

RALEIGH IN BRIEF.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS IN AND AROUND THE CAPITAL.

Short Items of News Gathered on the Fly by the Chronicle's Reporters.

Another car load of mules for the factory arrived yesterday.

The probabilities are that the straw hat will appear again to-day.

Sheriff R. I. Dalton, of Stokes county, brought one convict to the penitentiary yesterday.

Sheriff F. D. Markham, of Durham county, yesterday settled for State taxes with the public treasurer, paying in $15,485.95.

There was an advance in the cotton market here yesterday and the staple went up from one-eighth to one-fourth all around. The market is firm and the demand good.

In the Supreme court yesterday the case of Walker vs. Scott was argued; Davidson and Shuford appearing for plaintiff and J. W. Cooper and E. C. Smith for defendant.

A great many people think that the neatest piece of architecture in the city is Col. Kennan's new residence, now going up on the corner of Wilmington and Jones streets.

A few have not yet paid the full amount due on stock in Raleigh cotton mills. The last installment was due April 15th, and those who have not yet paid are requested to do so without further delay.

Central M. E. church Sunday school will have their annual picnic on May 20. The place has not been decided upon as yet, but it is pretty certain that it will not be to some other town.

The number of doubting Thomases concerning the new Union depot is diminishing. The announcement of the acceptance of the ground plans for the building leaves not a shadow of a doubt as to the early erection of the structure.

Ruth Lodge, Daughters of Rebecca I. O. O. F., will give a basket picnic May 7th, at Maj. R. S. Tucker's Pond. They have invited the members of Manteo and Seaton Gales Lodges to participate.

Messrs. Whiting Bros. again wish to be recorded as favoring the early closing movement, and say that they are willing to make 6:30 p. m. the closing hour except Saturday. Messrs. Woolcott & Son are also in favor of the movement. The CHRONICLE will publish the name of any firm that will send in its name.

The CHRONICLE takes great pleasure in commending, to all its nearly 1,000 Raleigh subscribers, Mr. C. F. Lumsden, whose advertisement appears in another column. Mr. Lumsden is well known in Raleigh and enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know him. He does only first-class work. He has the best material, and does tin-roofing, guttering, piping, etc., and does it promptly.

Messrs. Bowser and Calder, the managers of the Bowser Vaudeville Comedy Company, which "busted" here this week, were seen in Richmond, Va., yesterday by a young gentleman of this city who knew them. These men will be remembered as having run away from here with the proceeds of the show, and leaving the members of their company to get away as best they could.

At the request of Seaton Gales and Manteo lodges of I. O. O. F., Rev. J. H. Gordon will, on next Sunday night, at Edenton street M. E. church, preach a sermon specially touching upon the principles and practice of Odd Fellowship. Long a member of the Order, and Past Grand Master and Representative, Mr. Gordon is well qualified for the task, which to him will be a pleasure. All Odd Fellows and their families, as well as others, are invited.

THE NEW DEPOT.

The Ground Plans Have Been Adopted--And Arrangements are Now Being Made for Beginning Work.

The building committee for the new Union depot for Raleigh have adopted the ground plan for the building. The plan chosen was that submitted by Maj. Jno. C. Winder, general manager of the southern division of the Seaboard Air Line system.

The front of the building will face south Dawson street and will be about one hundred feet wide. The length of the building including a large shed to be built in the rear of the main structure, and under which trains will stop, will extend from Dawson to Harrington street, thus making the dimensions of the whole structure 100x400 feet. Provision is made for gentlemen and ladies in separate apartments. The arrangement of baggage rooms, express rooms, ticket offices, lunch and news counters and toilet rooms, is convenient and very acceptable.

A lobby 18x70 feet will be provided in the east end of the building, and this is where passengers leaving trains will first enter the building.

Maj. Winder, at the request of the committee, has already begun correspondence with architects with reference to plans for the superstructure, and proposes that no time shall be lost in the beginning of work. Raleigh will have her much needed depot, in all probability, some time before the advent of the year 1891.

The building will be approached by five railroad tracks, between which platforms will be built, and the general arrangement will be such that passengers may enter carriages standing under a shed; so that a lofty roof protects passengers from sun or rain from the time they leave the train until they enter the carriages.

A ROMANCE INTERRUPTED.

A Little Sensation at Salem Female Academy--"Love Laughs at Lock-Smiths"--But he is Foiled for Once.

A letter was received here yesterday giving an account of sensational romance--which was not a romance because it was broken up--at Salem Female Academy.

A young gentleman named Wiley Gibson, aged nineteen years, attempted to steal Miss Lillie Rogers, of Oxford, aged sixteen, from the Female Academy in Salem. His effort came very near being successful. Night was chosen for the time of elopement, and Mr. Gibson had provided a carriage, and had every thing in readiness. The academy has a night watch, who looks after and reports every movement in the college after nightfall, but the young lady eluded him by attiring herself in the dress of a servant. She succeeded in getting out of the college, and reached the carriage in which Mr. Gibson was waiting for her. But just as she got seated, a hand reached the horse's bridle, and the romance was effectually interrupted.

The letter states that the young lady's people were notified of the affair, and it was reported here yesterday that she passed through Greensboro with her brother on route for home.

Mr. Gibson is reported as raging with disappointment, and as having expressed a determination not to be foiled. He says he will yet gain the object of his love and affection.

The history of ages past shows that "Love laughs at locksmiths" in the long run, though he be foiled time and again; and it may be that the little god will sustain his reputation in this case in the end.

Let Them Go and Go at Once.

[Greensboro North State.] Rhode Island has gone Democratic. This is the first time this has happened since Lee surrendered. What is the matter with the people? Something is wrong about politics. It is about time for the political jobbers in the Republican party to get out of the way and take their muzzles and ham-strings with them.

THE ROBBERY AT NORRIS & CARTER'S.

It has Shown up in Large Proportions--How the Purloiners Stocked Their Wardrobes--And How they Raised Money to "Swell" On.

The system of robbery which had been conducted by two colored employees of the firm of Norris & Carter, and which was discovered this week, has developed into something considerable.

So far it is known that about five hundred dollars' worth of goods were taken from the store by the colored porter and the driver of the delivery wagon. They have confessed to having sold goods stolen from the establishment at various times, but there is no way to get at the amount thus lost by the firm.

Nelson Hines, the driver of the delivery wagon, and Cannon Lewis, the porter, were the principal actors in the thieving operations.

A few days ago while Mr. Claude Sherwood, who has charge of some departments in the store, was inspecting the shoe department, he saw behind some boxes of shoes two bundles. They attracted his attention, and he was about to examine them when he saw Hines standing very near and watching him very closely. Something in Hines' demeanor led Mr. Sherwood to suspect something was wrong. He withdrew his attention from the bundles and continued the inspection. A few moments later he sent Hines out on an errand and then examined the packages. They proved to be handsome dress patterns worth sixty cents per yard. Mr. Sherwood called Mr. Norris, of the firm, and showed him the goods, expressing the opinion that there was something very crooked about the way they had been concealed. The goods were put back where they were found to serve as a "trap," and Mr. Norris made it his business to keep a sharp lookout on that part of the store. Soon after Hines returned from his errand he told Mr. Norris he was going to breakfast. He went by the shoe department, slipped behind the counter, secured the bundles and went on through the back door. Mr. Norris was close upon him by this time. He called Hines back and asked what he had. Hines replied that it was an old pair of pants and some rags which he had used to clean the windows.

Mr. Sherwood then called Hines into a small office in the rear of the store and made him open the bundles. With this crusher in his face Hines confessed to having stolen the goods. He was asked if he knew whether or not anybody else had been stealing from the store. He said he did not want to answer that question, that he was in trouble himself and did not want to get anybody in the same fix. When he was pressed however, he acknowledged having assisted Cannon Lewis, the porter, to carry a trunk from up stairs down the side entrance, and place it on the delivery wagon. Lewis told Hines to take the trunk to his (Lewis') house, and do it quick. Hines then confessed to having taken goods from the store at various times, and gave a partial list of what he had taken.

Hines' confession led the firm to procure search warrants to examine the rooms of the driver and porter, and other places where it was suspected they might have left something.

When the rooms were examined, the size of the steal began to show up. A large quantity of jewelry was found, including some of the finest in the store. The jewelry department is in the front part of the house, and the firm think that the thieves must have had a key to the store; as they cannot understand how the jewelry could have been taken at any time when the store was open. They think it must have been stolen at night. Among other things found in the rooms were a number of suits of underwear worth ten dollars a suit; curtains worth from five to fifteen dollars per pair; piano covers, fine lace curtains, bolts of silk and velvet (taken from the department near the front door), almost a whole stock of cuffs and collars, towels in original packages; over one hundred silk handkerchiefs worth from thirty cents to two dollars and a half each; a lot of ladies' fine underwear; a large quantity of table cloths and napkins--some worth ten dollars per set; lawn tennis coats, pocket books, handkerchiefs, gloves, hats, fine shoes, and in fact something from every department in the store. One hundred and seventeen scarfs and neckties were recovered from Hines and one hundred and eight from Lewis. The ties were worth all the way from fifty cents to two dollars and a half each.

The two negroes had the largest and most complete wardrobes, perhaps, of any of the "bloodes" of the city. They were not wanting in clothes, and whenever they run short of cash, they managed to make a sale of a part of their wardrobes to raise funds. Of course the wardrobes were replenished whenever it became necessary.

Lewis' room was at the house of Chas. Hunter (col.). When Mr. Carter went there with officer Beasley to make a search, there was very little visible at first; but Mr. Carter had certain notes, and succeeded in making Hunter's wife produce nearly every thing his memorandum called for. It seems that the woman had been advised that Lewis had been arrested, and with the help of one or two people in her house, she had hastily taken all the goods from Lewis' room and concealed them elsewhere. When she had surrendered them, Officer Beasley arrested her as an accomplice.

At the hearing before Mayor Thompson, Hines was bound over to court in the sum of $100, and Lewis in the sum of $200. Both are now in jail. So far the goods recovered and restored to stock in the store amount to about $450 in value. It is estimated that about $100 worth was thrown back or refused by the firm as being damaged and unfit for stock.

A Historic House Burned.

(Charlotte Chronicle.) One of the old landmarks of historic Mecklenburg was burned Monday evening. It was a house near Tuckasee Ford, and about nine miles from Charlotte. Cornwalls, during his campaign through North Carolina, in the revolutionary war, camped with his army near Tuckasee Ford, and occupied the house on the hill on this side of the river. It was on this same campaign that Cornwallis passed through Charlotte.

The house was a large two-story building, built after the style of architecture of its day, and was in a good state of preservation, having been repaired from time to time as repairs became necessary.

THE DURHAM RAILROAD WAR.

More Habeas Corpus Proceedings--The Hearing in this City Before Judge Armfield.

There were more habeas corpus proceedings here yesterday. The case was the outcome of the railroad war in Durham, and was heard before Judge Armfield at chambers. It was exactly in the same line as the case of W. L. Morning, which was heard on Wednesday.

The town of Durham continues to defend its right to control Peabody street and still holds that it has a right to say who shall or shall not interfere with it in any way. The town gave the Durham & Northern railroad (a branch of the Raleigh & Gaston) the right to lay its track on that street. The street is within the bounds which the Richmond & Danville company claims as its right of way. The Richmond & Danville company has been trying to remove or get control of the Durham & Northern track, but every time the R. & D. makes a move to interfere with it, the authorities of Durham step forward and stop them by arresting them on charges of forcible trespass. Thus on Wednesday thirteen employees of the R. & D. were arrested, whereupon that company immediately sued out writs of habeas corpus, returnable before Judge Armfield in this city.

Yesterday morning the thirteen men under arrest came down from Durham under an escort of the city police, and the case was set for yesterday evening at 2:30 o'clock. The town of Durham charged that the R. & D. men were guilty of forcible trespass, in interfering with Peabody street. The entire evening was spent in arguing the case. Judge Armfield ordered that the employees be released on the ground that their action was not a forcible trespass as alleged; for they had no arms and made no resistance to the officers. Eight of the men were dismissed at the cost of the petitioners, and five at the cost of the town officers. These last five were arrested by the officers before any warrants had been sworn out by the petitioners.

A Prominent Railroad Man Found.

(By United Press.) NEW YORK, April 24.--Benjamin B. Newton, assistant superintendent of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, who has been missing from Plainfield, N. J., for the past several days, was found this morning at Smith & McNeel's hotel in this city. He was in apparent good health and gave no explanation of his disappearance.

THE WORLD'S COMMERCE.

NEW YORK, April 24.--Messrs. Hubbard, Price & Co. in their cotton circular to-night say: The interest in the market is being turned to the new crop positions as a result of the advance of silver in London to day to 47 3/8 pence, a quotation unofficially reported this afternoon. Orders to buy emanated from German sources and the fear of adverse legislation is at the moment lost sight of in the desire to purchase cotton, under the stimulus of the passage of the silver bill. Sellers to realize profits upon long cotton depressed the early positions early in the day, as the holdings are evidently passing into the hands of weaker operators at present. At the close the temper of the market was bullish and higher. Liverpool quotations are looked for to-morrow.

Receipts at our ports to-day estimated at 4,000 bales, against 3,019 last week. The spot markets firm at former quotations; middling uplands 11 13-16; sales 909 bales.

Transactions in futures 78,500 bales. Futures closed 1 to 3 points higher, as follows:
