

MRS. INSLEY ASKS FOR DIVORCE

Wife of Man Charged With Murder Wants Custody of Child; Murder Is Given as Her Reason.

Another chapter in the Insley murder case was opened late yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Edith L. Insley filed suit for divorce against her husband, Thomas A. Insley, the slayer of John Higgins. Mrs. Insley asked all these duties incumbent upon a wife in a faithful manner. Soon after their marriage, the complainant alleges, Insley began a course of intemperance and cruel treatment of her, and frequently used such vile language toward her that the court was asked not to insist on a repetition of the language. The complaint also alleges that Insley had an ungenerous, tender and was subject to fits of anger. The story of the murder of the plaintiff's brother, John Higgins, is recited as the main allegation in the complaint, and in this story the plaintiff recites that after her brother had been killed Insley turned to her and said, "You see what has happened to your brother," or words to that import, and that she fearing he would also kill her, grabbed the gun which he held and discharged the other shot.

CIRCUS TO OPEN HERE

Largely are going to come cheaper this year.

Mirth for the merry inclined, dramatics, vaudeville, side-splitting spectacles, an empire of glittering gold, silver, spangle and silken tights, all 'em together, turn some a volley of adjectives and take 'em at moving sale figures. That's what.

There is a bear movement in prevailing smile prices. The get happy idea is on the toboggan slide. Heaped-up happiness is cast with prodigious rock-ness upon the bargain counter. For further information see display advertisement. Come early and avoid the rush.

Now don't run away with the idea that this language found its being in this office. Far be it. They are merely analects garnered from the wise sayings of the Self-Photo press agent who is sojourning with us.

Listen further:

"The snail producing elixir has taken a tumble," said Mr. Bennett. "It's going down, down, down. For the best line of laudis you only pay 25 cents an ounce."

"What? Two bits a laugh?"

"No, no, brother, you're heading the wrong way of the track. Twenty-five cents to see the most magnificent attraction on the face of the globe in its entirety, a brand of joy and gladness warranted not to fade in the sun and of durable quality. Work-loads and temptations will bear combination of the most expert artists. One hundred acts in one hundred minutes. Never was such a collection of animals since the ark hit Mount Ararat. Thrills absolutely through away. The high life of the ages. The mysticism of the Orient. Ten thousand heart throbs intermingling with the masterfulness of modern method. Why?

"When is your show going to hit this town?"

"The Circus Beautiful will reach here on Saturday, April 1. We open here some as usual—old Albuquerque is a lucky city. When you think circus, think Self-Photo. When you feel that the preponderance of your future is behind you let us assist you up the ladder of laughter. When you see our parade you will become convinced that everything before us in the world of amusement was nothing but the puny effort of the primitive. You will see a congress of the world's most illustrious clowns. Everywhere advanced ideas, everywhere brilliant novelties, everywhere the unusual, everywhere the biggest and best. Let us hope that you will be with us participating in this rare and radiant feast of merriment and sensational numbers and view the array of the intensely exciting surprises."

The door closed and we thought the universal benefactor of mankind had taken his final departure, when it opened again and the bureau of extraordinary exploitation reappeared.

"You didn't see a few stray afflictions lying around, did you?" he drawled, "or a synonym looking as

DR. ABBOTT SHOCKED

Harvard School Paper Prints Cartoon of Saint Divine Daring With Eva Tanguay.

Cambridge, Mass., March 15.—A comic drawing, showing the Rev. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook, and Eva Tanguay, the cynical comedienne, linked arm in arm in scanty attire, labeled "Human Affinities," has caused the suppression by the Harvard authorities of last week's issue of the Lampoon, the Harvard comic weekly.

The Lampoon came out as usual. Then the trouble began. Friends are said to have advised Dr. Abbott to get out a Harvardized edition of Life. This weekly had a series of "human affinities," so the Lampoon decided to have one. Who to picture?

There is no more solemn or dignified person alive than the famous divine who preaches two weeks a year at Harvard, and the rest of the time with Mr. Roosevelt, Harvard '89, editor of the Outlook.

Dr. Abbott is lean and spare, with a great bald head, with a long, sloping forehead, and thin lips. He wears a long, white, whiskered mustache, and a pair of spectacles. He is a deep thinker, without a sense of humor. At least the Harvard students have never seen his sense of humor at work, if he has one.

The chief artist then was set to work and presently achieved a drawing. There was Dr. Abbott, whiskers, done and all, dressed in less clothing than he ought to wear to go in bathing at Coney Island. His face wears a near-delish grin, as if he were off for a holiday and didn't care who knew it.

And then—shades of Aristotle and Plato and Heron Wright Matheson—who with him.

His arm is linked with Eva Tanguay, ready to sing "I Don't Care," and pictured in very close fitting "stage clothes." Such a jar has never struck the intellectual center of Harvard since the Lampoon had a picture of the Radcliff basketball team in bloomers, curl papers and glasses.

Any way, it's all over now, the Harvard authorities believe. The Lampoon editors—always the brightest, bravest men in Harvard—have been sternly warned. And the issue cannot be bought.

LIVESTOCK LETTER

Kansas City Stock Yards, March 15.—Cattle buyers took last the enthusiasm displayed last Monday, and the market by the middle of the week had lost 10 to 15 cents, and had become a sticky affair, particularly on heavy steers. It looked like this time were going to sell better the first of last week, but their popularity did not stick. While forecasting the market is not indulged in when it can be done, the fact that heavy steers could be marketed before the middle of April is generally understood. Heavy steers have met a poor welcome all winter, and they are not likely to pick up any when temperatures are going up all the time. Steers and feeders also lost 15 to 25 cents last week. Buyers were plentiful all the while, and they are taking them at steady prices today.

The general market is weak to 10 lower today, run here 11,000 head. All the markets were well supplied today, and with killers crying about the near beef outlet all the time, the section today is natural. Some heavy steers brought $6.79 today, a fair header around $6.40 and $6.50, bulk of steers, $5.75 to $6.25. Steady prime steers are crawling slowly up to their proper pitch each week, and show a much more reasonable premium above the middle grades than they did two months ago. Corn fed Oklahoma steers sold in the quarantine division today at $6.10, bulk of steers $5.55 to $5.75 in that division, supply today from below the quarantine line about 1,200 head. Good native cows bring $4.50 to $5.50, buyers up to $6.25, bulls $4.00 to $5.25, calves $3.00 to $3.55, stock steers $4.50 to $5.75, stock cows and heifers $3.25 to $4.75, feeding steers, $3.25 to $5.89, Colorado fed steers sold today at $5.75 to $5.95, cows $4.40 to $5.25.

While the hog market is vacillating in the extreme, it seems to have a pretty good base to rest on. Average prices last week were a little higher than the previous week's average. Run is heavy all around today, 12,400 head here, and packers delivered a heavy punch to the market, prices off 15 to 20 cents. It is not taken seriously, and an advance tomorrow would not be surprising. Fresh meat trade is said to be cleaning up packers' supplies almost as fast as they can get them, and all hands buy freely every day. Trade in the product is satisfactory, and while receipts at the market will probably gradually assume larger proportions, receipts will not jump up suddenly. Bacon hogs are scarce, and a widening gap between big fat hogs and light weights may be expected for the next few months. Top today $6.95, bulk $6.80 to $6.95.

A good run of sheep and lambs sold to advantage, the close on everything being at the top prices of the year, except lambs, which sold highest, yet they have sold since January, 1910. Run is 21,000 here today.

largely from Colorado, market steady at the opening, but lambs weakened later. Top lambs brought $6.25, shipped in by Beatty Brothers of the Arkansas valley; bulk of lambs $6.00 to $6.10, wetters up to $5.10, ewes $4.85, yearlings $5.75, clipped wetters $4.25. Feeding lambs sold at $3.25 to $3.60.

PAVLOVA ORDERED BACK TO RUSSIA

St. Petersburg, March 15.—The Russian government ordered Mme. Anna Pavlova, the celebrated danseuse now in America, to return here to testify in the investigation of alleged frauds and explain incidents of the friendship between her and M. Dandré, one of the officials under fire.

Dandré was a great admirer of Mme. Pavlova and much of the short-charge against him is said to have been squandered on her, possibly without the singer's knowledge of its origin. She called the investigating tribunal she would return.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT

San Francisco Society Woman Steals Mail and Is Said to Be Kleptomaniac.

San Francisco, March 15.—San Francisco society was shocked when Mrs. Mabel C. Lansing, widow of Garrett Livingston Lansing, the attorney, who left her a fortune, and daughter of the late A. A. Cohen, one time general counsel and secretary of the Southern Pacific, was arrested on a charge of petty larceny.

Mrs. Lansing, who is a leader in the smart set, is said to be guilty by her own admission, following witnessing of the act by detectives stationed to watch her, of rifling packages of mail addressed to other tenants in the fashionable Sacramento street apartment house where she lives.

Since last December a number of valuable articles mailed to various people in the house had been systematically disappearing. Complaint was made to the postal authorities, but they turned the matter over to the police for investigation. Detectives Lambert and Bailey were put on the case. Suspicion centered on Mrs. Lansing. A dress package was seized by the detectives, who hid in the house and claim they saw Mrs. Lansing steal it after the postman had delivered it.

When arrested the woman broke down and is said to have admitted her offense. Her friends and her physician say she is a victim of kleptomania. Her sister, now the wife of Lieut. Bent of Washington, D. C., was arrested in Alameda two years ago for shoplifting.

DIVORCE ON EVE OF GOLDEN WEDDING

San Francisco, March 15.—Within a month of the fiftieth anniversary of her wedding day Mrs. Catherine McCann commenced suit in the superior court for a divorce from her husband, Robert W. McCann. They were married in New York on May 12, 1861, and have a large family. They have lived in this city for many years and own property on Harrison street, near Tenth, and elsewhere.

The troubles of the aged couple, which seem likely to end in a divorce, began in April, 1906, two days before the big fire, when Mrs. McCann, according to his wife's complaint, threatened to burn the house down about her ears. It was burned down three days later by the flames which swept the city.

Other grounds of enmity alleged by Mrs. McCann are that he threw her down, beat her and cursed her in the presence of their children.

PORTALES FARMERS FORM ORGANIZATION

Portales, N. M., March 15.—Portales irrigation farmers this week organized a truck growers' association. The farmers perfected the organization by electing S. H. Sinner, president and R. W. Jones secretary. Signatures of 18 farmers were secured as members of the association. These 18 members agreed to plant a total of 125 acres to potatoes of both kinds, peonies, cantaloupes and onions. The object of the association is to cooperate in the purchase of seed and in securing a market for the products. It is thought that by forming an association enough truck can be raised to be shipped profitably.

There will be a special meeting of the Woodmen Circle, Cottonwood Grove No. 2, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Odd Fellows' hall. All members are requested to be present. By order of the guardian, Mrs. E. Lahrman.

Follow the crowd to the Box Ball Alley, 229 South Second street.
