

The Legislature.

The quarters for the accommodation of the legislature were decided upon today by Secretary Miller. He found the buildings at Fort Marcy very well suited for the purposes desired and had no difficulty in finding apartments in which the territorial statesmen can proceed to legislate. The council will meet in the post hall, where the quarters are roomy and conveniently arranged. The two rooms connecting with this hall will be used for committees and in addition the post residence quarters immediately adjacent will be used for the same purpose.

The lower house will meet in the hospital building, where in addition to a large assembly room with high ceilings there are seven committee rooms with a porch. This latter will serve admirably as a cooling off place in the heat of partisan altercation and will doubtless prove a safety valve for the engine of statesmanship when it gets in motion.

A number of legislators have already engaged rooms here for the session and the legislature when it convenes on December 31 will be attended from the very start by a full membership, with, it is estimated, quite a large attendance in the third house.—New Mexican.
