The war is getting more terrible every day. With bread stuck at the old rate of a five-cent nickel per each barrel and flour a peso more a barrel, the Wards of Brooklyn, have quit shoving $25,000 contracts in the way of ball players.

Now known why Frank Farrell has been such a game loser. It was Big Bill Devery's money going up.

Pirates have three great football players on their roster. If they can set the rules changed to make touchdowns count in the score, they stand a chance to rip through the league next year.

Excited allies have forgotten one charge to make against the Kaiser. Nobody has accused Bill's soldiers of using emery paper before pitching into the enemy.

Philadelphia critics say there isn't a better pitcher in the wide world than Cleveland Alexander.

Jack Johnson shucked his French bent the other day. He applied for a passport as an American citizen at the United States embassy in London. He said he was going traveling in Russia.

Harvard has a professional football scout. His name is R. W. P. Brown. He signs a contract at a salary figure just as baseball scouts do. His job is not to go out among the minor colleges and pick up promising material for the crimson eleven, but his duties consist of following the Yale team and watching its development and style of play. This is no innovation. Brown has done this thing for six years.

RED SOX WILL PLAY AGAINST TROOPERS

The baseball team of Troop K, which is to come here from Fort Winch to take part in the state fair, October 5-10, will play a series of games with the Red Sox. The first contest is scheduled for Sunday, October 4. The troop ball tossers are fast and hard hitting.

HEAVY RUN SURPRISES KANSAS CITY CATTLE MARKET ON MONDAY

Kansas City Stockyards, Sept. 23.—A run of 22,000 cattle surprised the trade today, but it did no special damage to the market, steady to 15 lower expressing it. The supply was strictly a run of grassers, the delegation showing corn being lightest, in proportion to the total receipts, of any day this fall. Some near prime steers managed to get up to $19.55 today, a steady price, and some of the real prime article will be here Tuesday for which it is predicted $11 will be paid. This class is steadily advancing, and is immune from market declines that affect other cattle.

A large share of the supply is from Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado. Selling of country buyers here today, local stables having difficulty in furnishing a sufficient number of horses to accommodate them for riding about the yards. Prices are a shade lower, steers largely at $6.50 to $7.25, stock cows around $5.75, heifers $6.50, calves $7 to $8.25. Outgo this week will probably be largest of the fall to date.

Hogs sold steady today, top $9, bulk $8.50 to $9, receipts 5,000. The market is erratic, being a two-sided affair. Packers are pounding prices because of narrowed outlet for lard and pork product and declining market for same. On the other hand, order buyers are getting urgent orders for fresh pork material, and for bacon hogs, from which the market gets most of whatever little bloom it shows. Friday's session was sensational, order buyers and serum makers taking almost the whole crop, regardless of asking prices. Dealers expect an uneven trade this week, with a lower tendency.

Sheep and lambs reached a high point middle of last week, but dropped rapidly after that, and prices continue to tumble today. All the markets are heavily supplied, 30,000 head here. Lambs are around one dollar below the high time last week, and sheep 50 cents lower. It will be a fine chance this week to secure material for feeding this winter. Trade was late starting today and quotations are somewhat in the nature of a guess, best lambs around $7.60, yearlings $6.25, wethers $5.50, cows $5.15, feeding lambs $6.50 to $7.00.

disposal of some 50,000 to 60,000 bales, or about half of the amount available. Moreover, it is highly probable that the wools offered will be very largely wools of the low crossed order, which are in principal demand at the moment for the use in the manufacture of army cloths.

The Position of Fine Wools. The modified arrangements regarding the London sale will doubtless have somewhat of a reassuring effect upon the holders of fine wool both here and in Yorkshire upon the assumption that little or no merino wool will be offered, for which assumption it must be confessed we have no justifying evidence beyond conjecture, based upon the length- or perhaps we should say "breadth" of the sale, and nature of the demand for wool.

However, the foregoing conjecture may turn out, fine wools, which have been for some months relatively dearer than crossbreds, have been the first, as the Bulletin has suggested before, to feel the effects of the war and prices have been seeking a lower level. According to our cable advices found elsewhere, the Bradford market on fine wools and tops has not changed appreciably from the level of last week, which was (at 28 pence) four cents a pound on 84s tops below the market of a fortnight preceding. It is expected, however, that the market will go lower and spinners are even bidding as low as 48 cents for January delivery, without getting acceptance.

Domestic fine wools are bound to be affected by the position of foreign fine wools and they have already been affected but not apparently to the same extent. A top-maker said in this respect this week that whereas he would sell new contracts at a decline of 5 cents a pound from recent high rates on the tops from foreign wool, he would not feel safe in lowering this price on a fine top from domestic territory wool more than 2 cents, because of the fact that he had not been able as yet to obtain concessions in these fine territory wools that would justify the sale.

Domestic Wool. Total sales for the week are estimated in the vicinity of 2 to 2 1/2 million pounds, largely domestic wools, although some additional lots of New Zealand crossbreds have changed hands and a little fine wool.

Sales of territory have generally been for small quantities, but one lot of some 250,000 pounds is reported at an estimated clear cost of 52 cents for fine medium wool. Another sale includes about 300,000 pounds of original Colorado on an estimated clear basis of 50.55c, with another lot of about 200,000 pounds.

Some graded territory wool is reported including quarter-blood Soda Springs, said to have brought 74 cents; a small quantity of fine staple Montana at 52 cents, flared to cost 62 cents clear basis. A little

FINE WOOLS FIRST TO FEEL PRESSURE OF THE WAR

Demand for Lower Grades for Use in Army Clothing Manufacture Holds Up Price, Says Boston Report.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin, reviewing last week's wool market, says in part:

Seldom has the writer found such a unanimity of opinion through the Boston wool trade to the effect that business is quiet as has been the case this week. To be sure not a few houses are busy packing wool on contracts made previously and some business has also been accomplished during the past week, but the volume of business on new contracts has been of limited proportions, according to almost every report.

A diminishing volume of business in any market, and no less in wool, means a tendency to lower prices, and there is no denying that the quieter tone of the last two or three weeks has had its effect on wool values. This effect, contrary to some suppositions, has not come to pass over night and even yet there are merchants who are refusing to consider lower prices and who contend that for what wool they are selling they are realizing old rates.

Effect of Proposed London Sales. It is a question whether or not the wool trade has ever had a future market to diagnose which presented so many difficult and withal difficult problems as that which now confronts it. Unquestionably the most immediate difficulty lay in the decision announced last week by the governors of the London sales, to hold the fifth series of auctions on October 6, offerings being unrestricted up to arrivals of date September 21, which it was estimated would total about 120,000 bales.

This decision of the importers' committee was not reached without very considerable opposition on the part of Bradford operators, but the bankers who have advanced money on the wools were adamant and insisted that the sales must be held. Continued pressure, however, was brought to bear by the British Wool Buyers' association and threats even of boycotting the sales were heard.

The final suggestion of the Wool Buyers' association was to hold the sales beginning October 20, instead of October 6. This suggestion became concurrently accepted in the American trade to a very wide extent as the final adjustment of the matter, but this was really not the fact.

The arrangements for the sales were, however, modified to the extent that a five days' sale only will be held, beginning October 6. As the usual quantity of wool catalogued for each selling day is ten to twelve thousand bales, it is apparent that this arrangement provides for the
