MINING NOTES.

Bay State.—Operations at this mine beyond Plymouth were brought to a standstill last week. All work is stopped, and the mine is flooded.

Oneida.—Reports were current that a body of good ore was encountered in this mine recently, which raised the hopes that the company would be successful, after many years of thorough prospecting, in getting the property on a paying footing. A bunch of good ore was encountered, but, unfortunately, it proved to be a small bunch, and was soon exhausted.

The unprecedented rains have had a damaging effect upon the mining industry. In most of them the increased flow of water keeps the pumping or hoisting apparatus in steady motion to control the situation.

At the Zeila it taxes the capacity of the tanks, working twenty-four hours a day, to keep the water from damaging the lower levels. Mill and chlorination works were brought to a standstill from lack of rock and sulphurets. To add to seriousness of the situation, there is a scarcity of fuel at nearly all the mines, both wood and oil. The interruption of railroad traffic on the main lines has prevented the customary supply of oil from getting here, and the stock on hand at the mines was getting low when the interruption came.

For three or four days the electric power was cut off on account of breaks on the line of the ditch. The Argonaut was the only one of the big mines in uninterrupted operation during the emergency, and that runs by water power. However, with a let-up in the weather conditions it is only a question of a few days when everything will be in full running order again.

The South Eureka has levied another assessment of five cents per share.

The Alma Gold Mining Company has levied an assessment of ten cents per share. This, it is hoped, indicates that something is likely to be doing at this property ere long. The mine is located partly in the town limits. Its development would do much toward the revival of business here. The mine has been idle for about ten years. It is the prevailing opinion that the outlook for a good paying mine being developed on this ground is very promising.

Will Leave Wednesday.

Rev. Wm. Tason, who has been the resident pastor of the Episcopal church here from its organization some five years ago, expects to leave next Wednesday for Vancouver, B. C. He will preach his farewell discourse in his congregation here next Sunday evening. His son W. Tason, came up from Santa Cruz, where he is employed as bookkeeper for a large firm, yesterday, and will remain until the family leave. We are informed no arrangements have yet been made for a resident pastor to fill the vacancy, but the services will be continued until a resident pastor can be secured. Rev. Tason has a vacation for one year. He has four brothers and a sister living at Vancouver. He does not know whether he will return to California, but should he do so it is not probable that he will return to the Jackson charge.

Fireman Loses His Life.

Mr and Mrs Doyle, of Hunts gulch received a note from Lorena Olmstead dated Sacramento, March 23, conveying the sad news that her brother W. E. Olmstead, lost his life on a freight train, near Redding, on Tuesday night of last week near Sims in Shasta county. The young man was employed as fireman on the Southern Pacific. He was on a freight train consisting of five cars. The accident occurred at 10:30 at night. It was at the height of the storm. Two hundred feet of the track was washed out and in the darkness the train plunged into the ditch. The engineer C. B. Dilly, was severely bruised about the head. Olmstead was missed after the accident. It is supposed he lost his life in the flood waters. His body had not been recovered at last accounts.

The missing man was about 22 years of age, a son of the late Bert Olmstead, who for some years lived in the vicinity of Hunts gulch, and afterwards in Sutter Creek, where he died several years back. The family thereafter moved to Sacramento, where the two boys, G. H. Olmstead and deceased, secured employment on the railroad. The surviving brother is also a fireman. Mrs Olmstead is stunned by the awful blow, aggravated as it is by the mystery in which it is shrouded, and the failure to recover the body.

On the same day, Mrs Catherine Cramer was also laid to rest. She died in Sutter Creek last Saturday. She sustained a fall while about the house, which rendered her unconscious, and never thereafter regained consciousness. She was the widow of the late Phillip Cramer, an old time resident of Sutter Creek, and the mother of Z. Kirkwood, of this place. Her husband was buried here several years ago, and hence the interment here.

Rust, and the wedding has been a subject of town talk for months. After the ceremony the residence of the groom on Summit street, which had been elegantly refurbished for the occasion, was thrown open to well-wishers. There was no exclusiveness, no special invitations. All were welcomed who chose to call. The band boys went up in a body, and tendered the newly married couple a complimentary serenade. With many other callers, they were royally welcomed and feasted with the finest of wines and cakes. Monday evening the choral club and others called to tender their congratulations and good wishes for their future happiness.

Rainfall.

The rainfall for the past week has been as follows: March 23 1.00, 24 0.12, 25 0.87, March 26 0.21.

Total for week 2.25. Total for season to date 40.01. Same period last year 26.56.

The past four months have been the wettest ever known in this section. The total rainfall up to this date has exceeded any year since we have kept a record—extending over a period of thirty years. Not only in the quantity of rain that has fallen, but also in the number of rainy days, the season breaks all records. From December 8th last, when the wet season fairly set in, it has been an almost steady continuous downpour. There were 13 rainy days in December, 18 in January, 10 in February and 19 in March, making 60 days of precipitation in less than four months. The previous six seasons have been characterized by a rainfall above the average. The total are as follows: 1900-1, 32.53 inches; 1901-2, 29.33; 1902-3, 28.87; 1903-4, 35.36; 1904-5, 32.31; 1905-6, 34.32; with the present season capping the climax with 39.65 to date. After this date last year we had over 6 inches of rain; so that the prospects are favorable for a total for this season of between 40 and 50 inches.

A NOTORIOUS ADVENTURESS MEETS A VIOLENT DEATH.

Mrs Martha Odell Shot to Death by Her Husband.

Mrs Martha E. Odell, whose shady career is known in part at least to many residents of Amador county, met a tragic death in Oregon last week at the hands of her latest husband whom she had deserted, after securing his hard-earned savings. She had been regarded for many years as one of the most daring, shrewd and unscrupulous adventuresses that ever operated in this state. Amador county was the theatre of a number of her adventures. She first came into notoriety in this county some twelve years back, when McManus, her husband at that time, was shot and killed by her alleged father, J. D. Maxwell.

The McManus were at that time renting the farm of H. Page, below Drytown. Maxwell was occupying a cabin, alone, on the Cosumnes river, several miles distant. McManus went to the Maxwell cabin one morning, and soon after reaching there was killed by Maxwell. The slayer's version of the tragedy was that the killing was done in self-defense, but some circumstances did not support this story. However, there was no eye-witness to contradict the defendant's story, and the jury acquitted him. Mrs McManus appeared as the prosecuting witness. In after years she represented to her matrimonial dupes that she owned rich mines in Amador county. She did own some alleged gravel claims in the neighborhood of Lockwood's station, and other places in this county. They were never known to produce any gold worth mentioning, nevertheless they were made to play an important part in furthering the schemes of this designing woman in dipping into the pockets of her victims. The following account of her career, and of her tragic end, taken from the Sacramento Bee, will be read with interest by our readers:

Oregon City (Ore.), March 23.—As a result of a frightful tragedy here this morning, Mr and Mrs William Henderson are dead and John Maxwell, reputed father of the dead woman, is wounded, probably fatally. Henderson, half crazed because his wife persisted in her refusal to live with him, fired five shots from a 38-caliber Colt's revolver, killing his wife, seriously wounding Maxwell, and then blew out his brains. The Hendersons were married in San Francisco March 30, 1906, and prior to the fire kept a lodging house there. Their married life was unhappy, however, and Mrs Henderson went to Maxwell's home at Latrobe, El Dorado county, California. Maxwell is well known there, being a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and a past noble grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Married Many Times. Mrs Henderson had been married four or five times and a former husband was named Odell. At his death he willed her a 160-acre farm at Kerby, Josephine county, Oregon, and she had considerable money, as $2,700 belonging to her was found in Maxwell's pockets.

Last January Mrs Henderson commenced a suit for divorce in this city. This morning Henderson entered the William Tell House, where his wife and Maxwell were staying, and after some words shot both, and then killed himself. The woman had married Henderson to keep him from testifying against her in a suit brought by John A. Horn in an Oakland court April 3, 1906 to recover $800, which Mrs Henderson, who was then Mrs Martha Odell, had induced him to put into a mining scheme of hers.

As far as can be learned the woman began her career of crime in this city and figured in almost every grade of human degradation, from the picking of a pocket to murder. She first became known to the police in 1895, when her father, Joseph D. Maxwell, killed her husband, Daniel McManus, and escaped punishment for the killing, although the woman herself used every endeavor to secure her father's conviction, for the reason that he had been sent to the gallows she would have had free control of a number of small mines in which he was interested.

Married Expressman. Some two years before this killing the woman, known as Martha E. Maxwell, was earning her living as a nurse and housekeeper in this city. About this time she married Dan McManus, an expressman, whose Another dupe of the woman made his appearance about this time, coming from Detroit, Mich., where he had seen her advertisement in a paper. He fell in love with Martha, and through her, being out of the way, they were married, and Martha became Mrs Frank O'Dell, but still kept her advertisement about the rich young widow in the papers.

Ruined Two Lives. Her next victim was a young telegraph operator from Phoenix, Arizona. When the advertisement met his eye, he was about to be married to an estimable young woman of that place, and they were preparing their future home. He came to Sacramento, fell under the wiles of Martha, broke his engagement, and was about to place the few thousand dollars he possessed in Martha's hands, when his eyes were opened.

Calling at her apartments one morning, he caught a glimpse of the woman, who was in another room, by aid of a mirror, in the arms of another man. This incident took place in a fashionable boarding house where Mrs O'Dell had secured apartments by means of forged references. Finding that his supposed rich young widow was not all that he pictured, this man went to the police, made inquiries, and had his eyes opened.

He left for San Francisco with the intention to return and right the wrong he had done his former love in breaking their engagement. He fell in bad company, however, lost his money, and when he arrived in Phoenix, found that his betrothed had died of a broken heart. He ended his life with a pistol shot on the green mound that covered her remains.

Dropped O'Dell. After Mrs O'Dell succeeded in getting all of O'Dell's money, she dropped him and disappeared for a time from Sacramento, and the next that was known of her was that she was brought to trial in the Federal Courts for jumping mining claims. She was so shrewd, however, that she kept just within the limit of the law and escaped conviction.

Her Last Victim. How many more victims the woman obtained is unknown, but it is believed that they numbered scores, for as soon as she obtained their money she dropped them. Her last victim was the man who killed her. He was a railroad man from the East, who came in answer to her advertisement, and who proved to be the hardest one to handle of all that fell within her wiles. Time after time he broke away from her influences.

Eventually she married him and got control of some $3000, all he had, when she dropped him as she had the others, and in company with her father, Joseph Maxwell, disappeared.

Henderson went to Spokane, where he resumed railroading, spending all that he made in endeavoring to gain trace of the woman who had ruined his life. He found her Saturday, and the tragedy that ensued in the Oregon city hotel ends the story.

FRED McCUTCHEN.

stand was at the corner of Second and J streets, in front of the bank of D. O. Mills. The couple engaged a building at the northeast corner of Seventh and M streets, where they conducted a lodging house until they removed to a small ranch near Latrobe, just over the El Dorado line.

After the killing of Dan McManus, which was done at the instance of the woman, who hoped to get rid of husband and father at one swoop, so that she could gain control of the mines they had located, she took up with a Charles Browhart, a bunco steerer and three-card monte man, a former member of a "big mit" gang who were driven out of Council Bluffs.

The couple went to San Francisco and were located for a time at 417 Mission street; later they came to Sacramento and secured quarters at 628 J street, opposite the county jail, where they operated a so-called mining and employment office that was used as a cloak for their schemes to fleece the unwary.

Rich Young Widow. The woman caused an advertisement to be inserted in the San Francisco Examiner and in Eastern papers to the effect that a rich young widow without incubances, who owned productive mines, desired to meet an honorable man with some capital who would develop the mines, etc.

Her First Victim. Her first victim was a well-to-do man named James Watts, who hung around the I street establishment for a couple of months like a moth around a candle, and then disappeared. He was last seen alive in the company of Mrs Browhart, and when Watt's lifeless body was found some weeks later lying at the edge of a slough north of Jibboom street attention was drawn to the woman and her husband, who were taken into custody on suspicion by the sheriff.

The body of Watts was found by some boys. His skull had been crushed in by a heavy piece of metallic slag that lay near the body. A heavy gold watch and chain belonging to Watts was discovered in a local pawnshop, and eventually the murder of Watts was traced to the hands of William Westlake, another dupe of this notorious woman, and he was convicted and is now serving a life sentence at Folsom Prison for the crime.

It was supposed by the authorities that the killing of Watts was instigated by the woman, but she was so shrewd that they were unable to connect her directly with the crime, and eventually she and Browhart were discharged from custody.

Browhart Quit. This close escape frightened Browhart, who took to drink, lost his nerve and refused to be any longer an accomplice to the woman in fleecing the unwary. Eventually he straightened up and obtained employment as a waiter in a restaurant, and passed out of this remarkable woman's influence.
