

HIS ANSWER.

First Statement of Judge McMillan to the Public.

VICTIM OF POLITICAL ENEMIES.

A few days ago, Judge D. H. McMillan and wife of Socorro, passed through the city for Denver, where they will remain a few days and then go to Glenwood Springs. The Denver News of yesterday, June 26, contains the first statement of the judge on his removal from the associate judgeship of the territorial supreme court, and judgeship of the Fifth judicial district. The article from the News reads as follows:

Judge Daniel H. McMillan, who was removed from the bench of the supreme court of New Mexico by President Roosevelt a few days ago, in the city accompanied by his wife. Last night he made the first statement concerning his removal that has yet been given to the public. It will be remembered that the judge was removed from office upon a charge of general immorality and that his character was blackened to a great degree by the persons who appeared against him. Judge McMillan states that the allegation of immorality were trumped up by a band of disappointed and unscrupulous office seekers and their followers. The men who made sworn statements against him, he says, are notorious characters in New Mexico.

"The position itself is of no especial importance in his eyes, he says, he will fight to remove the smirch from his name. When the United States senate convenes for its next term, the judge will appeal to that body for a complete review of his case from the evidence presented, and he is confident that the stain upon his name will be removed. He says he feels not the slightest malice for the Washington officials who reviewed the evidence in his case and recommended his removal from office. He believes they acted purely upon their honest convictions in the matter. Judge McMillan said:

"Yes, I am surprised at the outcome of my case. When it was submitted in April, I was satisfied I had established a complete vindication. I never had charge of a matter where every point in the controversy had been more thoroughly met and answered. The attack upon me was one of the most atrocious and vicious made upon a public official; it was actuated by malice, ambition and disappointment. The spirit of malice was rampant, and inability in certain quarters to control judicial action added fuel to the attack.

"My appointment naturally caused some heartburning, and with a few designing minds to formulate a scheme, the ever ready affidavit man was available at a price.

"Bert Roland, the star witness against me, is a defaulter, a thief, a drunkard and a habitual liar, and is now in the penitentiary at Santa Fe.

"George White is a self-confessed, suborned perjurer, and he admitted he was paid for making his affidavit.

"Raca killed a man at Socorro, and the record shows he was convicted on his own plea of guilty of an assault with attempt to kill another citizen of the same place, and was the late partner of the person most active against me. He has left the territory.

"Iwell is a thief. The certified records of three convictions for larceny were filed against him in the case.

"Martoz is a bartender and is under charge of indecent assault on a girl 9 years of age.

"This is a roster of depraved affidavit men sufficient to damn any case before an unprejudiced tribunal.

"I believe Attorney General Knox intended to be eminently fair and just, but the assistants in the department were filled with prejudice against me by one of my opponents, a former official of the department, who went to Washington and manipulated the case against me. He was a candidate for appointment to the position in the event he could bring about a vacancy. This atmosphere of prejudice in the department was so dense, the influence of it so strong, and the attorney general was so impressed by it that when the only affidavit on file was that of the convict Roland, he stated to Mr. Hughes and Major Llewellyn that the department had proof positive against me.

"With the exception of a few individuals whom I shall not characterize, I believe I have the confidence of every community in New Mexico, save one small village where the minds of the decent people have been poisoned against me by one or two persons maliciously inclined.

"The judgeship in itself is of minor consideration. I do not, however, intend to allow this smirch upon my character to stand. I declined to resign after the decision was formulated. When congress convenes I shall ask the senate to send for the record and to pass upon the question as to whether it contained anything to justify the decision.

"John G. Milburn, one of the most eminent and fair-minded attorneys of New York, went to Washington and personally examined the records of the case as made on both sides, and advised Senator Dewey that there was nothing in the entire record to sustain the charge or to justify any disposition except its dismissal.

"Yes! In this instance the penitentiary stripes have so far prevailed over the judicial ermine."

see you have been reading the newspapers too.' 'Yes,' she replied, 'and I have become a convert, for my husband, who, you know, is busy in the office all day, and whose nervous system was completely run down, has got so well and hearty by giving up the heavy meat breakfast and living on a diet of cooked fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream and Postum Food Coffee for breakfast. He is a new man and not been near a physician for two months.'

"I did not wonder that she was enthusiastic, so I began that evening to use Grape-Nuts, eating nothing else for my severe o'clock supper. I felt entirely satisfied and rested better that night than I had for months.

"The family all laughed at me, but the next morning I ate my Grape-Nuts and cream, some stewed fruit and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. That day I felt amiable with myself and the whole world at large, and my feelings were so good and comfortable that I concluded to keep on with my new food.

"After about two weeks on this kind of diet, my family began to see the change in me. I had lost my nervous, cross, irritable manner, and I could sleep all night soundly. My face was round and my complexion was quite clear with a tinge of rosy color in my cheeks. In about a month I had gained ten pounds and my family all became converts to Grape-Nuts, which we have used now for some time. We are all in perfect health and my grocery bill is nothing like as large as it used to be.

"I am now so well and strong that I feel able to do anything I want to. Husband says the food should be called 'Gold-Nuts.' I notice a marked change in my mental capacity. Formerly I could not concentrate my mind on any book or any one thing, now that is all changed. I can read steadily and think logically from premise to conclusion, an excellent evidence, to my mind, of the brain building power of Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Desserts for the whole year told in the recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

PERTINENT CRITICISM.

Cleveland Did Not Observe Home Rule in Territory.

HIS JUDGES WERE CARPET BAGGERS.

Editor of The Citizen. In last night's issue you say that Mr. G. Cleveland is the only president who has "lived up to platform pledges in appointing citizens of this territory to the federal offices." This statement is undoubtedly provoked by the recent appointment of Mr. Smith of Michigan to a judgeship in New Mexico, but seems to indicate some lapse of memory on your part.

Let us recall what Mr. Cleveland did as to judicial appointments in New Mexico during his two terms.

When he first became president in 1885, there were three judicial districts in New Mexico. In the first district, Samuel B. Artell was judge, and Mr. G. Cleveland forced him to resign to avoid threatened summary and unjustifiable removal. In his place the president appointed William A. Vincent, a bona fide resident of the territory, but in a few months, realizing his mistake in having appointed a New Mexican, he arbitrarily and wrongfully threw Vincent out, and appointed a man from Indiana.

For the second district, he appointed a man from Missouri, who was becoming too active and prominent in public affairs to please a democratic senator, who thought his contemplated life grip on a seat in the upper branch of congress was possibly endangered.

For the Third district, there was appointed an able man from Arkansas, a personal friend of the attorney general, whose ability was only surpassed by the bad reputation which he soon acquired among the people of the Mesilla valley.

During this administration, an additional district was created, and the president appointed a good old man from Texas, than whom no better or more honest man ever held office in New Mexico.

This is not a very good record of appointments of residents of New Mexico.

In his second term he certainly did much better on the residential qualifications. Whether he made a good court; or not can well be left to you, Mr. Editor, who had some personal experience with it. It never should be forgotten that its action toward you was of the most high-handed, lawless and arbitrary character.

Under this administration we had one judge from Virginia, and four from the territory. The result might well make many of us doubtful of the policy of appointing our own people to judicial office, were it not for our belief that no other president could make such bad selections.

If your brief editorial was intended merely as a criticism on the republican party in the matter of recent judicial appointments, it must be admitted it is well founded. When President McKinley came into office, he had five judges to appoint for New Mexico. Of these, two of whom he appointed were residents of the territory. Another had been at one time a resident among us, but had been absent for years. A life long democrat, in 1896 he left the dominant wing of his party, and was an active good democrat in Connecticut. Of the two others one had helped to elect a senator in Indiana, and the other had elected a senator in Ohio. When the Ohio man was forced to resign on account of ill health, his health never having permitted him to discharge the duties of his office, he was succeeded by a gentleman of pleasing personality from western New York, who knew but little law, but who had strong political backing.

When the Indiana creator of a senator failed of reappointment he was succeeded by a strong and able man, who had made a senator from Nebraska, and now we have the appointment of a friend of a Michigan senator, and we will probably soon learn that he, also, has been a factor in senatorial elections.

This sort of thing is the natural consequence of our territorial conditions. Offices in the territories are looked on as senatorial property to be used in payment of political obligations, and it is seldom the case that lawyers who are active as politicians are well fitted for judicial labors.

We are compelled to admit that our party has done badly in this direction, and if we criticize it for this directly, no one can say you may not every republican ought vigorously to protest against your praising the fat-headed G. Cleveland, who never has known anything of the west, and has but little or no regard for anything west of Manhattan island. When he left the presidency he would not go back to a place as far west as Buffalo, which had been his home and beyond which, up to that time, his acquaintance with this country had never extended.
