Oil For Battleships.

The last American battleship that will burn coal has been built. The big ones now building have no coal bunkers and no arrangement for burning coal. They are oil burners.

"What is the advantage?" I asked a United States naval officer.

"There are many advantages in oil," he replied. "First we can steam farther with a given number of tons of oil than with the same number of tons of coal. We can also store the oil more advantageously, for it will fill corners in a ship where coal could not be placed.

"A very big advantage, however, is in the reduced number of men required to handle the boilers. One man with oil can take the place of four men shoveling coal. Usually the oil is sprayed into the furnace, but there are several methods of applying the oil."

This officer said that the United States will have some very valuable oiling stations in Alaska. Arrangements are already making to establish oiling stations in place of coaling stations in various other parts of the world.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Roses in the Day's Work.

To the attention of those persons who believe they have done all they should do when they have worked the specified number of hours and performed the duties specified in their bonds the example of W. H. Bancroft, vice president of the Salt Lake road, is respectfully referred.

When Mr. Bancroft was a younger man he acted as agent at a way station in a deserted part of the west. One day the president of the road happened to stop and noticed, to his surprise, that instead of the usual bare surroundings the small shack was literally set in a bower of roses. He went inside, took a look at Bancroft, got his name and put him down for promotion.

"A man who will take such care of company property would be a good man in a higher place," he said as the train pulled out. And Mr. Bancroft has been going higher ever since.

There are a good many ways of planting roses about our everyday work. Anyway, it's an experiment worth the trying.—New York American.

Family Baseball.

Charley Smith, father of Ben Smith, partner of Hugh Jennings on the vaudeville stage, practically introduced semi-professional baseball into Newark, N. J. Charley Smith caught for a semi-professional team, while Ben played right field. This is one of the few cases where a father and son played on the same outfit. There are only two other instances we can recall. One is when Jim O'Rourke, the old Giant, played with his son on the Bridgeport team in the Connecticut league. The other is when the father of Kid Carsey, the old Philadelphia and St. Louis pitcher, taught the Kid to pitch when he was a youngster pitching for semipro teams around New York and vicinity. Carsey senior was the Kid's catcher.

New Zealand Exposition.

Auckland is making vigorous preparation for an industrial, agricultural and mining exposition, to be opened on Dec. 1 next. Since the last exhibition was held, in 1890, the population of Auckland has doubled, and the city is today the metropolis of New Zealand and one of the most important ports in Australasia. Although the coming exposition is not advertised as "international," every attention will be given to exhibits coming from abroad. The United States has a total annual trade with New Zealand of about $10,750,000. The value of its exports to this country for 1911 was $8,200,029, which amount will be exceeded by the value of the exports for 1912.—Consular and Trade Reports.

Not Enough Goatskins.

The present demand for goat kid skins exceeds anything of the kind before known, and the remotest places in India, South America and Europe and everywhere else goats are kept are now visited by collectors to obtain them. This demand arises from the recent discovery of new methods of treating the skins, which not only make them a substitute for calf kid as shoe leather, but also render them suitable for us in dress trimming. When specially dyed and finished they find great favor with dressmakers and are used for vests, strappings, pings, blouses and even for undershirts for country wear. They also play a part in recent millinery.—New York Tribune.

Coined "Home Rule."

In view of the passage of the home rule bill by the house of commons it is interesting to recall the beginning of that movement. According to Barry O'Brien, author of "The Life of Charles Stewart Parnell," it was at a meeting at the Hilton hotel, Dublin, in 1870 that the movement was launched, and it was Isaac Butt, counsel for the Fenian prisoners, who invented the phrase "home rule." He thought these words reasonable and innocent, while the old cry of "Repeal" would frighten the English.—New York Sun.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM Baking Powder

Purity in food, lower cost of living—these are the demands of the day.

Pure food is health, and health is economy itself. We cannot have health without healthful food.

The most healthful foods are the quickly raised flour foods—biscuit, cake, muffins, crusts and other pastry, when perfectly made from wholesome ingredients.

Dr. PRICE'S baking powder makes these foods in specially attractive, appetizing and wholesome form, and for both economic and hygienic reasons, such food should be more largely substituted for meat in the daily diet.

But bear in mind that alum, or unwholesome baking powder, can never make pure, wholesome food.

Fair Sample.

Mr. Follett and little Edward were sitting meekly in the corner where they had been placed by Mrs. Follett, well out of the way of her evening's work. Little Edward was reading the "History of the Town of Dorby" to his grandfather. He had reached a genealogical labyrinth.

"What does 'paternal grandmother' mean, grandpa?" he inquired, pausing for breath.

"You look up paternal in the dictionary, sonny," said Mr. Follett. And he showed the book toward his grandson.

"It means 'fatherly,' 'like a father,'" read the boy. "I don't understand that, grandpa."

"Well, now, see here," said Mr. Follett hastily as his wife left the room for a moment, "it's like this, I reckon. The father's the head of the house so called and the same with a grandfather, but sometimes they're married to a kind of a masterful—well, I guess your grandma's what they'd call a paternal grandmother." Mr. Follett hastily finished as he heard brisk footsteps along the hall. "You get right on with your reading, boy."—Youth's Companion.

A Buoy's Long Voyage.

On Sept. 13, 1911, there was picked up on the beach at Cullivoe, Papastour, in the north of Scotland, a life buoy, battered and stained, bearing the inscription, "Passed by J. Guthrie, San Francisco, Cal., June 1, 1905."

The vessel Stanley Dollar was wrecked off the west coast of Japan in August, 1905, and the buoy, whose history is bound up with that of the ship, must have been floating in the ocean currents for six years until it landed in Scotland. Whether it went around the Horn or through the northwest passage or down by Australasia and around the Cape of Good Hope into the Atlantic will, of course, always remain a matter of doubt and conjecture. This buoy is said to hold the world's record for drifting the longest distance. It was six years on the way from the Pacific ocean to the Atlantic and must have been washed into many a strange port before it was picked up on the Scotch island.—Harper's Weekly.

The Horsehair Trick.

Almost every day illustrations are afforded of the marvelous ingenuity of the modern thief. Recently a couple of rogues nearly succeeded in extracting a valuable tie pin from the cravat of a man sitting between them in a music hall by means of an almost invisible horsehair stretching from the right hand of one thief to the left hand of his accomplice. The thieves by simultaneously raising their hands under the pretense of putting their pipes or cigarettes into their mouths tried, by pulling the horsehair taut, gradually to lift the victim's tie pin from its place. In this particular instance the trick was not successful, but it is often worked with advantage. If the pin falls to the ground unnoticed the thieves take the earliest opportunity of seizing it, or by a skillful manipulation of the horsehair the article may be made to slide down the almost invisible line right into the hand of one of the thieves.—London Tit-Bits.

Man is the only animal that knows nothing, that can learn nothing, without being taught.—Pliny.

The Result.

"Did the trip of the young heiress to Europe to secure a title in the matrimonial market succeed?"

"Yes, though, strange to say, it was a barren result."—Baltimore American.

Why He Was Late.

"What made you so late?"
"I met Smithson."
"Well, that is no reason why you should be an hour late getting home to supper."

"I know, but I asked him how he was feeling, and he insisted on telling me about his stomach trouble."

"Did you tell him to take Chamberlain's Tablets?"

"Sure, that is what he needs." Sold by The Eagle Drug Merc. Co.—Adv.

Broom-corn buyers have invaded Roosevelt county. Portales shipped, the past week, from four to six cars of brush a day.
