West Virginia Problem.

A knotty legal question has come to the surface in Webster county, says the Morgantown Chronicle. One man stole another man's skunk. It was a wild animal which was privileged to roam where it pleased, and it recognized no owner, lord or master. But in the course of its perambulations it entered upon the land of a man named Ziccofoose, who set up a claim to the visitor because it was on his land, and when a predatory mountaineer came down like a wolf on the fold and carried away the dead carcass of the animal Mr. Ziccofoose set up a claim; that it was his property. Was it?

Courtship in Mexico.

Starting at the windows of their adored ones is the way Mexican lovers woo. If the young woman is agreeable, she will appear at the window after several days, and they thus become acquainted.
