

THE COUNTY CAMPAIGN.

THE COUNTY NOMINEES AT MILLBROOK.

The Democrats Drive Some Heavy Charges Against the Radicals--The Radicals Make no Effort to Explain the Charges--and they Stand as Provoked.

The Democratic and Republican county nominees spoke to the people at Millbrook yesterday.

There was an assembly of about two hundred voters present, a decided majority of them being colored.

The speaking was opened by announcement on the part of some of the speakers that they were candidates.

Only a few went into a discussion of the current questions of the day.

Chas. D Upchurch's

speech was something like a begging appeal to the people to keep him in office. He didn't make any issue. He said there was no issue between him and his competitor, Mr. Thompson, except that both wanted the office. Upchurch said he was experienced in the office--no other man was experienced and therefore he, and he alone, was entitled to the office.

Mr. John W. Thompson.

Mr. John W. Thompson, the manly Democratic candidate for the office of Clerk of the Superior Court came before the people and announced himself. Upchurch had made no argument, and Mr. Thompson was not, therefore, under the necessity of making anything like an argumentative reply.

But he took occasion to assert that there were plenty of men who could and would fill the office as well as Upchurch filled it. If this were not so, he said, the people of Wake would be in a sad plight in case Upchurch should become physically incapacitated to fill the office.

Mr. Thompson told how Upchurch went to the Chicago Republican convention and worked for such a man as Harrison for President, and Mr. Thompson promised that he would never play such a "seummy" trick on the people as that.

Capt. M. W. Page.

Capt. "Mack" Page, Democratic candidate for county sheriff, addressed the people.

He charged J. Rowan Rogers--and drove home the fact--that Rogers had begun collecting "costs" out of people on the first of last November, and he had no right to collect costs, according to the laws of North Carolina, before the first of January.

Then Capt. Page told an incident that made the people open their eyes. He said that some time last fall a man went into the sheriff's office to pay his tax, and also the tax of his mother-in-law.

Rogers told him what the taxes were, and then charged "costs" on the taxes. The man who wanted to pay the taxes refused to take the taxes unless the costs were paid.

Then Capt. Page showed how the county had relieved Rogers from paying ALL THE MONEY he lost by the bank, and yet Rogers went on collecting costs from the people.

Capt. Page went on and showed how Rogers had gone to the tax list on the first of November, and had copied the name of every person who had not paid tax up to that time and had proceeded to charge and collect costs from nearly every one of them.

Sheriff Rogers made no speech during the day--not even attempting anything like an explanation of the charges made against him by Capt. Page.

"Sorry Pickup" Meacham.

The "Reverend" D. P. Meacham was on hand. He took up considerable time and made a blundering effort to explain the financial management of the State and county from 1868 to date.

He said that since the Democrats came into power in the State in 1876, the expenses of the State government had been INCREASED--but "Sorry Pickup" forgot to tell about the building of the colored Deaf and Dumb and Blind Asylum by the Democrats, and the building of the lunatic asylum at Goldsboro for the colored people, the $500 which the State gives annually to the colored fair, and about all the hundreds of schools for colored people in the State, all established by the Democrats since 1876, and all these cost some money; but "Sorry Pickup" who showed himself, on this day, to be the biggest, yet the weakest demagogue of the age, didn't say anything about all these matters.

Meacham's speech was surely the most incoherent medley of finances, labor, education and other subjects ever made in Wake county, and it fell upon most of his hearers as so much Greek.

Some one in the crowd asked: "What are you going to do for the people if you are elected Mr. Meacham?"

Meacham: "I propose to resist such legislation as will oppress the--"

(Interrupted.) "Are you in favor of a railroad commission?"

Meacham: "I'm not in favor of a railroad commission until I know what a railroad commission is and what that railroad commission proposes to do. You don't catch me committing myself on this subject till I know something about it."

A voice: "Are you in favor of a high protective tariff?"

Meacham pretended to welcome this question, but he dodged it by jumping into some kind of a rambling colloquy about the State tax on fertilizers which he wound up in such a way that nobody could tell where he stood.

Mr. A. C. Green.

Mr. Green started off by saying that the braying of an ass was the most detestable of sounds. He had said he was not on the ground to try to mislead anybody, but to tell the truth. He had told his opponent (Meacham) who is a preacher, that the devil would get him if he didn't stop trying to mislead the people, but he wouldn't stop.

Then Mr. Green "hit into" Meacham with hat off and sleeves rolled up. He told the people that they ought to remember that they couldn't send their children to school until the Democrats went into government control; and he told all about the asylums and schools and charities for the poor and unfortunate colored children--all the expenses of which were borne by the State.

Mr. Green also told the farmers that the Democrats had established a great college at Raleigh for the sons of farmers and laborers and mechanics of the State, and that college was sustained by the State under Democratic rule.

That college, with all the other public institutions for the poor people cost the State some money, and the State expenses were accordingly increased. Mr. Green told the people that Meacham had a son going to that college, which was built by the Democrats for the farmers and laborers, and that college was kept up by the State; "and Mr. Meacham," said Mr. Green, "preacher though he is and ought to be an honest man, never told you all about this. Oh! he ought to know better than that. He ought not to profess to be a preacher, and a Democrat, then an Independent, then a Republican, and the Lord knows what else, and then come out here and try to impose on you and mislead you. Oh! he ought not to do that. And when I see a man who does try to impose upon and deceive the people, it makes my heart burn within me."

Mr. Green said that Meacham had been talking about the State election law and saying it was a mean law and intended to prevent ignorant people from voting. But, said Mr. Green, you all know, at least those of you who have tried to register, that you have had no trouble about it if you were an honest man and had a right to register. That law may keep some unprincipled and dishonest men from registering and voting. But you, as honest men, don't want to walk up to the ballot box and vote, and then have some dishonest scoundrel stand alongside of you and vote with you. You want an honest vote.

Mr. Green's speech was most honest, plain, straightforward and conscientious. He was listened to with intense interest and the colored people gave him special attention. They actually looked like they would like to support him, and if this poor deluded class of people were free from the party lash, they would support honest and conscientious men like Mr. Green.

C. W. Hoover.

C. W. Hoover was on the ground and said that twenty years ago the colored people of Raleigh could not list ten thousand dollars worth of property. Now they listed $339,000 worth; and still the negroes were told that they were growing poorer and poorer by voting the Republican ticket. But Hoover didn't explain that the negroes had been enabled to accumulate this property during the last sixteen years under Democratic State government.

When the Republicans were in power the negro never accumulated anything; and if the Republicans had remained in power the negroes would not have any property now.

Hoover put in some talk for Upchurch and begged the people to support and vote for him for clerk of the Superior Court.

T. R. Purnell.

T. R. Purnell, a nominee of that convention which had twenty white delegates and eighty negro delegates made a talk.

His was a demagogical tirade. He tried to show and convince the people who listened to him that the tariff was a measure which was making the PEOPLE RICH. This was an assertion which made the people, particularly the negroes, wonder what in creation Mr. Purnell was talking about. Getting rich! Who was getting rich? Purnell saw the effect of this remark and said: "I don't mean that you are growing rich, but the whole country is getting richer." He told his hearers that they wouldn't know the tariff if they were to see it coming down the railroad. Oh! Mr. Purnell, what a truth you told them! If those people did know the tariff they would jump on it with both feet and stamp the life out of it. And you didn't try to tell these people what the tariff was. You didn't want them to know that tariff. You want these poor, deluded people to remain in ignorance of these things so you can still keep them subject to the party lash, and lead them around by the ears as you have been doing for several years.

Purnell touched upon the force bill, and tried to represent that it was a matter which was intended for the whole country, and said it was a measure which had been instituted by some patriotic Republicans who wanted to purify the ballot in New York, Indiana, and some Southern States; that it would not effect North Carolina because there was no fraudulent voting here.

Mr. A. D. Jones.

He began his talk by referring to the time when Purnell was county attorney. Mr. Jones said that at that time the county treasury was depleted half the time, and it was only half the time that a man who had a witness ticket could get a cent on it. It had to be shaved and discounted till not much was left of it. Now a man could take his witness ticket to the court house and get every cent it called for, and this good and splendid condition was brought about by a Democratic board of county commissioners.

"Buck" Jones paid his respects to Meacham, the renegade parson and politician. Meacham was a renegade and a traitor and was fixing to betray somebody; but he wouldn't be able to fool the people. The people would find him out. The honest A. C. Green towers above him like the mountain towers above a mole hill. "Buck" at this particular point got warmed up and he fairly blistered "Brer" Meacham. He got the crowd warmed up. He referred to Meacham as a renegade Democrat who for the sake of a Republican and begging for the colored vote. "And are you going to vote for him?" asked Mr. "Buck" Jones. And some of the colored people answered "no," and they said it like they meant it.

Mr. Jones then took up the tariff question and made some of those people understand how that measure taxed and oppressed them instead of making them rich. The people understood then, why Mr. Purnell took back his assertion that the tariff was making his listeners richer.

Mr. Jones then showed how that infamous Force bill, if enacted into a law, would probably place bayonets at the ballot boxes in this State, and the consequent humiliation and degradation that would follow such a proceeding.

The time of the speakers was limited by agreement, and Mr. Jones was cut off in his discussion of the force bill.

A SAD DEATH.

A Promising Young North Carolinian's Sad End.

The CHRONICLE has already noted the death of Mr. Wm. T. Heflin, son of our townsman, Capt. R. L. Heflin. He held the important position of Auditor of the Georgia Southern railroad.

A special from Macon to the Atlanta Constitution contains the following: "MACON, Ga., September 29.--[Special.]--A short time ago Auditor Heflin, of the Georgia Southern & Florida road, died suddenly. He was succeeded by Mr. W. T. Heflin, a most excellent young gentleman and efficient official, aged about 32 years.

In the early part of July Mr. Heflin was taken sick with bilious fever. He went to Indian Springs for rest and recuperation. He got better, but returned to work too soon, and had a relapse. He went to his old home in Jackson, Batts county, where he died last night about 9 o'clock. Several of the Georgia Southern's officials went to Jackson to attend the funeral. Mr. Heflin married a Miss Sasset, of Hancock county."

Mr. Heflin was born June 21, 1861, and was twenty-nine years old, and not thirty-two, as the Constitution has it. Capt. Heflin did not know that his son was ill until he received the telegram of his death. He could not reach there in time for the funeral. It is a sad blow to him, and he has the sympathy of the entire community.

Bobbitt--Hervey.

Last night at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride, on McDowell street, Rev. J. B. Bobbitt, D. D. and Miss Hattie M. Hervey were married. Rev. W. S. Black, D. D. performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of relatives and friends.

Miss Hervey is the daughter of the late P. E. Hervey, a sister of Mr. Richard E. Hervey and Mrs. P. C. Ennis, and a niece of Mrs. Julia Fisher.

Doctor Bobbitt has been for many years a prominent member of the North Carolina Conference, and was at one time editor and owner of the Raleigh Christian Advocate.

The Gilt Carnival.

There was high carnival sure enough last night at Metropolitan opera house. A very large audience was present, and the specialties, all of which are good, were very greatly appreciated and enjoyed. There are some features in this show which people ought not to miss.

The leading prizes last night were: A cook stove drawn by Chas. Johnson (col); pair of elegant vases, drawn by Jas. Bashford, 905 Manly street; water set, drawn by Annie L. Brown, 119 South Salisbury street.

Mr. Morphet will introduce his Great Cremation to-night, in which a living subject will be burned to ashes.

Organ Recital.

The congregation of the Church of the Good Shepherd have arranged for a grand organ recital, in which the magnificent new organ just received and put up, will be used.

The recital will be given on Tuesday evening, October 7th, at 8 o'clock. The committee in charge have succeeded in securing a large personnel of cultivated talent for the recital, and are sure of a delightful success.

Funeral Notice.

The funeral services over the remains of little Jessie, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lewellen, will be held from their residence, corner Person and Lenoir streets, this evening at 4 o'clock. Friends invited to attend.

Mr. M. H. Pride, a Northern man now residing at Pittsboro will run an excursion from the North to Pittsboro for the benefit of Northern people who may desire to come South.--Sanford Express.

More Additions to the Trades Procession.

The Trades procession continues to grow. It is booming, and will be a big thing.

In addition to those already announced to participate, the following were sent in yesterday:

North Carolina Wagon company.

A. E. Jordan (two or three floats).

D. W. C. Harris, Dye works.

This makes about twenty floats so far, and more houses are to be heard from.

But why don't these other houses come on in. Where are such establishments as The Three M's, and Woolcott's immense establishment, and the various machine shops and other institutions? And where is the Big Racket Store? None should keep out. Come on, gentlemen. Send in your names, and then attend the trades procession meeting in the CHRONICLE office on Friday night.

Don't postpone it, but go and register to-day.

Marriage at Morrisville.

There was a very pretty home marriage at Morrisville last evening at the residence of Rev. J. R. Maynard. His daughter, Miss Pennie Maynard was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. E. Williams, of Raleigh, Rev. N. B. Cobb, of Cary, performing the ceremony.

There was quite an assemblage of admiring and intimate friends of the young people present, to wish for them in this new start in life, all the happiest blessings which humanity may have on earth.

The attendants were Mr. J. W. Cooper and Miss M. Loula Page; Dr. J. M. Ayer and Miss Emma Howard; Mr. Kim W. Weathers and Miss Cora Page.

After the ceremony the young married couple went to the home of the groom near Asbury, where a very pleasant home reception was given them.

Supreme Court.

The following are yesterday's proceedings:

Hinton vs. Ferebee, from Camden; argued by Grandy & Aydtlett for plaintiff, and Fuller & Snow for Defendant.

State vs. railroad; argued upon printed brief.

Every Democratic voter ought to have his name on the registration books without delay.
