TO REGULATE THE NEWSPAPER MEN.

The lieutenant governor of Illinois has announced that he will introduce in the state senate a bill for the regulation of newspaper men and the uplifting of the profession.

Licenses may be revoked for black-mail, violation of confidence, willful misrepresentation and criminal libel. We don't know exactly what will be done, but it sounds like a high crime and we don't think that it is frequently committed by degraded newspaper men.

This is a splendid bill. We have always wished to see the standard of the newspaper profession improved. Luckily, there will be no difficulty in securing a board composed of men who are well qualified to reform it.

It is a good bill. The more you work at the newspaper game the less you know about it and the worse you conduct the paper. Any man in the community can show you where it is a lie. Hardly an issue of any newspaper is published which does not make the ordinary citizen ashamed of the human race to think that the publishers and editors could be so illiterate and ignorant and possess such execrable judgment.

By all means let us raise the standard of journalism. Everybody but the newspaper man is competent to do it. The only trouble the lieutenant governor of Illinois is likely to face in the task of keeping people off the proposed board. There will be at least fifteen thousand applicants for positions on the commission. A chance to regulate the newspaper is what everybody is looking for and the citizenry of Illinois will not be slow to grab for the opportunity.

At last there is a prospect that we shall have newspapers that will please everybody. Long inhibited talents, the wonderful gift for journalism possessed by practically every man who is not in the business, will now have an outlet and a means of expression and the degenerate profession will be uplifted, ennobled, cleaned, glorified and made fairly decent.

We are for the bill.

TRANS-ATLANTIC BALLOONING.

Another attempt is about to be made to cross the Atlantic in a dirigible balloon. Following the failure of Walter Wellman to make more than a mere start, the exploit of Joseph Brucker, a Frenchman, will be watched with interest on both hemispheres. Brucker is the accredited representative of the Aero Club of France, an organization made up of the most advanced scientists in the flying art, and while comparatively little is known of him on this side of the water his credentials are satisfactory. The balloon chosen by Brucker for his voyage is the Bagard II, already holding a fine record for aerial achievements.

The start is scheduled for April 29, 21 or 22 from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, which is the nearest available point of departure for the United States. The balloon will have four passengers—Brucker, a physician and two mechanics—and it is to be as well equipped for the experiment as knowledge and money can provide. Las Palmas is sixty miles off the mainland of Africa. From that point to the nearest territory of the United States is 1,550 nautical miles. According to the careful estimates of the promoters, under favorable conditions the entire journey can be made in about eight days. So many prospects of chance enter into the calculation, however, that it would be almost a miracle if the balloon made anything but a scholastic trip. People everywhere are sure sport-ly about it. They hope that the attempt may be successful. The various reasons of the Wellman expedition put the United States into a somewhat humiliating light. When Wellman first proposed to make a "dash" for the North pole in his dirigible he was forced to turn back after making a few miles because he had forgotten an important part of his equipment. Two years later when this same American made his famous sally from Atlantic City for an attempt to cross the ocean, he had hired up a dirigible contraption called an "equilibrator" which caused his balloon to become unmanageable after a few hours of struggle over the ocean. At last, Wellman, we believe, has quit the business. At least nothing has been heard from him for a long time.

Frenchmen are daring and since sportsmen. Although the heavier-than-air flying machine was invented in America by an American, it was in France that the art of aviation has reached its highest development. Germany has been foremost in building dirigible balloons, but in France this kind of air craft has been made to do more sensational feats than was ever dreamed of in the Fatherland. Therefore it would not be surprising that after aviators of other nations have failed to fly across the Atlantic the daring and skillful Frenchmen should achieve the feat. Success seems to be the logical and legitimate right of the Frenchman who is now waiting at Las Palmas to risk his life in this thrilling aerial adventure.

MARSHALL, AGAIN.

Vice President Thomas R. Marshall is a great little practical joker. In acknowledging with thanks his election to the official pantry shelf of the administration, he told us he was making his last utterance before entering upon "four years of silence," and he has been talking ever since, with an excellent prospect that he will continue the conversation throughout his term of office.

Mr. Marshall's latest proposition is interesting to say the least. He wishes to have every estate worth $100,000 or over confiscated by the state upon the death of the owner. This has its good points. It will save the country from the spectacle of rich men's sons squandering the paternal inheritance. Instead of being put back into circulation, the millions will go into the public treasury and the heirs will have the opportunity of starting at the bottom of the ladder and working their way up again accumulating here for the benefit of the state. For those who dissipate such a law the only recourse appears to be, in case it is enacted, to spend your money as fast as you get it. This phase of the situation is not unpleasant, when you come to look at it closely, and Governor Marshall's suggestion is worthy of serious consideration.

A TUBERCULOSIS SANATORIUM AS A HEALTH RESORT.

There are good reasons to consider a well regulated sanatorium or a tuberculosis resort a much safer place of residence for healthy people than the average city, says the Saranac Lake Society for the Control of Tuberculosis in a recent publication. New cases of tuberculosis, according to statistics, seem to develop less often among the residential population of health resorts, such as Saranac Lake, than in ordinary towns of the same size. Some of the reasons which may be assigned for this slight danger of infection are: (1) Because the majority of tuberculosis patients in a resort take precautions often neglected at home. (2) Because the patients are for the most part out of doors where they cannot so easily convey infection. (3) Because the breath of the consumptive does not contain germs. (4) Because persons in normal health, when living under favorable climatic conditions, have a strong natural resistance to tuberculosis.

New Mexico regrets the departure of Chaplain Cyril G. Bateman from Fort Bayard after a residence of nearly eight years there. Chaplain Bateman is a big, broad-minded minister of the gospel who has had a most wholesome influence on the public life and thought of New Mexico and we are sorry to see him leave for San Antonio.

ASPARAGUS By Jean Hubbs

Boiled Asparagus. Scrape and clean the asparagus and tie into bundles of five or six stalks each, taking care to leave the heads even. Cook rapidly in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and serve on toast with melted butter to which a little lemon juice may be added. Dressing, butter, cream, Hollandaise or white sauce may be used instead. The tips may be cooked the same way.

Baked Asparagus. Cut the tender parts of the asparagus into inch lengths, boil until tender in salted water and drain. Put a layer into a buttered baking dish, season with salt and pepper, dot with butter, sprinkle with crumbs and hard-boiled eggs chopped fine. Repeat until the dish is full, having crumbs and butter on top. Bake for half an hour and serve in the same dish. A thick cream sauce may be poured over before sprinkling with the crumbs and the eggs omitted. A little grated cheese may be added.

Baked Asparagus With Eggs. Cut the tender parts of asparagus into half-inch lengths and boil until tender in salted water. Drain, mix with a drawn butter sauce, season with salt and pepper, and pour into a buttered baking dish. Break five or six eggs carefully on the surface, dot with butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and put in the oven until the eggs set.

Asparagus Croustades. Cut a loaf of stale bread into three-inch cubes and hollow out the centers, leaving a thin shell. Rub with butter and brown in the oven or fry in deep fat and drain. Fill with cooked asparagus tips, rebated in cream sauce, sprinkle with minced parsley, and serve.

Asparagus Patties. Make a sauce of two tablespoons each of butter and flour cooked together, and half a cup each of chicken stock, cream and the water in which the asparagus has been boiled. Add the yolks of two eggs beaten with a teaspoon of lemon juice, salt and pepper to season, and two cups of cooked asparagus cut in small pieces. Fill the patty shells, heat thoroughly, and serve.

Escalloped Asparagus. Make a cream sauce and add to it three or four chopped hard-boiled eggs. Put into a buttered baking dish a layer of cooked asparagus cut into two-inch lengths. Spread with the sauce and repeat until the dish is full, having sauce on top. Sprinkle with crumbs, dot with butter and brown in the oven.

Asparagus With Egg Sauce. Prepare according to directions given for boiled asparagus, and drain carefully. Allow the yolk of one egg for each person, mash it to a powder, season with salt and pepper and add enough melted butter to make it as thick as mayonnaise. Serve the sauce separately.

Ragout of Asparagus. Chop fine a little parsley, two or three young onions, and a few leaves of lettuce. Fry brown in butter, brook with milk, add a little water and salt and pepper to season. Re-heat cooked asparagus with this, sprinkle with grated nutmeg, and serve very hot.

Asparagus a l'Allemande. Boil until tender in salted water, drain, remove the strings, and put on a buttered platter. Cover with fried bread crumbs and serve.

Asparagus a l'Anglaise. Cut the tender parts of two bunches of asparagus into inch lengths and boil until tender in salted water. Drain thoroughly, beat the yolks of three eggs with a tablespoon of milk or cream, and a teaspoon of butter, melted. Mix with the asparagus, season with salt and pepper, and stir in the stiffly beaten whites. Heat thoroughly and serve.

FAIR EXCHANGE. A New Back for an Old One. How It Can Be Done in Albuquerque.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Albuquerque residents would do well to profit by the following example.
