Water is up around the Joseph Henry on the Paducah ways, and work is stopped for the present till the river falls.

ANCIENT ROMAN SEASONING. The Gormands Took Medicine and Foods Together. Of recent years several men who have indulged freely their taste of high living have died as a result of a too hearty meal or because some one of the dishes failed to agree with them.

In these days of luxurious feasts, where the digestion is severely taxed as the palate is pleased, it is not unlikely that the services of a physician may play a not unimportant part. This will not be an innovation, however, for the custom is older than the Christian era, but it is unlikely that, like the Romans, we will ever mix medicines with the food, so that they may serve at the same time as a seasoning and a remedy.

In a preparation of a Roman feast the doctor made out the menu and gave it to the head cook or purveyor, who obtained the articles mentioned in it. The Romans seasoned their meat with rue, parsley seed, cumin, marsh-mallows and nettles and distributed freely throughout their meals pepper, honey, salt, vinegar, raisins, mustard, oil, rue, mastic and cardamoms. Vegetables were prepared with alter to make them look green, a practice not entirely unknown in modern times.

The quantities of food served were something astonishing. Julius Caesar, when he gave his triumphal feast, had three tons of lampreys served at his table, and when Hortensius passed away to a world where gourmandizing is unknown he left behind as being inconceivable to take along with him 10,000 pipes of those strong wines, seasoned with asafetida and other abominations, a single glass of which would drive a modern wine drinker crazy.

Among the Roman emperors noted for the indulgence of their appetites were Vitellius, Commodus, Didius, Julianus and Heliogabalus, the last of whom made sausages of shrimps, crabs, oysters and lobsters that might have been excellent if the seasoning was simple and appropriate.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Air famine is the common cause of pneumonia. Ten-elevenths of the world's people are north of the equator. Spain has an average of 3,000 hours of sunshine a year, against only 1,400 in England.

The average family in the United States has four and seven-tenths persons. There is $300,000,000 worth of English money invested in submarine cables. A New York life insurance company holds $8,000,000 worth of Russia's railway securities.

Large numbers of ready-made cottages are being shipped to the Amazon from New York. There are nearly 500 Christian churches in Japan and over 1,000 missionaries.

Seventeen persons in a hundred in the state of New York live to be over 70 years of age. The United States under construction in the United States have a greater total tonnage than those afloat. Through the "Suez" in 1903 passed 35,000,000 tons of freight—three times as much as was carried on the Suez canal.

The manager said he would make a place for her in his company. "How much of a place?" she asked. "That depends," he replied non-committally. "And what will be the salary?" "That also depends." "I presume that means that you would like to try my voice?" "Well, something depends on that; but not much."

Biggest Gold Producer. The biggest gold-producing mine in the world is the Homestake, in South Dakota. The ore yields less than $4 a ton, but is worked at small cost. The output now is over 20,000 ounces fine gold a month and will soon be increased. Odd Wager. A German innkeeper on the Swiss border has undertaken as a result of a wager to roll a barrel full of wine across Switzerland and Italy to Rome.

AMUSEMENTS. Saturday, April 2, M. E. church, annual Easter market. Monday, April 4, Elks' minstrel, at Cairo opera house. Tuesday, April 5, Miss Ida Benfey, at Cairo opera house. Tuesday, April 5, euvre party by St. Joseph's branch, No. 23, C. K. and L. of A., K. M. K. G. hall. Saturday, April 29, Lost River, at Cairo opera house, afternoon and evening.

The ladies of the First M. E. church will hold an Easter market Saturday at the store of Walter and Sherrick on Eighth street. To be able to reproduce the actual life of small communities is rare. Lost River Valley folk are a queer class, and Joseph Arthur seems to have hit a happy medium in not burlesquing his types of making them flabby and innocuous. His latest play, "Lost River," touches on the labor question, glances off to society folk and anon introduces tender love only to jump off quickly onward to a splendid storm effect, during which the ride for life on wheels takes place. Then comes the wild thunder of three thoroughbred's hoofs down the Baden pike to the tollgate. This is succeeded by a somely scene of love, peace and contentment, which engenders human sympathy and touches the heart. At the Opera house on Saturday, April 2, matinee and night.

In the Olio of the Great Elks' Minstrel at the opera house Easter Monday, April 4th, will be featured some of the best vaudeville acts now running in this country. We cannot mention them all, but among them will be Chas. Carey, the wonderful imitator, giving his great imitation of the phonograph. While his imitation of the phonograph is wonderful, his other imitations of a sawmill, a church organ, the dog light, and numerous others are equally as good. Then Fred Haas, Chas. E. Hessian, Jack Hodges and Sam Halliday in their great clog dance, "The Merry Pickaninnies," is simply phenomenal, that's all. In the ping pong and flip flop movement they stand alone, having many imitators but no equals. Mention of other features will be made from day to day. Tickets on sale at box office Monday at 8:30 a. m.

Following are some comments on the work of Miss Ida Benfey, who appears at the opera house Tuesday April 5th: Yale University—"Your recitals are unique and well-liked." Mark Bailey, Chair of Eloquence. "The Queen, London—"A great favorite with the audience was Miss Benfey, who told American stories with great feeling and dramatic force." The Era—"Miss Benfey impresses us as a large hearted womanly woman. She depends not on stage tricks, but shows us that culture finds beauties in English literature which are otherwise unseen."

Paul Gilmore, supported by one of the strongest companies with which he has ever been surrounded, will visit this city very soon in the big New York and London success, "The Mummy and the Humming Bird." Those really fortunate enough to witness Mr. Gilmore's splendid interpretation of the role of Clement Parbury in "The Tyranny of Tears" last season will be glad to hear the reports that his role of Lord Lumley in his play this season fits him better than anything else he has ever appeared in.

His Right to Get Drunk. "When I hear people say anything against the president taking a little rest and recreation," said a southern representative, "I am reminded of the story of General Jackson and Major George Groghan. "The latter's defense of the fort at Lower Sandusky against a force of 1,000 men—British regulars and Indians—was one of the great feats of the war of 1812. Complaint was made to General Jackson that Groghan was indulging in strong drink to such an extent that he should be dismissed from the army. A delegation came to Washington for the purpose of having the major dismissed, but Jackson gave them a cold reception. When their mission was announced, Jackson said: "Gentlemen, Major Groghan has honestly and fairly won the right to get drunk every week, or every day of his life; and not only that, it is my honest and candid opinion the United States should pay for his whiskey. Let him drink to his heart's content, by gad, sir!"—Washington Star.

They Want Him to Run for office to strengthen the ticket, but he demurred. "After this," they urged, "you may take a higher flight." "Still he held back. "I am not fitted to make a voyage in th political balloon," he said. "Why not?" they asked. "I haven't gas enough to keep the blasted thing afloat."

Ministerial Abstainers. It is reported that 2,573 out of 2,894 Congressional ministers in England and Wales are total abstainers, while in Ireland and Scotland the proportion is still larger. Potato Statistics. The per capita consumption of potatoes in the United States is 2 1/2 bushels per annum, while in Germany it is 2 1/4 bushels. An acre in potatoes in Germany yields 200 bushels and in the United States ninety-six.

Somewhat Expensive. To keep the whole German army in the field for a week would cost $30,000,000.

Not the Same "Sun." O'Brien—Ye were sunstruck, ye say? Why, man alive, the sun could never disfigure a man's face like that. McGiety—Ye don't know me son, O'Brien.
