buelow, the Chancellor.

Berlin, May 10.—During the discussion following the third reading of the budget bill in the reichstag Herr Bebel, the Socialist leader, referred to Emperor William's speeches at Carlsruhe and Mayence, remarking that the pointed allusions to France had caused great surprise. The emperor's words, the speaker added, were enhanced in importance through the fact that he telegraphed to Emperor Nicholas from Sicily, on the occasion of the sinking of the Russian battleship Petropavlovsk, as follows: "Russia's mourning is Germany's mourning."

Thinks Russia Needs Civilizing.

Herr Bebel continuing said: "I deny most emphatically that the emperor's telegram reflects the sentiments of the German people. In my opinion German sympathies are far more on the side of Japan than on that of Russia." This statement caused murmurs of dissent on the right. "The land in which such things can happen as recently occurred in Russia," continued Herr Bebel, "stands upon such a low level of civilization that all the rest of Europe has the most lively interest in seeing the sun of civilization rise upon it."

Refers to a Couple of Statues.

Herr Bebel claimed that western Europe has special reasons to rejoice if Russia loses the war, for "the more Russia is weakened by the struggle the less likely it becomes that Russia will mix in the affairs of western Europe." The speaker referred to "the far-reaching antipathy of all civilized nations against Germany," alluding to the Emperor Frederick monument, "unpacked in some corner of Washington and the Goethe monument in Rome, but not yet set up." He then criticised the government for the situation in Southwest Africa.

VON BUELOW REPLIES TO BEBEL

He controverts the statements of the leader of the Socialists.

Chancellor von Buelow, in his reply, began by deprecating the idea that he intended to enter into a lengthy discussion of international politics with Herr Bebel. He pointed out that the quotation of the emperor's words was incorrect. The emperor's telegram, he said, expressed warm sympathy on account of the great calamity by which so many brave men had met death in the discharge of their duty. The chancellor added: "I am convinced that this expression of human sympathy corresponded with the sentiments of the majority of this high house and also with those of the majority of the people of Germany."

Applause from the right party followed this statement after which the chancellor expressed his regret at the manner in which many of the German newspapers, especially the comic publications, had utilized the recent calamities as a basis for malevolent, spiteful and ridiculing articles and caricatures. The chancellor pointed out Bebel's inconsistency in demanding strict neutrality in the Far Eastern war and then openly expressing the hope that Russia would be defeated.

Bebel had declared that the antipathies of the world were against Germany, and von Buelow said they existed in a measure as Herr Bebel had described, but if so, "that would only be a reason for maintaining our military equipment, so as to calmly anticipate any eventualities of the future, for no other means have been discovered to disarm unjustifiable hate and envy—for hate and envy against us is unjustifiable. Since our policy has been for thirty-three years eminently peaceful—than to keep the sword sharp." He defended the policy in Southwest Africa.

INJUNCTION WAS TARDY: DELEGATES WERE ON WAY

STANLEY IN LAST SLEEP

Noted African Explorer Succumbs to Pneumonia.

HIS CAREER UNIQUE

Fought on Both Sides in Our Civil War.

London, Eng., May 10.—Henry Morton Stanley, African explorer and the man who found Livingstone, died here last night of pneumonia.

Henry Morton Stanley was born near Delbigli, Wales, in 1840 and was brought up and educated in a poor house. At the age of 14 he shipped as a cabin boy on a sailing vessel bound to New Orleans, and there was adopted by a merchant named Stanley, and took his name, his own being John Rowlands. He served in the Confederate army, was taken prisoner, and then volunteered in the federal navy, becoming ensign on the ironclad Teconderoga. After the war he became a newspaper correspondent and special writer for the English expeditions to Abyssinia and Ashanti in 1885. In 1889 he was commissioned by the proprietor of a newspaper to visit the interior of Africa and find the long-lost missionary and explorer, Livingstone, and starting from Zanzibar in April, 1871, he met Livingstone at Ujiji Nov. 10. He subsequently explored the lake region of equatorial Africa, and of the Luabala-Congo in 1874-77, thus placing himself in the front rank of African travelers.

In Employ of Newspapers.

Under a joint commission from the New York Herald and the London Daily Telegraph Stanley started from the east coast of Africa in 1874, circumnavigated the Victoria Nyanza, marching across the country to the Albert Nyanza, and then coming south again, examined part of Tanganyika, and its outlet, ford Luabala. From Unyanyembe he pushed onward along the course of the Luabala, supported by a large party of followers and frequently having to repel violence by force of arms, and arriving at the Congo in August, 1877, and proved as correct the many surmises identifying the Congo with the great and many-named river issuing from the lake country of Tanganyika.

Honored in England.

After 12 years of further exploring in the dark continent, he returned to England, was given a degree of D. C. L. by Oxford, was presented with freedom of several cities, and June 18 was appointed governor of the Congo Free States by the king of Belgium. July 12 of the same year he was married in Westminster abbey to Miss Dorothy Tennant, a Welsh lady and an artist of note. Among the publications of which Stanley was the author are "How I Found Livingstone," "My Kuluah," "Compass," and others.
