

JAPAN'S DOWAGER BORNE TO GRAVE

Pomp Marks Funeral as Cortege Moves Through the Streets of Tokio.

SERVICES IN NEW TEMPLE

Body Interred Near Mausoleum of the Late Emperor Mutsuhito—Is Solemn Pageant.

Tokio, Japan, May 28.—A million torches and lanterns illuminated Tokio Sunday night when the body of the Empress Dowager Haruko was borne through the streets in a beautiful funeral car drawn by white oxen. There had been no pageant of such solemn grandeur here since the funeral of Emperor Mutsuhito, a year and a half ago.

Practically the entire American colony viewed the procession from various points of vantage. It is a rule that no Japanese subjects may look down upon a royal pageant from elevated points, whether the royalties be dead or alive. In strict observance of this, every door and window above the first floors along the funeral route was closed and dark.

The ceremonies Sunday night were the culmination of a series of services held daily since the official death of the empress dowager on April 11. Her actual death occurred two days earlier at Numadzu, but tradition prescribes that no member of the imperial family can die outside the capital, so the body of the empress was conveyed to Tokio, and driven to the Oayama palace in the closed private carriage. At this palace she "officially" died a few hours later.

Funeral at Special Temple. In the six weeks since then a special temple was erected on the Yoyagi military field, southwest of the city, where the main funeral service was held. In the morning the service of "installation of the spirit" was performed with great ceremony. The emperor, the empress, princes, and princesses of the blood were present to pray before the shrine.

By noon crowds, augmented by thousands from the country, filled the streets. The people stood for hours waiting for the cortege. At dusk when the illumination of the route had been completed the im-

TO GIVE RECITALS AT PANAMA EXPO

Edwin H. Lemare.

San Francisco, Cal., May 28.—Lovers of music the world over who have waited for the announcement of the name of the musician who will preside over the mammoth organ in the Festival hall at the Panama-Pacific exposition will receive with satisfaction the announcement that the artist on whom stellar honors have fallen is none other than the renowned British organist and composer, Edwin H. Lemare.

Although Lemare has crossed the Atlantic an even 50 times on his artistic pilgrimages, this will be his first trip to San Francisco since the day eight years ago when he came through the Golden Gate on a steamer from Australia, only to find the city a roaring mass of flame. So widespread is his fame that he has been referred to on every continent as the greatest master of the king of instruments. What Paderevski is to the piano, Lemare is to the pipe organ. Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians says of him: "Since the death of W. T. Best, Lemare has been generally considered the most brilliant of contemporary organists. He excels in the representation of orchestral works upon the organ, but his playing of legitimate organ music is remarkably artistic and intelligent."

Mr. Lemare is well known as a composer and arranger for this most difficult and popular of instruments. His standard transcription of the greatest orchestral works now number 120, and these are in demand by organists in every country.

perial coffin was placed in the funeral car at Oayama palace and the procession formed with a large military force at its head. Amid dull yellow and white banners and torches came the funeral commissioners, accompanied by their secretaries, and court servants dressed in ancient robes. Interspersed were men bearing evergreen trees.

Cortege Advances Almost Noiseless. The advance of the cortege was almost noiseless, the streets having been covered with a thick layer of sand. The funeral flutes were heard as the funeral car itself approached. It was led by Baron Hatano, ministers of the imperial household, a striking figure in white, whose way was emblazoned by torches.

Later came hundreds of priests and bearers of the court gongs and the tambours, and of many colored streamers and banners. The princes of the blood, each with his retinue, holders of high imperial orders, lords-in-waiting, members of the diet and several regiments of military and bodies of marines swelled the line.

Emperor at Temple Gateway.

A sacred gateway marked the entrance to the temple ground. The emperor and empress had already arrived and were seated on a throne near the principal shrine, while the diplomatic corps, including George W. Guthrie, the American ambassador, also had taken their places in a reserved section.

Standing watch fires, in imitation of those used in the imperial court yards in ancient days, made up of pine faggots, were ablaze in various parts of the temple in iron baskets set on tripods. When the funeral car had been drawn up before the chief shrine the dirge was chanted and food offerings were given. Other offerings included gold brocade, damasks, silks and silk thread, all placed in a box made of willow branches. The president of the United States sent a silver wreath and there were floral tributes from the heads of many other nations.

The emperor paid his homage by reading an address. He was followed by others representing the court and the empire. These over, the curtains were drawn before the shrine and the imperial coffin was borne to a train conveying it to Momoyama, near Kioto, to be laid in a plot of land near the mausoleum of the Emperor Mutsuhito. At the departure, cannon thundered from Shinagawa bay, several miles away, and a vast body of mourners bowed their last reverences.

In commemoration of the funeral an imperial ordinance was issued commencing the punishment of many persons serving terms of imprisonment.

ENTHUSIASM VIES WITH PERSPIRATION IN GAME

In a series of games notable for enthusiasm and perspiration, a team of Presbyterian volley ball experts defeated a team of Methodist exponents of the game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. The games were played after prayer meeting by two teams picked from the business men's gymnasium class. While the Presbyterians succeeded in taking the series, they did so by a very narrow margin, each game being warmly contested. A friendly swim after the games served to cool off the players and to restore all sentiments of good-fellowship that might have been lost during the play. The Methodists lined up thus: J. F. Witter, H. K. Walker, F. K. Rhoads, A. L. Bruner, N. G. Griffiths, Edwin Dica. The Presbyterian team included Rev. D. A. Johnson, C. J. Montgomery, Andrew Gross, R. C. Smedley, H. D. Winbiger and H. C. Fulmer, the latter being loaned by the Methodists to complete the Presbyterian team. Wilfred Hoffman took Smedley's place in the last half. Some more games of this sort will probably be arranged in the near future, as the rivalry is quite lively between some of the teams. It is estimated that close to $2,000,000 has been spent in building and equipping hydro-electric plants in the United States, which amount may be doubled in 1917.
