

NEW YORK FASHION LETTER

New York, May 7.—Word comes from Paris, the source of feminine fashions, that the fullness of the skirt has not reached its limit. There seems to be a tendency to expand the volume of the skirt, to the utter despair of all stout women. It seems, after all, that those who predicted, when the skirts began to become fuller, that the new fashion would not last long, and would, certainly not go beyond a most moderate limit, were mistaken. At first the skirts merely showed a suggestion of fullness, by flaring at the bottom. After a while the same of fullness began to extend to the region of the knees and stop by the top of the fullness extended to the hip region. Now, so it is reported from Paris, there is every reason to believe that the process of gradual expansion will not stop at the lower part of the hip but that after a while the fullness of the skirt will begin right at the waistband.

Stout women are at a great disadvantage in following the new fashion. Even at the time when the fullness did not reach above the knee a stout woman, with middle skirts would resemble nothing more closely than a big bell, with its rim widely curved out. What are they going to do when full skirts, with the fullness beginning at the waistband, are the style? They will have but two alternatives. They have the choice between following the fashion and wearing skirts that make them look as big and clumsy as a barrel, or sacrifice stylishness for the sake of securing a more graceful appearance.

The slender and graceful woman, on the other hand, could not possibly find any more style more becoming to her than the skirts of the present fashion. The effect of the graceful lines formed by the judiciously full skirts upon a slender woman is exquisite and far prettier than anything shown for many years.

There is, however, also an economic side to the new style. It is more expensive than the style in vogue two or three years ago when fashion decreed that the skirts must be almost skin tight. For the new style skirt a great deal more material is required than for the skirt of two years ago, and that alone has caused a considerable increase in the cost of dresses. But that is not all. The trimming and ornamentation of skirts is infinitely more elaborate than it used to be and as many of the materials used, like lace, are quite expensive, the large increase in the amount of material required for trimming, under the new regime, means a corresponding increase in the cost of modern skirts.

Some of the latest models imported from Paris are designed to produce a regular bell effect. They are fuller at the hips than below the hips, and are drawn in markedly just above the knees, flaring out again below the knees, reaching their greatest fullness at the bottom. There is a decided tendency toward producing odd and picturesque, sometimes even bizarre forms and the employment of methods of ornamentation original and quaint. Some of the costumes are actually dowdy. Many of the costumes contain peculiar features of styles belonging to various periods and which do not always harmonize very well. It must be said that the result of these combinations is not always happy and artistic, and frequently betrays decidedly bad taste.

One of the most striking features in the fact that in the trimming and ornamentation of these modern dresses every resource of the dressmaker's art is drawn upon and sometimes a dozen different means are used in combination. There may be insets, cords, embroideries, laces, ribbons, corded embroideries, frills, ruffings, guffings and stitches of every kind and description employed in combination on one and the same skirt. That the effect of a skirt thus over-trimmed and over-ornamented is not always pleasing will not be surprising. Of course similar cases were by no means impossible with the former styles, but there cannot be the least doubt that the extravagance which has ruled in the domain of fashion for over a year now, has greatly increased the tendency to excesses in trimming and ornamentation of dresses.

During the season just ended velvets of all kinds were rather an important factor among the materials used for fashionable costumes. There were a few new kinds of exquisite texture in the market, besides the regular qualities and there were also a few new colors in some of the special qualities of light velvets. The demand was unusually great and there is good reason to believe that there will be even a greater demand for that charming material next season. It seems that velvets, chiffon and velvets gauze will probably be the most favored among the numerous varieties. Some new patterns are promised and all of them will be in the nature of improvements. Velvets gauze will mostly be in small and medium sized designs and principally on plain velvet grounds. It is scarcely probable that the globular and block effects of last season will again be in favor next season. One of the novelties promised is a combination of the chiffon and the cauffe effects, which will be shown in many new and original patterns. Plain velvets, chiffon will be offered in various designs and qualities. As was to be expected there will be some inferior, but cheap varieties, containing part cotton. Narrow stripes and small checks will principally be used on the higher grades and there will also be velvets crepe in light colors with white stripes as a novelty in the better grades. Large dots with fine stripes on fine quality of velvet and velvets

ALGODONES PARAGRAPHS.

BATCH OF INTERESTING SMALL ITEMS FROM THE SMELTER TOWN.

Special Correspondence.

Algodones, N. M., May 6.—Last Tuesday there was quite a two rain here, which lasted well into the night. All crops are looking well. There is plenty of water in the river for irrigation purposes.

Pedro Duran was here last Monday and took several orders with him to his sheep ranch for the lambing time. He expects to save a good percentage of the lambs this season.

Fred Guero also got several tons here last week to go to his ranch, which cuts down the population of this place somewhat.

This week the cook from the Hagan camp and Pablo Montana passed through here on their way to Hernaldo. They report a good deal of development work going on in the coal mines. The Hagan camp has quite a number of men at work, in fact more than the Hagan people. The Hagan camp is still handling and shipping coal right along.

There are some new houses being put up here, all of which are of adobe. Nestor Ortiz is building a two-room house; Romaldo Miso is building a three-room house; Antonio Isotasi is building a three-room house; Antonio Archibispo is also going to build a three-room house, and some others are contemplating building houses.

Last Sunday May 1st was a big day with the San Felipe Indians. Frosting and dancing was the order of the day. Several of the people from the surrounding country came to see the performance. Among the visitors was K. W. Spencer of Albuquerque.

Algodones says are organizing a "base ball club." They have purchased their outfit. After some practice they intend to visit the Albuquerque Browns. So they the Browns, had better prepare for a hard game.

CROWN SHEET RED HOT.

Engine a Mass of Flames at Fort Leavenworth Bridge.

With great tongues of fire shooting 20 feet in both directions from its sides, heading higher than the cab and enveloping the steel monster, engine No. 1229, one of the Missouri Pacific's big Baldwin freight engines, came to a sudden stop thirty car lengths south of the Fort Leavenworth bridge yesterday morning with her crown sheet torn from the bolts and the boiler empty of water and red hot under the pressure of a roaring blast in the smoke box. The Leavenworth Times, Engineer Labee and Fireman Phillips only escaped from cremation by jumping from the cab to the precipitous river bank and from there catching the flying unbraked train and setting the hand brakes. The accident was one of the rarest things in railroad history. The water had entirely run out of the boilers though the water glass remained full and the blast in the smoke box heated the crown sheet or the top of the box immediately under the boiler to a white heat so that it dropped from the bolts through the pressure, forcing the great flames out through the side openings and through the door to the box from the cab. Engine No. 1229 is one of the mighty 110 ton Baldwin engines used on fast freight runs. It had in charge freight train No. 227 from Kansas City to Atchison and arrived in this city in good shape. Engine No. 1240 had to be sent down from Atchison yesterday morning at a late hour to move the freight.

TO EXTEND DENVER & RIO GRANDE.

LONG CONTEMPLATED PROJECT MAY BE CARRIED OUT AT AN EARLY DATE.

The long cherished project of General W. J. Palmer to construct the Denver & Rio Grande to El Paso, Tex., will be realized if George J. Gould, present owner of the system, carries out his plan, says the Denver Post.

The Santa Fe Central railway extending from Santa Fe to Torrance, a point north on the Rock Island, is to be purchased by the Gould interests as the first step in the furtherance of the plan.

From Torrance to El Paso surveys have been at work for some time and the proposed extension of the Rio Grande will practically parallel the tracks of the Santa Fe and the Rock Island.

As soon as the Santa Fe Central passes into Gould control the Rio Grande will be standard gauge from Antonio to Santa Fe and an entirely different route will be pursued, the old narrow gauge right of way being abandoned. This will give the Rio Grande a broad gauge road from Denver to Torrance, New Mexico, and to El Paso when the surveyed line is built.

It is stated by those who are authority for the story that there will be heavy bidding against the Gould interests by the Rock Island, which, although it does not need the Santa Fe Central, is not at all anxious to have another competitor into El Paso.

PHYSICIANS FOUNDED JAPANESE EMPIRE.

One of the traditional accounts of the origin of the Japanese empire mentioned by the famous traveler Marco Polo, refers to the fact that an emigrant (father of a Chinese colony) under rather peculiar circumstances, says the American Methodist Missionary, descended the throne of China in the year 246 B. C., and at once entered on a career of unity and tyranny. He was nevertheless most anxious to enjoy the privileges of his position for as long a period as possible. For the purpose of endeavoring to obtain some specific agent by which the duration of human life could be prolonged, he dispatched trusted messengers and explorers into all the countries with which he held any communication or of the whereabouts he could obtain any knowledge.

Taking advantage of the circumstances, one of his most trusted attendants, who was living in hourly dread of a sudden sentence to death, had the emperor that he had learned that such an agent existed in the person of a plant which grew only in the islands which now form the Japanese empire. The plant in question was also reported to be one of an delicate structure and sensitive nature that it not plucked with pure hands and special protection, it would lose all its mysterious virtues before arriving within the limits of the Chinese empire.

It was arranged that the emperor and the same number of attendants of spotless physical health and moral purity should be selected to proceed to Japan for the purpose of securing a sufficient supply of the precious plant. The suggestion was promptly acted on. The medical advice also patriotically volunteered to combat the opposition himself, and the offer was accepted.

The expedition embarked at speedily as possible for the Japanese islands, but not one of its members was ever seen within the limits of the Chinese empire again. The previously mentioned party of Japan were rapidly populated with a race more numerous than the inhabitants of the land of the Columbia itself. The medical chief of the expedition, of course, created himself king of the more fresh and vigorous to body and country, and soon had a magnificent palace erected for his residence, which he called Kanput, (a grand mansion, splendour no less).

We are further told that the Japanese mention the historic fact in their annals, that they point out to visitors the spot on which the medical founder of their empire landed, and also show the ruins of a temple which was erected in his honor.

EMPHATIC TALK.

The Kind That Carries Conviction to Every Albuquerque Reader.

Conviction must follow such emphatic proof as is given here. The testimony of Albuquerque residents should satisfy the most skeptical. Here is an Albuquerque case. Read it and see if doubt can enter in the face of this evidence.

W. H. Tripp, engineer at the Hotel Alvarado, residence of South Broadway says: "If I had not had been my only symptom of kidney trouble, my case would probably have been very simple but when there was added to it trouble with the kidney secretions, the application did not respond to medicine as readily as I expected. About once every year I had these attacks and the use of DeWitt's Kidney Pills, procured at the Alvarado pharmacy, cured me over one which was only a succession of similar procedures. For six months I have had immunity from the annoyance and if DeWitt's Kidney Pills can be depended upon to act as they did when they first came to my notice I know what to do should the attack recur in the future."
