CHILD ATTACKED BY AN ANGRY COW

Son of Nels Monson is Near Death When Animal Gores Lad While at Play Near Moline.

WOMAN PLAYS PART OF HEROINE

Mrs. Anna Bishop of Deere Farm Prevents Boy From Being Trampled to Death.

But for the quick action of Mrs. Anna Bishop, living on the Deere experimental farm, Albert Monson, 2-year-old son of Nels Monson, would have been seriously injured or killed by a maddened cow yesterday afternoon.

The animal escaped from its keepers near Thirty-seventh street, Moline, and after making an ineffectual attempt to injure them, attacked and gored the child playing in a yard nearby.

The boy was gored under the right eye. Horns of the infuriated animal also grazed the left side of his head, tearing the scalp.

Mrs. Bishop was passing at the time and saw the cow, foaming at the mouth and bellowing, dash at the frightened child.

She was too late to prevent the animal's onslaught, but she snatched the boy from its path and barely in time to save him from being trampled to death beneath the flying hoofs.

The cow is said to be the property of Dr. A. H. Arp of Moline and had been removed from a cattle car in the freight yards only a short time before.

Animal Is Ugly. It was in an ugly temper at the time and almost immediately attacked the man who was attempting to lead it with a rope. The man succeeded in leading the horns, but he was forced to drop the rope.

Following and foaming at the mouth, according to witnesses, the animal dashed through the east end and turned aside to attack the little child playing in the yard. Only Mrs. Bishop's opportune interference saved the baby from probable death.

Dr. E. B. Gatzinger was summoned and attended to the little one's injuries. While painful, these are said not to be serious. Had the horns struck a half inch higher, however, the baby's right eye would have been gouged from its socket.

Dr. Arp, learning of the accident, later visited the child and is assisting Dr. Gardner in caring for him.

WIFE OF DOPE FIELD SENT TO WATERTOWN

Mrs. Lillian Sherman, was sent to the Watertown hospital yesterday for mental treatment. She was addicted to the use of drugs and after being examined by the medical board composed of Dr. E. Bradford and Dr. R. H. Miller, it was recommended that she be sent to the Watertown institution for treatment.

She is the wife of Fred Sherman, an alleged dope head, who was recently arrested for the theft of Justice of Peace J. W. Mawker's automobile and later sent to Watertown hospital for treatment.

NELLIE BAROMETER

BY MAURICE ELLIOTT.

Nellie Barometer was the child of a poor but respectable thermometer salesman. Nellie's papa was hardly able to make both ends meet, so therefore decided that Nell must go to work. She secured a position as a longshoreman in a peanut butter factory. This kind of employment did not suit Nell's father. He wanted his Nell to join the navy. She promptly told her mother's husband that it was no use of his trying to force her to do something that she did not like. The old man was so disappointed in his Nell that when he died he cut her off without a cent. It was up to Nell to do something useful, so she decided to become a Red Cross nurse. Nell's mother (her father's widow) plead with her not to take this course. But Nell insisted, with the result that Mrs. Barometer gave her consent.

It was in 490 B. C. that Nell witnessed the first battle. It was the battle of Marathon, in which the Persian hosts were defeated by the Greeks under Miltiades. Nell told us herself that this scrap was started by the Marathon family. It seems that a Mr. and Mrs. Marathon were sitting on the front porch of their residence, having their maps photographed alone in a group, when a Greek rhapsodist happened to be passing. Mrs. Marathon asked the rhapsodist if he was married. The rhapsodist being a woman-hater, took this as an insult. He immediately started to look for Miltiades. At this period Miltiades was head bartender at the Dardanelles, a leading hotel in Constantinople. By mere luck the rhapsodist found Miltiades under the influence of that terrible home-wrecker, grape juice. After hearing the rhapsodist's story, and being intoxicated with such a beverage, it did not take him long to gather up an army. According to Nell, the Persian hosts were close friends of the Marathon family; that is how they came to get mixed up in this affair. Old Man Marathon told the Persian hosts that now was the time for them to show their friendship. The Persian hosts called a mass meeting on the roof of the Woolworth building, in the village of New York, with the result that they decided to help the Marathons. Nell says this battle was fought about twenty miles outside of King Edward land, with the result that the Persian hosts were spanked severely.

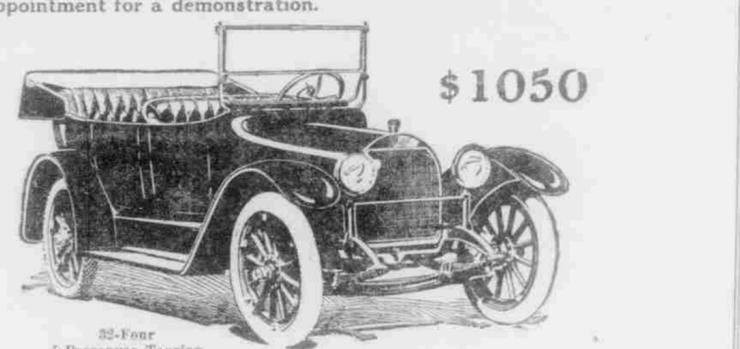

Nell then asked us if we were sleepy. We said, "no." Then Nell said, "Let me tell you of another experience I had." We said, "shoot." And Nell went on as follows: About A. D. 9 the Roman legions under Varus were

SELL TICKETS FOR FATS VS. LEANS GAME

Tickets are now on sale for the ball game between the "Fats" and "Leans," which is to be played at the Island City park Tuesday, Sept. 28. The game will be called at 5:30 sharp. The proceeds of the contest will go to the benefit of the Associated Charities.

R. H. Henley, captain of the Leans, believes he has an aggregation assembled for the coming battle that will be able to square through the tightest of places and cop the victory.
