

SAFETY OF RULERS.

COSTLY DEVICES TO INSURE THEIR PROTECTION.

The System in Russia Developed Into Almost a Science—Empire William Carefully Guarded—Might Protection for England's King.

One result of the dire calamity brought about by the fateful work of the anarchist-assassin, Czolgosz, is to make more uneasy than ordinarily the heads that wear a crown. In all European countries elaborate precautions are taken to insure the safety of the ruling monarchs and some of the systems in operation have attained such perfection that they may almost be termed a science. Fanatical anarchists, ever ready to grasp an opportunity to wreak harm to those in power, make it absolutely necessary for large forces of armed guards to protect the heads of governments, but, even with these precautions, no monarch travels with a feeling of security.

Car Carefully Guarded.

The precautions taken to shield the life of the czar are greater and devised with more foresight and at much greater expense to the country than is the case with any other ruler. In fact, precautionary measures for the protection of the czar's life have been developed, for 50 years past, into a science. These measures have, however, not been nearly so stringent under the present czar as they were during the last four years of the reign of his father, Alexander III, and it has been largely due to the most recent cases of regicide that the comparatively mild system of protection afforded the present autocrat of Russia has been rendered more severe.

On special occasions every movement of the czar has been predetermined weeks before, and very minute instructions are then issued to the higher police officials, and from these filtered down to the lowest gorodovoi and to the army of railroad and other officials. Uniformed police to the number of thousands are then used, in such cities as St. Petersburg, Moscow, etc., and troops are employed most extensively to line the road.

Quite elaborate preparations are also in vogue whenever the czar issues forth through the public streets on his regular routine. How large is the number of those who day by day are forestalling the ceaseless machinations and plots of the nihilists and other disaffected strata of the population is not ascertainable, but the number is quite considerable.

It is also true that Nicholas II., although a very mild-mannered and apparently rather diffident man, is quite fearless, and that the symptoms of extreme nervousness which characterized his father during the last few years of his life, owing to a number of hair-breadth escapes from diabolical plots, are happily absent in his son—as yet. But it is quite certain that at least five distinct and well-laid plans to murder the present czar have been frustrated.

To Protect the Kaiser.

The elaborate system of precautions under which the present ruler of Germany lives is of rather recent date. His grandfather, though repeatedly the victim of would-be assassins, never allowed himself to be talked into anything like the amount of precautionary measures which his grandson, William II., has gradually evolved. The only two cases become public of attempts on the life of the Kaiser were those which happened during the past 12 months at Bremer and Breslau, and they were of no serious character.

In Breslau it was a crazy old woman who threw a hatchet in the direction of his person, but only managed to hit the hind wheel of his carriage; and at Bremen it was a confirmed epileptic who threw a piece of iron at the emperor, inflicting a flesh wound, which, while leaving its mark for life, and not exactly enhancing the beauty of the imperial face, was by no means dangerous.

It is also said by those who know the emperor well that he is not afraid of meeting death. But, nevertheless, the emperor has sanctioned, and even helped to devise, the present comprehensive and rather elaborate methods of guarding his person against violence.

Wild Dogs in Ontario.

In the Lake of the Woods country, in Ontario, which may be described as a wilderness of forest, rock and brushwood, a race of wild dogs have established themselves, and are increasing in numbers so rapidly that fears are entertained that the animals will yet become troublesome. When the Canadian Pacific Railway was under construction the camps of the workmen had, of course, to be frequently moved, and dogs were often left behind, and eventually, like wolves and foxes, found means of sustaining themselves. The animals are large, lean, short-haired, and generally red or red and white in color. They are exceedingly wild, and fly on the first approach of man. In winter they live by catching rabbits, that abound in the wilderness of brushwood; in summer the wild dogs catch fish that crowd the smaller streams that connect inland lakes. The Indians detest the wild dogs, as they pursue game and take the bait from traps, and are a general nuisance. Sometimes a wild dog is taken in a trap that has been set for other animals, but the beasts are exceedingly cunning, swift and watchful. A race of wild dogs is said to exist in Newfoundland, keeping near the coast, and subsisting on what the sea casts to the shore, the gulf stream preventing the ice from forming at certain places.

WOMEN MAKING PROGRESS.

Julia Ward Howe Believes the Future Is Full of Hope.

It seems very strange that after so many years women should still be obliged to beg for equal suffrage, when it has long since been shown that our claim is well founded, not only in ideal justice, but in practical wisdom, and that it is in the direction of the tendencies of civilization. Our appeal to the legislatures has been refused so many times that to continue it seems like leading a forlorn hope. Yet a forlorn hope is glorious. To lead it is glorious and to die in it is glorious, and it often conquers, and I am full of hope, for what is right in itself must triumph in the end. I feel assured that in the near future the co-operation of women in municipal and state affairs will not only be desired, but demanded, by men of pure and worthy citizenship. Mothers, wives, sisters, will no longer stand as suppliants before state legislatures, asking that they may become politically the equals of men who profess to treat them as superiors, but who really combine to keep them in a state of perpetual minority. We women have hitherto been a sort of reserve force. During the rough, early ages of warfare men did the fighting, but we cheered and nourished him. His blood was in our veins and his courage was our courage. Thank God, that period of war has almost taken itself off; we are at the beginning of a more peaceful period and now something more is needed than muscle and the power to do physical battle. There is need of moral and spiritual force and we have this stored reserve force within us. We have learned much from the men as to how the world should be governed and also some things as to how it should not. It seems strange that in Puritan Boston we should still be asking for municipal suffrage, while in England and Australia and in our own Western states women have exercised it for years. Are we, then, so inferior to those women? Or are our men so inferior to those men that they cannot see the justice and sacredness of our claims? But this reform is to come. If the men of this generation have not wisdom or courage enough to grant it (I do not say that this is so) the men of a future generation will. If no one of us ever votes we have gained this: We have voted for what was right in principle and for what will be proved to be right in practice.—Julia Ward Howe, in Chicago Chronicle.

WHEN THIRST INSPIRES.

Odd Means Resorted to to Get the Necessary "Eye-Opener."

"What won't some people do to obtain a drink of liquor?" was a question propounded the other day by Lieut. Charles Cole of the Central district. The official answered the query himself by relating two or three stories of odd means resorted to to get the necessary "eye-opener," says the Baltimore American. "One of the funniest I ever heard of," said the lieutenant, "was a trick played by a Marsh market space hobo on three of his companions. The four men had engaged a room on a small street near the 'space.' It was in the dead of winter and they borrowed a small stove of the egg-shaped variety from a neighbor. They built a fire in it, got thoroughly warmed and then stretched out upon the floor to sleep. At an early hour the next morning one of them awoke in a cold sweat, shivering like a leaf. The fire had gone out, and the room was like an icehouse. The first thing that crossed his mind was how to get a drink. He had no money and the next thought was how to get some. An idea struck him. Without disturbing his companions he seized the stove in his arms and proceeded to the nearest junk shop, where he sold it for a small amount and got his drink. It is not necessary to add that he and his friends parted company. There was another fellow who doted on the 'space.' He had a cork leg. He wanted a drink badly one day and pawned his artificial limb. Now he walks with a crutch. In one of the pawnshops on the 'space' you will see a set of false teeth. If I am not mistaken, they are exhibited in the window. Until a year ago they were in the mouth of a once pretty damsel. She fell from grace, however, by taking to drink and pawned her teeth because she wanted whisky."

New Mrs. Malapropisms.

A new crop of Mrs. Malapropisms was gathered by the passengers who returned to this country not long ago on the same boat with a certain Chicago woman. She lamented leaving London so soon "because there was an elegant scapitor there who wanted to make a bust of my arm." In referring to the delights of her visit she spoke enthusiastically about a fancy dress ball which she attended, and to which "one of my acquaintances went in the garb of a monk." One of the passengers congratulated her on her daughter's better health. "She is not nearly as delicate as she was the last time I saw her," he said. "No," was the reply. "My daughter is in much better health. You know that naturally she is a very indelicate girl."—New York Sun.

French Motor Carriages and Cycles.

Last year there were registered in Paris somewhat over 5,000 motor carriages and about 11,000 motor cycles, the latter comprising motor bicycles, motor tricycles and the like. Practically all of the French automobiles have been of the internal-combustion type.

Black and white, it seems, will continue its popularity.

STILL THE WHITE HOUSE.

President Roosevelt Continues the Popular Designation

President Roosevelt has decided that the official designation of the President's residence during his administration shall be "White House." During the period of mourning, stationary with a black border was used, on which are printed the words "Executive Mansion, Washington." Now that the period has ended, the personal and official stationery will all bear the words "White House, Washington." The American people have called it White House for nearly a century. Some presidents have chosen to have it designated as the Executive Mansion on their personal as well as their official correspondence. President and Mrs. Roosevelt easily fall in with the popular fancy.

She—Would you hesitate before marrying a woman for her money? He—Oh, no. A man who is marrying a woman for her money has no time to lose.

"Miss Plumery has such beautiful hair! Why she can sit on it!" How careless of her to leave it lying around in chairs!
