

INDIANS FINED FOR MAKING ATTACK ON ARMIJO

School Superintendent and Agency Head Cite Regulations Authorizing Action Against Truant Boy.

Following a trial that took up most of the morning, three of the Indians, being charged with fighting Vicente Armijo, truant officer of the Indian school, were found guilty by Justice of the Peace H. Craig today, and fined $10 apiece. A ten-day sentence in jail was suspended. The fourth defendant, Lorenzo Lente, was found guilty and the complaint dismissed.

Jose Remole and Susanna Lente were the two punished. They attacked Armijo at First street and Thirteenth avenue two weeks ago when he attempted to take into custody Bartolo Lente, a truant pupil from the Indian school. The Indians asserted that Armijo was rough in his actions and started the trouble.

Indian superintendent P. T. Lomeno and Nathan Perry, superintendent of the Indian school, were at the trial, and submitted to the court a copy of the government regulations giving the agent or the superintendent power to compel the attendance of Indian children at school. City Attorney N. Wilkinson appeared as prosecuting attorney.

Juan Lente, governor of the Isleta pueblo, was a highly interested auditor at the hearing. When it ended he went out to get the fines for his followers.

The boy over whom the trouble started is at the school. He has run away twice, and he is being kept more than a week in confinement to prevent him from fleeing again. His relatives are said to be considerably exercised over the fact that he is "locked up."

"SPARTACUS" IS DRAMA OF LOVE AND LIBERTY

All who have seen "Spartacus," George Kleine's superlative note in animated photography, concur in the opinion that it surpasses in every respect the previous ambitious masterpieces of this foremost producer in the photodramatic world. This awe-inspiring achievement is said to portray graphically the story of the revolt of the gladiators against Roman cruelty and history.

One of the most tensely interesting scenes in the tragic denouement depicts famishing lions in the arena devouring the body of a gladiator—the victim of the terrible death he had planned for Spartacus, the heroic central figure of this drama of love and liberty. This appalling scene depicts thousands of morbid spectators applauding the arena cruelty. The final episode is said to carry with it no feeling of repulsion, this being stamped seemingly by the delight of the beholders over the saving of Spartacus' life and the perishing in his stead of his unconquerable rival for the hand of a Roman noblewoman. This great photodrama is announced as the attraction at the Crystal theater for Monday and Tuesday, September 7 and 8, with daily matinees at 2:30.

RICE HAS WARRANTS ISSUED FOR TWO CHIROPRACTICS

Mr. and Mrs. Battendorf Charged With Illegal Practice of Medicine; Attorney General's Comment on the Laws.

Warrants have been issued for Mr. and Mrs. M. U. Battendorf of West Gold Avenue, charging illegal practice of medicine. Mr. and Mrs. Battendorf are chiropractors. The complaint was sworn to by Dr. L. G. Rice, head of the state medical board, who was urged to take action by other physicians of the city.

Section 7, chapter 34 of the laws of 1905, as cited by Attorney General Clancy, brings under regulation of the law governing treatment of the sick not only the use of "any drug, medicine, appliance," but also "other agency, material or not material," with a view to receiving compensation.

In a communication on the practice of chiropractic art Attorney General Clancy has said that the state does not prescribe or proscribe any system of treatment for the sick, but requires those who would practice to show either a diploma from a standard medical school or by examination sufficient knowledge of anatomy, chemistry, hygiene, materia medica, surgery, diagnosis and other like subjects to make it safe for them to treat the sick." Those regulations, the attorney general says, have been upheld by the courts generally.

Mr. and Mrs. Battendorf have been receiving service of the warrants for more than a week. They learned through the newspapers that complaint had been filed, and have been holding themselves in readiness to answer a summons to court. The hearing will be before Justice of the Peace George R. Craig.

BOY ARRESTED FOR RAISING R. R. GATES

On complaint of railroad officers, Jose Chavez, a messenger boy, was arraigned before Judge Craig in the police court today, charged with raising the railroad crossing gates on Central Avenue after they had been lowered on the approach of a train. It is against the law to tamper with the gates after they have been lowered. Chavez is said to have raised them in order to get across the tracks on his bicycle. Judge Craig warned Chavez to leave the gates alone, and ordered him to report at Juarez court Saturday.

DR. BRONSON HAD BIG BUNCH OF CURRENCY

Preliminary Hearing Begun in Which Former Albuquerque Physician Is Accused of Uttering Forged Money.

Currency to the amount of a half million pesos was found in the office of Dr. A. S. Bronson in El Paso, according to witnesses testifying at a preliminary hearing, which was begun Tuesday, in which the former Albuquerque physician is accused of having uttered forged instruments.

The El Paso Times of Wednesday has the following story of the preliminary hearing:

The preliminary hearing of Dr. A. S. Bronson, arrested Saturday on forty-nine different charges of having forged instruments in his possession, was begun at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon before Justice of the Peace James J. Murphy.

J. A. Robb, one of the two Americans arrested recently in Juarez on charges of passing counterfeit constitutional money, was the principal witness presented yesterday by the prosecution. Robb testified that he secured three allotments of the money on different occasions, each time visiting Dr. Bronson's office in the Capitan building to get the money.

"I first met Dr. Bronson during June," testified Robb, "and about three weeks ago he approached me with a proposition to sell constitutional money, telling me that he had some to sell cheap, and that I could resell it at a handsome profit."

"I got one batch of ten peso constitutional bills from him about three weeks ago, the entire amount aggregating $200. At the time I handed him where he got the money, and he told me that it did not concern me so long as I got my profit."

"I took the first allotment of currency across the Rio Grande into Juarez, and sold the money to a water in the Black Cat restaurant for $38. This money I brought back to El Paso with me, and I gave Dr. Bronson's cents on each dollar for the money."

"The second and third allotments of currency were for $300 each. Each time I visited Dr. Bronson at his office, and I think he took the money from a drawer in his desk. I was told to sell this money and give him 10 cents on the dollar for it after I had disposed of it."

"I gave a part of the second allotment to a waiter named Louis in the Black Cat, and I gave the entire third batch to a man named Boyce to dispose of for me. I was arrested before I could get rid of the rest of the money. I was arrested a week ago in Juarez.

"I do not know to this day whether or not the money I got from Dr. Bronson is "good," and I never asked him any questions concerning the money after the first day."

Robb testified that the counterfeit money introduced as evidence at the trial greatly resembled the money he had sold to Dr. Bronson.

The prosecution offered as an exhibit a grip full of the alleged counterfeit constitutional currency, all in ten peso bills, which is said to have been found in Bronson's quarters when the officers made a search for his premises for evidence. The amount of the currency found aggregated $500,000.

Luis Anzurri Benavides, secretary to General Francisco Villa, testified that General Villa authorized the issuance of $500,000 constitutional money when he was governor of Chihuahua. The money issued by General Villa is as much like this counterfeit money that only an expert, or one who is extremely familiar with the constitutional currency, could detect the difference," testified Mr. Benavides. "This money, however, I can identify as bad."

Balazar Anaya, inspector of currency at Juarez, was placed on the stand for the prosecution, and stated that the money found on Dr. Bronson's premises was counterfeit. He tore out Mr. Benavides' statement that only an expert could detect the difference between the genuine bills and the counterfeit, so excellent was the work done by the alleged counterfeiter.

"In most of the counterfeit bills, the dots that fill the parallelogram do not run to the edge lines as they do in all genuine constitutional bills," Mr. Anaya stated, "although in some the work is better and the parallelogram is completely filled out with dots. On all of the counterfeit bills, the seal on the back is of more or less an oval shape than is the case with the authorized issuance of currency. There are several little characteristics of the good money that are missing in these counterfeit bills, but they are so trivial that the average eye would be deceived and would be unable to discover the difference between the good and the bad."
