

One Dyspepsia Cure.
The cure of dyspepsia is surely to be effected only by the adoption of negative means. Commission will do nothing, mission everything.

Mr. A. J. Cox, the binder, thinks differently. He believes heartily in the uses of commission. For years he had dyspepsia in all its forms and phases, it became reduced to the attenuated condition of a skeleton. Folks used to stop in the street to look at him. Life became a veritable burden to him.

"This sort of thing went along," says Mr. Cox, "until finally I grew very tired. One evening I sat down and made an estimate of the drugs I had taken, the doctors' bills I had paid, etc. As I figured it, the medicine I had consumed in six years cost more and weighed more than the victuals I had eaten. I had spent on doctors enough money to fill a dozen bookcases with first editions. I made up my mind to reform. That night I dreamed that Solomon came to me and presented me with a cake. Next morning I went down to breakfast; they had sausages and buckwheats.

"Your tea and dry toast will be here in a moment," said my wife.

"Yes, well, when it comes," says I, "you can feed it to the canary birds. I'm going to tackle some of those sausages."

"Wife protested, but in vain. I just filled myself full of hot, juicy sausages, and of buckwheat cakes too.

"There," says I to myself, or rather says I to my stomach, "you can wrestle with that dose for a day or two. I've got plenty o' time to spare, and I'm going to down you, god darn you! even though it takes a natural lifetime!"

"Well, sir, you may not believe it, but I never had a sign of dyspepsia after that. I went right along eating anything and everything, but never an ache or a pain had I. This morning I had a pickled horseshoe and toasted cheese for breakfast; this noon I ate a broiled lobster garnished with green cucumbers and clotted cream; tonight I shall have boiled cabbage, goose livers and suet pudding for dinner. I am a marvel of health, and have been so ever since I determined not to let my stomach have its own way. There's no dyspeptic in the world who can't master his stomach if he only makes up his mind to!"—Eugene Field in Chicago News.

A Literary Suggestion.
How did your novel, 'The Gutter-snipe; or, Mud's Thicker Than Water,' go?

"Very badly," replied the novelist wistfully. "What sort of a book do you think would catch the popular fancy?"

"Why not try a posthumous novel?"—New York Recorder.

You have certainly made this coat very much too small for me."

"That is very easy to remedy, my dear sir. All you have to do is to make it fit to take a trip to Carlsbad."—Fliedende Blatter.

Radiant Beauty.
Sunway—Is this Miss Scadds you speak of beautiful?

Hunker—Is she beautiful? Why, sir, I never saw a car so crowded that she couldn't get a seat in it.—New York Sun.

A Forced Laugh.
"I really don't see how you can laugh at such a silly remark."

"Ha! ha! old chappie; can't help it, you know. I owe the fellow a hundred florins."—Der Floh.

All Arranged.
"You miss continually!"

"It is really of no consequence, you see. The hares know well enough that I mean to hit them."—Fliedende Blatter.

A Real Balsam is Kemp's Balsam. The dictionary says, "a balsam is a thick, pure, aromatic substance flowing from trees." Kemp's Balsam for the throat and lungs is the only cough medicine that is a real balsam. Many thin, watery cough remedies are called balsam's but such are not. Look through a bottle of Kemp's Balsam and notice what a pure, thick preparation it is. If you could use Kemp's Balsam. At all druggists. Large bottles 50c and $1.

In the pursuit of the good things of this world we anticipate too much; we eat out the heart and sweetness of worldly pleasures by delightful forethought of them. The results obtained from the use of Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic far exceed all claims. It cures dyspepsia, and all stomach, liver, kidney and bladder troubles. It is a perfect tonic, appetizer, blood purifier, a sure cure forague and malarial diseases. Price, 50 cents, druggists.

Do You Cough?

Don't delay. Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure. It will cure your coughs and colds. It will cure pains in the chest. It will cure influenza and bronchitis and all diseases pertaining to the lungs because it is a pure balsam. Hold it to the light and see how clear and thick it is. You will see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Large bottles 50c and $1.

Advertising

It is said will sell anything, this is true in a measure; but for staying qualities, merit is the test. Extensive advertising may sell anything where it is new or unknown, but after it comes into general use, it is judged according to its worth. The continued and steady growth of Swift's Specific is the best evidence of its excellence. It is most popular where it is best known. Every bottle sold, sells ten others. Every one that takes it becomes its friend, and recommends it to their acquaintances.
