

SUCCESS CLAIMED FOR FEEDING PLAN

County Officers Assert That Better Meals are Served at Jail Than Before.

COST NOW BUT 15 CENTS A DAY

"Boarders" Like Nations Here Better Than Those Furnished in Davenport.

Opinion of those who are engineering the enterprise is that Rock Island county prisoners are better fed now at a daily cost of 14.87 cents each than they were when the county was paying the sheriff 30 cents for maintenance of each person.

Expert testimony to support their contention goes back some 40 years. Far from it, Mrs. Wagoner speaks with candor and intimate knowledge upon this subject as unprejudiced follows who served terms during the time when the sheriff fed the prisoners and who have visited the jail as guests of the county since the jail committee assumed control of the commissariat.

Scientific Menu No. It might be suspected that to obtain such results, the committee would have to adopt ultra-scientific methods of feeding the men, prescribing so much protein, a certain amount of casein, a definite proportion of starchy food, etc., for each individual. But no, some home economics, dietetics and other similar studies have nothing to do with the furnishing of provender.

Real Coffee Now. One loaf of bread for each man, a half pound of meat, some potatoes and perhaps a side dish of vegetables are given the inmates each day. The fare of bread and molasses still is served at breakfast, but instead of the chicory which used to be part of the morning meal, the county is serving real coffee.

At noon the meat and potato course is served. For supper there is the common meal of the morning, with the exception that twice or perhaps three times a week hot beans or other vegetables are served.

The food is as varied as possible, doing away to a certain extent with the old tremendously monotonous menus which have been prevailing. Some of the county's guests who are familiar with the inside of the Scott county jail dining room make a claim for a place among the epicures by stating positively that Rock Island county's 15 cent meals are superior to those served across the river where the sheriff is allowed 30 cents a day for the board of each man.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only a part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, backaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidney or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

JULIET BATTLES KIN FOR HER MAX

Defies Parents for Her Gardener Husband Is Assertion Made in the Breitung Suit.

New York, April 24.—The devotion with which Mrs. Juliet Breitung-Kleist fought for her young husband, Max F. Kleist, who is now using his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Breitung of New York and Chicago, for $250,000 for alienation of her affections, was depicted yesterday before Judge Hough in the federal district court by Ada Gafner, one time maid for the Breitungs.

Though she had testified at the first trial, she recalled between times some additional things that happened between Juliet and her father in a discussion concerning the future of young Kleist.

The maid described in detail the pleadings which Mrs. Kleist, the brown eyed, self-possessed young woman who sat beside her parents in the court room, made to her father in behalf of the young gardener whom she had married clandestinely.

The father had proposed giving Kleist a job in a mine in New Mexico, and at first Mrs. Kleist had protested. She had vowed her love for the young man after Mr. Breitung had told her, according to the maid, who overheard the conversation, that if she went away with Kleist he, the father, would have him arrested for non-support, but that if Kleist went west for six months and made good Juliet could have him.

Mrs. Kleist, according to the maid, then produced a list of questions and said to her father: "Now, I want you to answer these questions."

The questions, as developed by E. G. Crowley, attorney for Kleist, and Delancy Nicoll, attorney for the Breitungs, on the cross-examination, were practically as follows:

Would Kleist be made foreman of the mine in New Mexico as soon as it developed sufficiently, and would he start to work out there at once practically as an assistant to the foreman?

Mr. Breitung, according to the maid, promised that Kleist would.

Would Juliet be allowed to write twice a week to her young husband? She would, so the maid testified.

Would Juliet be allowed to see Max at Christmas, then a few days away? The father promised, according to the maid.

Would she be allowed to see her husband twice a year, if he went west? Mr. Breitung promised, the maid said, that his daughter would.

Then the maid went on to relate a talk that occurred between Mrs. Kleist and her mother. The maid charged that Mrs. Breitung was trying to prevail on her daughter to give up Kleist.

"I don't want you to have a manure shovel for a husband," Mrs. Breitung was quoted as having said. "One of these days you will be one of the richest women in the United States. You can make a better match than that."

The maid testified that there was a quarrel between Juliet and her mother, and that Juliet came out of the conflict with a black eye and a torn shirtwaist. There was another quarrel a few days afterward, the maid said, and blows were struck.

Mrs. Breitung ordered me not to let Juliet get any letters written by Max to her and told me not to let her telephone to Max. But Juliet said she loved Max very dearly, and she

What Place Is This?

You have been on the train hundreds of times and heard this question asked whenever the train stops at a station or goes through a town. This is especially true at night when, on account of the lights, many times a town appears larger than it really is. The answer is wrong in 90% of the cases, showing that the traveling public know very little of the locations of towns they pass through.

The up-to-date towns are at the present time placing electric signs with very large letters, containing only the name of the town. These signs are generally placed one to two hundred feet away from the train so they readily catch the eye of the passengers, and are easily read, even though the trains do not stop. It is hard to imagine any better advertising than this. When people are riding on the train as a general rule their minds are not occupied, and are very receptive. The name of the town in letters ten feet high of startling brilliancy impresses them very decidedly and they never can thereafter forget the road that the town is on or about where it is.
