MCKINLEY NAMED FOR GOVERNOR.

Foraker Nominates Him and he is Chosen by Acclamation.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

Probabilities are that Campbell will Oppose Him as a Democratic Candidate and Billy Will Go Down.

(By the United Press.)

COLUMBUS, O., June 17.—The second day of the Republican State Convention opened bright and clear. The proceedings of the day were opened by prayer, after which the report of the committee on credentials was presented and adopted.

The committee on permanent organization reported amid applause the name of Gen. Asa S. Bushnell, of Clark county, for permanent chairman of the convention, and E. J. Kessinger, of Athens, for permanent Secretary.

Bushnell's Talk.

Chairman Bushnell said: "Gentlemen of the convention, I thank you for this distinguished honor, I congratulate you upon the bright sunshine this morning (laughter) giving promise of an early and abundant harvest (laughter) the realization of which will be a more substantial benefit to the whole people of this country than the organization of any number of new political parties." (Applause and cheers.)

Foraker Nominates McKinley

Nominations were declared in order and ex-Governor Foraker arose to present the name of McKinley for Governor. At the sight of the familiar figure of the ex-Governor and sturdy campaigner the convention fairly went mad with enthusiasm. For over a minute the applause and cheers reverberated through the immense building, while Foraker bowed smilingly to the compliment.

Gentlemen of the convention, he said, "I have now a most pleasing duty to perform. This contest upon which we are about to enter is to be in some respects of unusual character. While it is to be hoped that we are not to be called upon to confront a greater number of enemies in the aggregate, yet surely it is known that we are to be compelled to contend against a greater variety than ever before.

That Democratic Party.

In the first place we must fight that time-honored enemy, the Democratic party, which it would appear that even the devil could not kill. And in the next place nobody yet knows how many third parties. We do know, however, that the political shibboleth of each and every one of these political organizations will be anything to beat the Republican party. Not only is the Governorship of the great State of Ohio at stake, but this contest involves more than the Governorship, more than the General Assembly, more than the public institutions.

It reaches out into national politics. A United States Senator will depend upon its result, and more important still than all this, it will determine whether this great State of Ohio is to go into the next great national contest of 1892 at the head of the Republican or at the head of the Democratic column.

"We shall win this fight (applause) but we must not be content with simply winning it. We must win it triumphantly. (applause) and to that end we must select for our standard-bearer that man who, of all others, can most surely command our undivided strength. (Applause.) We must have as our leader a fit representative of our views with respect to every living issue, wherein his record and his personality is the best type we have of the illustrious achievements and the moral grandeur of Republicanism. It is not my privilege to point him out. It is no man's privilege to point him out. That has already been done. By common consent all eyes have turned in one direction. One man there is who, measured by the exigencies of this occasion, stands a full head and shoulders above all his comrades, and that man is Wm. McKinley. There are many reasons why he should be nominated. In the first place, everybody knows him. He does not need any introduction anywhere.

"Ohio," said Gen. Foraker, "is the Lookout Mountain of the political battle which we are entering, and Wm. McKinley, Jr., is the Joe Hooker of the Republican party (cheers) and we are the boys (laughter). We intend to follow up its steep and rugged mountainside and help him plant the flag of Republicanism in triumph there.

I move, Mr. Chairman, that the rules of this convention be suspended and that by acclamation we nominate to be our candidate for Governor that brilliant statesman and soldier and orator, William McKinley. (Prolonged cheering.)

Nominated by Acclamation.

Colonel Robert McKinley, the colored orator of Cincinnati seconded Major McKinley's nomination on behalf of 30,000 colored voters of Ohio. With one wild, hilarious cheer of affirmation the convention declared Major McKinley nominated for Governor by acclamation, and a committee was appointed to apprise him of his nomination and escort him to the hall. His appearance was the signal for another outburst of enthusiasm.

McKinley Speaks.

Major McKinley, in accepting the nomination, spoke with unwonted energy. His speech was repeatedly punctuated with applause and when he concluded the convention fairly went wild. Speaking for the Republican party of Ohio he warmly commended the clean, conservative, able and patriotic administration of President Harrison, which had won the confidence of the people at home and commanded universal respect abroad. He spoke briefly in defense of the new tariff law, and then turning he charged the Democratic administration with unparalleled extravagance in State expenditure.

Sherman Talks.

Senator Sherman followed in a short speech, and then the committee on resolutions reported the platform which was promptly adopted.

The platform reaffirms devotion to the patriotic doctrine of protection, demands protection to the wool industry, endorses the amended coinage act of the last Congress; demands the free exercise by every citizen of the sovereign right to cast his ballot and to have it counted; demands laws to protect our country and people against the influx of criminal classes of foreign nations; and commends the administration of President Harrison and the policy of reciprocity and the vigorous foreign policy which has commanded the respect of foreign nations for the flag of our country.

NEW YORK, June 17.—First Mate Bishop of the steamship Alvo, which arrived from Haytian ports to-day, states that on June 6 a vessel which had been at Port Au Prince during the insurrection, reached Navassa and reported that President Hippolyte had been shot and killed by one of the insurgents. The report had not yet been further substantiated when the Alvo sailed away. The story of the revolt and subsequent murder of Rignaud which this vessel brought agreed with the reports which have already been published.

Mate Bishop says that while the Alvo was at Jacma on June 5, six political prisoners were taken out of prison to the open square in the centre of the city and shot in the presence of their friends and relatives. The greatest excitement prevails in town, and all sorts of stories of outrage and murder are current.

THE LAST BLOW TO RUSSIAN JEWS.

The Synagogue at St. Petersburg, Their Only Refuge, Closed

HORRIBLE TRAIN DISASTER.

While the Czar Was on his way to Livadia his Train is met by Another and a Tragedy is Enacted. (By The United Press.)

LONDON, June 17.—A St. Petersburg dispatch says that the closing of the synagogue in that city is regarded by the Jews as a final blow at their race. The synagogue is a handsome and comparatively ancient specimen of architecture and its existence was often pointed to by the friends of Russia as an evidence that the charges about persecuting the Jews were greatly exaggerated. The closing of the synagogue goes to show that the rich as well as the poor Hebrews are included in the imperial ban. The Czar's journey to Livadia to meet the Grand Duke George was attended by the most extraordinary precautions entirely relative of the comfort and convenience of the general public. While the imperial train was on its way a passenger train came on, traveling in the opposite direction. The passenger train was side-tracked. All the windows were closed and the doors locked, and the passengers were warned not to show themselves outside the carriages until after the Czar's train had passed. Each door on that train was guarded by a soldier. The passenger train remained stationary for two hours before being permitted to go ahead. The sufferings of some of the inmates of the train are said to have been terrible. In one instance a mother and babe, the latter a weekling, were unable to obtain the necessary attendance of a physician and the child perished, obviously on that account. The poor mother, with her dead child in her arms, went insane over her loss. The latest Russian regulation is an order by the holy synod that members of the Greek church must attend church on Sunday. Policemen are to be detailed near all large manufacturing establishments to see that the order is obeyed.
