FIREMAN ON FIRST ENGINE DIES IN IOWA

EDWARD ENTWISTLE, WHO HELD THE "ROCKET," PASSES AWAY

WAS 94 YEARS OF AGE

Shared World's Honors With George Stephenson in Initial Trip Made on Steam Railroad From Manchester to Liverpool in 1825—History of His Remarkable Career.

Life's track blocked by the final signal, Edward Entwistle, aged 94 years, fireman and later engineer of the first steam locomotive ever built, George Stephenson's famous "Rocket," died this week at Des Moines, Ia.

Born at Tilsley's Banks, Lancashire, England, March 24, 1815, at less than 14 years old he was apprenticed for seven years to the trade of mechanical engineer in the large works of George Stephenson, and his son Robert of Newcastle.

In 1825, Entwistle took up his residence at Des Moines, where he lived until his death.

Prof. J. S. Hofer, a member of the New Mexico Normal university faculty, was a personal friend of Entwistle he having known this remarkable man many years.

While a member of the faculty of Highland Park College, at Des Moines, Prof. Hofer often took his classes to visit Entwistle, to let them hear him detail his interesting story about the first locomotive.

Among Prof. Hofer's most interesting lectures, is one which he has many times delivered on Entwistle, entitled "The First Engineer and the First Steam Engine." It is needless to say that Prof. Hofer learned of this interesting man's death with genuine sorrow.

Interest in it he was given a permit by Stephenson to go with it on the trial trip. On the return he was given the throttle and for two years made two round trips each day between Liverpool and Manchester, thirty-five miles, to the great surprise of the pessimistic prognosticators, and thus was established the first high speed railroad passenger train in the world. The labor was so exacting—he was only a lad—and the exposure to the elements so great, there being no protection therefrom, he asked to be relieved. Stephenson was so well pleased with him he secured a berth for him on one of the Duke of Bridgewater's coasting steamers as second engineer, where he served the remaining five years of apprenticeship and one year more, when in 1837, he decided to come to America. That was the memorable year of hard times. There was no demand for labor, and wages were low, but he secured employment as engineer on Hudson river steamboats, at $1.00 per day, and in iron mills, until 1844, when he went to Chicago, where he readily found employment as stationary engineer, and one season with Henry Perrier, as engineer on the lake propeller "Rosier."

In 1856, Entwistle took up his residence at Des Moines, where he lived until his death.

Three members of the Altar Guild remained to see the finishing touches of the laying to rest completed, and to close the last rites in placing a wreath and cross of flowers where rests all that is mortal of their departed member, all the other flowers having been placed in the lair over and around the casket.

So there has passed from us, one born and grown to womanhood among us, leaving to us an inspiration by her sweet, patient and pure life, now to remain with us of hallowed memory.

Engineer Harry Hartley has reported for duty after having been on the sick list several days.

Brakeman J. B. Merrill caught his foot on a rail when he started to run from his engine to the station at Lamy, a couple of days ago, and fell down injuring himself to such an extent that an operation may be necessary.

Brakeman Dave Welch left here a couple of months ago to visit his parents in Iowa. He did, but he stopped in Kansas City on his journey and was married and so visited his home on his honeymoon trip. Mr. and Mrs. Welch are at home to their friends now at 811 National avenue.

The policy of the Santa Fe is to advance its men whenever there is an opening," said a local Santa Fe employe today. "The secret is that every man in a position of trust, has been proven and found to be efficient, that it is a safe proposition to give him something better. This is especially the case in the operating department where it is the rule that every official 'knows the business from the ground up.' Take a little incident that occurred recently. General Superintendent Fox, his secretary, and Assistant Superintendent McNally were on the line with a special, and at some point ran against the 9-hour law. The crew couldn't turn another wheel—had to take hands off right there—and of course it wouldn't do to leave the equipment on the track. Ordinarily the plight would be made known to headquarters and a relief engine dispatched to bring in the train. But not for the competent officials in that bunch. "Bill," said Mr. Fox to his stenographer, "you run this train. Mac and I will look to the front end." The regular crew was sent to the private car where they jolled at ease, Mr. Fox took the right side of the engine and grasped the throttle, and the division superintendent grabbed a shovel and merrily scattered coal into the fire-box. That train went to a terminal on time."

FUNERAL OF MISS ROBBINS IMPRESSIVE

The funeral services for the late Miss Esther Robbins were held yesterday afternoon at the family home on Fifth street the Rev. J. S. Moore officiating.

A few verses of the hymns, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me," were sung by Mrs. J. H. Stearns, Mrs. E. D. Reynolds and Miss Cunningham, accompanied by Mrs. W. J. Mills.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Herbert Reynolds, Hallett Reynolds, F. B. January, J. H. Clary, Herbert Clark and Hugh Loudon; interment being in the Masonic cemetery.

The casket was covered and surrounded with beautiful flowers in great abundance, and if love and sympathy can be so expressed, such were there to the full.

The young ladies' Altar Guild of St. Paul's Memorial Episcopal church and of which Miss Robbins was a member, had care of the flowers and draping of the lair with them at the cemetery, and during the closing invocation of the services there, the casket was slowly and most impressively lowered to its resting place, enveloped with those beautiful flowers which she had so dearly loved.

Three members of the Altar Guild remained to see the finishing touches of the laying to rest completed, and to close the last rites in placing a wreath and cross of flowers where rests all that is mortal of their departed member, all the other flowers having been placed in the lair over and around the casket.

Patriotism The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder. A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness. Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY. It builds up the body with sound flesh and solid muscle. The dealer who offers a substitute for the "Discovery" is only seeking to make the little more profit realized on the sale of less meritorious preparations. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth bound. Game Warden Gable expects to leave for parts of southern New Mexico where quail are plentiful and capture birds for distribution in San Juan Santa Fe, San Miguel and other northern counties.
