JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION NOTES,

The Jamestown Exposition near Norfolk, Va., next year, will be open longer than any similar enterprise yet held in the United States. It is to run from April 26 to November 30, seven months and five days.

The Arts and Crafts Village at the Jamestown Exposition will be a feature never before seen at a national celebration. It is bound to be one of the great attractions, and being something new it will be visited by millions.

The Jamestown Exposition will be one vast Colonial city in architecture, environment, art and industrial activity. The exhibition visitor will live during his stay in an atmosphere of Colonial romance and history. To paraphrase Napoleon's famous remark at the Pyramids, "Three centuries will look down upon you."

Lee's Parade, the large space set aside on the grounds of the Jamestown Exposition for the drill work of the military bodies from all nations is named in honor of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the greatest Confederate chieftain and one of Virginia's favorite sons. These military parades and drills will surpass any that have been held.

The evolution of war craft and other shipping will be portrayed at the Jamestown Exposition next year, not by pictures and drawings, but by real wood and metal models of correct size. The three ships which brought the first settlers across from England to Jamestown will be reproduced faithfully, riding at anchor off the exposition grounds in Hampton Roads.

Norfolk and the neighboring towns and cities in Tidewater Virginia are making extensive preparations to handle the vast throngs of visitors who will attend the Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition in 1907. In addition to the scores of hotels and the hundreds of boarding houses already in these cities and summer resorts by the sea many new hotels of a temporary character though well built, are being constructed near the grounds.

FOR WANT OF MEDICAL AID AN ANDERSON YOUTH DIES.

Anderson, Sept. 1.—Baxter Hayes' little boy who was refused medical attention by his parents on the ground that they could cure their son by divine healing, died this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The case has excited great indignation in the city. Hayes is an itinerant preacher. He believes in the doctrine of faith cure. He refused to let a physician attend the suffering boy, seeking to save him by means of prayer.

The statute law provides no remedy for cases of this kind, but prosecutions will probably follow, as it is believed that the common law provides adequate punishment under the general head of "neglect and illegal treatment." —State.
