THE WHITE HOUSE. Madison's Part In Giving the Executive Mansion Its Name. Just how the White House came to be so designated is a question on which historians differ. A local historian in Washington thinks that the burden of proof tends to give credit for the name to President Madison. The structure was made of Potomac river freestone, and the capitol proper was built of the same stone. At the time the British burned the executive mansion they did a lot of other damage, and the country was pressed for money to repair the same. The walls of the mansion were only slightly damaged, other than being blackened by smoke. Money was scarce, and congress made an appropriation to have the outside of the house painted. White was selected as the best color. Madison in a letter to a personal friend wrote: "Come in and see me at any time. You will always find me in at the White House." -The executive mansion may have been called the White House before tween Seventh and Twelfth avenues on Twelfth street. Return to B. B. Heaviling, 14½ Rock Island street, Davenport, or to H. F. Paulsen, 1201 Twelfth street, city.

been called the White House before that time, but this investigator says that he has never been able to find any record of it. If Madison did not officiate at the christening it has been er phatically stated by the historian that he took a prominent part in publishing the fact that the White House was to be the name of the mansion. Up to the time of President Madison the executive mansion, which is the legal name for it, was generally spoken of as the president's house, but since then it has been known by its

change. A MEAL FOR A TIGER.

Nature has made the tiger unequaled In the combination of speed, strength, cunning, daring and physical beauty. A tiger's first bounds are so rapid as to bring it alongside an antelope, and a blow of its paw will stun a charging bull. It has been known to spring over a wall five feet high into a cattle pen and to jump back with a full grown animal in its jaws. Sportsmen say they have known it to carry away the bait while they were putting up the shelters from which to shoot it. It is a fact, however, that the tiger makes no pritense to invincible courage, as may be seen in the instance of one kept in the Calcutta zoological and claims collected. A soldier owned a fighting ram, which became so troublesome it had to be sent to the 200. There it caused so much annoyance it was decided to give it to the great tiger.

The tiger was so ferocious its food was let down through a sliding grating in the roof of its cage. The ram ram, not knowing he was intended to be food for the big beast, supposed the All the news an the time-The stretching was the signal for a fight. Stepping nimbly back to the farthest
