It will indeed be a pity if Rock Island must buy a pump with a pull or none.

The queen of Greece is an admiral in the Russian navy. If the czar had put her in command of the Baltic fleet all might have gone well.

Unlike the victims of Mrs. Chadwick, those who lost money through Banker Dougherty of Peoria are not claiming that they were hypnotized.

Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania says the tariff will be revised "by its friends at the proper time." In the opinion of Mr. Dalzell the proper time will be the morning after Gabriel blows his trumpet.

President McCurdy, the Mutual's $150,000 prize president, is being real saucy now, that the New York insurance inquiry is getting closer to the vital points in the management of the "Mutual" institution.

If you were President McCurdy, sitting in a $2,000 chair, on a $12,000 rug in front of a $5,000 desk, and clipping off $150,000 a year in salary, wouldn't you be real saucy with any rule legislative committee which sought to interfere in your affairs?

One of the New York banks has adopted a most stringent rule against the use of intoxicants by its employees. Every man in the service of the bank has been required to sign an agreement that he will not even enter any place where intoxicants are sold. Two young men who had signed this pledge were summarily dismissed recently for taking a couple of young women into a fashionable restaurant after the theatre.

District Commissioner McFarland, of Washington, chairman of the national committee to consider the advisability of changing the date of the ceremony for the inauguration of the president of the United States, has issued a call for a meeting of the committee Nov. 8. The committee is composed of the governors of all the states and territories and 15 residents of the District of Columbia. Sentiment favoring a change of date is general, as March 4 in Washington is likely to be the most disagreeable day of the year.

The Lesson of the Hour.

J. Edward Simmons, president of the Fourth National bank of New York, addressed the Maryland Bankers' association the other day. He said that dishonesty in high places in the state, in the judiciary and in our great financial institutions and corporations, and the excuse of such acts by the masses gravely threaten the future of this country. He pointed to the lesson taught by the fall of the ancient Roman republic, the reign of terror in France, and the disasters which befell the Russian army in the recent conflict in the far east, all of which, he said, were due to palliated dishonesty.

He deplored the conditions which have led men to tolerate the terms "graft" and "grafters" and said he feared the very use of words was an indication of men tolerance of the thief and his trade.

He called upon the members of the association to give their assistance to remedying the conditions which make it possible "for men who pose as the salt of the earth and who condemn without reserve those who steal $50 or forge a check for $100 or accept a bribe, by misrepresentation, by fraud and by bribery," without receiving punishment or even criticism, while a man who steals a paltry sum is sent to jail.

He denounced the men of stainless private life, who, "in the interest of corporations, trusts, gas, railroad and insurance companies, have resource to every villainy" damned in the decalogue who do the deed of the highwayman with the air of a saint.

There is wholesome food for earnest thought in President Simmons' suggestions.

Preparing for Development.

The policy proposed by the commercial bodies of Japan for promoting industrial and commercial development is wise and comprehensive and if adopted by the government, as probably it will be, could not fail to have most beneficial results. One of the things recommended is the creation of government commercial agencies. These would be, under judicial management, a great assistance to the commercial interests of the country. Another suggestion is the establishment of dominating exhibitions of samples and museums in foreign ports. This might be a rather expensive method of advertising Japan's products, but very likely the results would justify the expense. The improvement of existing railroads and the rapid construction of new railroads is urged and undoubtedly the government will not hesitate to act upon this suggestion. It is to be expected that an era of railway construction in Japan will be entered upon at once and that this most essential requirement for the development of the country will be carried forward with the greatest possible energy. For this purpose the government will have no difficulty in obtaining whatever money it may need.

Japan is going to enter into very active competition with the rest of the world, not only for Asiatic trade, but for business everywhere, and it is safe to say that she will secure her share. Already there is being suggested a union of European countries to protect themselves against a possible Japanese invasion, and a movement of this kind may be made. At any rate it is well understood that Japan is going to be in the race for trade, with the probability that she will keep pretty close to the swiftest.

Democrats Can Win in Congressional Election.

Notwithstanding the tremendous odds against them in a general election, the democrats of the Fourteenth district can elect their congressman in the forthcoming special election if they determine to do so. In the first place, the party never had a stronger or more representative candidate than its present standard bearer, J. Howard Pattee. In the second place, the republican party has not before been so seriously handicapped in its candidate. While nothing should be said against the personal character of James McKinney, his nomination was due to his power and trickery as a politician and not to his popularity with his own party or with the people. Always identified with a political ring, he is essentially and typically a machine politician. In his membership on the state railroad and warehouse commission, which was his reward for party fealty, he had abundant opportunity to develop the rate question that is today agitating the people throughout the land in every state. Instead, he remained subservient to the influences and claims of the railroad interests, the action on the part of the commission in this respect, in which he was a participant, bringing forth the condemnation of the local commercial associations of most of the important cities of the state.

Mr. McKinney has been tried by, for, and in behalf of the people, and has been found wanting. Mr. Pattee has not coveted or desired public favor, but has been true to his political faith and doctrines at all times, regardless of his own interests, personal or commercial. He has stood in line with his party every time, believing that where its underlying principles were of such a character it could not err seriously in the issues that might from year to year develop or disappear.

Mr. Pattee has made an admirable impression during his visit in Rock Island today, many citizens, irrespective of politics, improving the opportunity to greet him, and all have been exceedingly pleased with him.

WASTING AWAY

It's the small but constant loss of flesh that indicates physical waste—the gradual slipping away of healthy flesh, pound by pound, which no ordinary food seems to restore. Scott's Emulsion will restore it. This Emulsion is the greatest flesh builder obtainable. Scott's Emulsion first stops the wasting—that's one gain. Then when it supplies new flesh and takes one back to normal strength and weight, that's another gain and a big one.

We'll send you a sample, free. SCOTT & BOWNE, 400 Pearl Street, New York.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A CASE IN DUPLICATE.

[Original.] Henry and Howard Corwith loved each other devotedly. Henry was four years older than Howard, but looked younger. He had been injured when a child, and this had retarded his development. When he was seven years old a cyclone passed over the town where they lived, leaving the swath of a gigantic scythe behind it. The brothers had been left alone in the house, Henry in charge of it and of his little brother Howard. At the time of the passage of the whirlwind Howard was asleep. Feeling the house crashing down upon them, Henry planted himself above his younger brother to protect him. When several hours later they were taken out from under the fallen timbers, Howard was found to be unhurt, but Henry had received severe injuries.

And now at twenty-six and twenty-two respectively Henry was small and thin and pale, Howard a well developed, stalwart man. Henry felt the same affection for his brother as when he had saved him from death. Howard lived under a constant reminder of the sacrifice Henry had made for him, and it was his aim to heap benefits upon the brother who had taken the burden that had permitted his own development. Howard was never so well pleased as at discovering some want of Henry's that he could supply. The pair were observed by their friends who said that if one brother married the other would receive a blow from which he would never recover.

Fortunately they both fell in love at the same time and with sisters. Henry became engaged to Della Martin, and Howard soon after became engaged to her sister Belle. It was said that Howard proposed to the sister of his brother's fiancée to save himself from being left with no one to love. However this may be, both brothers seemed satisfied.

Henry Corwith, deprived of the physique with which to live a strenuous life, found compensation in art. After learning all of his profession that could be drawn from American preceptors he resolved to go abroad to study. Belle Martin possessed musical tastes and concluded to take a course of music in Germany. It was agreed that the two should cross the ocean in the same vessel, and upon arrival Henry was to go to Paris, Belle to Berlin. They sailed in the autumn and were to return the following summer.

Howard Corwith endured the separation from his brother and his fiancée as best he could. Howard and Della had a common interest and naturally turned to each other for comfort. Each found in the other a listener into whose ear to pour a story of enforced separation. Howard talked of Belle, and Della talked of Henry. The interchange of sympathy was perfect.

Ten months passed. Henry and Belle wrote that they would meet in Southampton and return on the same steamer. Howard's friends, when apprised of his brother's and his fiancée's return congratulated him warmly, but Howard, instead of looking happy over the approaching reunion, wore a troubled look. As the time for the absent ones' return drew near this evidence of some secret dread increased, and on the day of the arrival Howard seemed threatened with nervous prostration.

Della Martin went to New York to meet her sister, the two girls having arranged to pass a few days in the city. Howard Corwith sent word that he was not well enough to go on to meet his brother and his fiancée, and Henry on reaching port took the first train home. Howard drove to the station for him. At their meeting Henry noticed that Howard looked right past him, avoiding meeting his eye. Henry sighed and bent his head. The pressure of hands was cold and the meeting entirely devoid of warmth. As they drove home together Henry said: "Fletcher came to see you, I suppose, and brought you the commissions I gave him for you?"

"Yes," Henry sighed and gazed far away. "Fletcher told me all about you," said Howard.

"So I supposed," said Henry. "It was a pleasant season for you and Belle to be together in Switzerland."

"Fletcher spoke of it?"

"Yes."

By this time they reached the house and, alighting, went into the library, where they had so often smoked and talked and exchanged confidences. Then Henry said:

"Howard, this thing is killing you."

"How do you know it?" Howard asked, quickly looking up at his brother.

"I knew Fletcher would give you the facts," replied Henry without noting the question. "I saw what was on your mind the moment I arrived."

"You are right in assuming that it is killing me. To think that you who have borne the burden for me all these years and must always bear it should have such a brother!"

"What do you mean, Howard?"

"I mean that I am a dog. You know it as well as I. But what could I do? We have been thrown together constantly ever since you and Belle went away. I thought I loved Belle. Now I know I love Della. I have robbed you of her."

Henry went to his brother and threw his arms around his neck. "If you don't know it already," he said, "I'll tell you that I've robbed you of Belle."

Howard looked at his brother in a dazed fashion while he gathered his faculties, then exclaimed:

"Great heavens! Suppose either of us had proved faithful!"

TWO ROUTES TO CALIFORNIA

Via El Paso through New Mexico.
Via Colorado through the Rockies.

Rock Island through service both ways.

By way of El Paso very quick time is made—it is the line of lowest altitudes and longest level stretches.

By way of Colorado time is not a factor, as the journey over the "backbone of the continent" is superb.

Very low rates in September and October for the trip to California.
