THE LETTER HOME.

Merrily o'er the tossing sea

The gallant vessel flies,

Her bows in the frolic waves,

The laughing wind and sky;

Silver streaks, it stretches back

With purple waves and foam,

And echoes of her flapping sails

Breathes in the letter home.

The sailor, brown with sun and wind,

The hearty, bold and free,

Laughs a song in every port,

A jest for all has he;

Nor here nor there is now his care,

His heart forsakes the main,

And with a fond familiar speech

Turns to his own again!

Once more before his dreamy gaze

The low green hills appear,

The pond where sailed his painted fleet,

The friendly roof and dear;

With walks and grassy mead and bay,

With planks and pines and elm,

And where the wrinkled mother waits

Whose thoughts are all for him.

Merrily o'er the bounding sea

The gallant vessel flies,

But waves and perils range the deep,

And clouds and tempests rise,

And many a wreck and whirlwind black

Lead to the letter home.

Then blossoms on the joyful day

That bears a letter home.

A BOON TO GRUMBLERS.

They Could Drop a Nickel in the Slot and Get Kicked Soundly.

"I have a scheme," said a stock speculator the other day, "for making a heap of money. For years and years I've heard men complain down here and declare that they ought to be kicked. I don't know how many hundreds of times, when I've been standing near a ticker, I've seen a man drop the nickel and exclaim, angrily, 'In an idiot—I ought to be kicked,' or perhaps he would announce his intention to kick himself full of holes. Unfortunately—or fortunately—his friends don't feel like accommodating him, and as to the other plan nature has prohibited that. My plan is to have built a number of law figures, with interior mechanical arrangements, which would put a wooden foot into action upon the dropping of a nickel into the slot. They could be placed in convenient localities.

"Thus these grumblers could gratify their wishes to be kicked. The man who bought stocks and lost his money would be known he ought to have sold—and their number is legion—could go to one of the figures, drop a nickel in the slot, and get kicked. If one kick didn't satisfy him he could introduce another nickel and get another kick. The worst grumbler in the street could gratify himself by the outlay of fifty cents. It would be a boon to the man who had a straight tip and didn't take it, and to the man who 'knew Kalamazoo' preferred was going up, but down the day. If all these fellows who were continually kicking themselves about kicking themselves would put their threats into practical form a company formed for the manufacture of the machines would grow rich in no time.

"Yes," said another speculator, "that is a good idea. It would prevent a repetition, perhaps, of an unfortunate occurrence which I recently witnessed. One of my friends, ordinarily a very peaceable man, lost several thousand dollars by the rapid decline of a certain stock. He declared that he had bought it against his judgment. He was so upset that he flew out of the broker's office in a terrible frame of mind. On the street he looked around for some way to 'get even' with the market. He saw an innocent man having his boots polished. He rushed up to him, kicked the bootblack's box into the middle of the street, and gave the gentleman a sounding smack on the cheek.

"'Confound you,' he said, 'you're always getting your boots blacked.'"

—New York Times.

Some Pretty Compliments.

When the great Duke of Wellington was on his way to see what was going on in the cotton market, he paid a sterling compliment to the ladies of the city by saying, "If I had heard it as much as a promotion in rank would have done.

"A little absurdly about a compliment often gives it point. A Spanish lover is reported to have said to his mistress, "I don't see your eyes; I want to fight to kill a man for you."

Mrs. Moore, the widow of the poet, was noted for her benevolence to the poor in the vicinity of their country residence. On one occasion a guest remarked, "I take it for granted that no one is dying in our neighborhood, or we should not be favored with Mrs. Moore's company."

Not long ago, when a brief matrimonial engagement was broken off, a new relation of the gentleman, one who fully appreciated the value of the ties of her from whom the same thing had been sundered, said to the young lady: "You have only lost an ideal; he has lost a reality." A sweet compliment this, under the circumstances.

A Metal That Melts Easily.

A metal that will melt at such a low temperature as 160 degrees is certainly a curiosity, but John E. White, of Syracuse, N. Y., has succeeded in producing it. It is an alloy composed of lead, bismuth and cadmium, and in weight, hardness and color resembles typical metal. So easily does it melt that if you place it on a comparatively cool part of the stove with a piece of paper under it, it will melt without the paper being scorched. Another peculiarity of the metal is that it is not heated, and becomes cold the moment it melts. It is used in the manufacture of the little automatic fire alarm for hotels. They give an electric alarm when the metal melts owing to the rising of the temperature by fire.

—Washington Critic.

Persuading Misses.

While in southern California I found that there were many men working singly in places remote under most adverse circumstances, and obtaining very small remuneration for their toil. Some of them succeeded in washing out but $2 or $3 worth of gold dust per day, while a few of them occasionally washed out as high as $10 worth per day. Many of them remain a very short time in the diggings, but others work away year after year in the hope of striking it rich some day.

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Cocaine Habit.

The cocaine habit takes its place beside the morphine habit, with symptoms of marasmus, delusions and hallucinations of frightful appearances and small living things creeping on the skin, together with insomnia and loss of appetite. The symptoms of cocaine poisoning are more obstinate than those of morphine, and may last for months after the cessation of the drug.

—Cor. Washington Star.

Glow on This, Girls.

A chowing gum manufacturer announces a fortune of $1,000,000. Let's see. Say six sticks for five cents; five into 100,000,000 goes 20,000,000 times. Twenty million times six equals 120,000,000 sticks of gum. Great heavens, girls!

—Washington Post.

Foreign Commerce of the South.

The increase of the south's foreign commerce for 1889 over the year before was $66,958,738, nearly half that of the whole country, a showing which the entire nation should be proud of.
