Men Wanted for United States Navy

Washington, Mar. 26.—The President last night signed an executive order directing that the authorized enlisted strength of the navy be increased to 87,000. He was authorized by congress, in case of emergency, to direct such increase in enlistment. New ships and ships in reserve are being fully committed as rapidly as possible and the need is imperative for a larger enlistment to meet them.

There has been a net increase of over six thousand, five hundred enlisted since congress recently authorized an increase but many more are needed, and needed now.

Will you not emphasize this need by giving special prominence on the first page of your paper, to the President's order, and also by making an editorial appeal for new recruits for the navy.

The navy offers exceptional advantages to young men of stuff and ambition to serve in the first line for national defense. In this emergency you have the opportunity and the privilege of performing this public service, and I am confidently appealing to you for your cordial and helpful co-operation.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

FLUNKYS MADE NO MOTION

Too Well Trained Even to Turn Their Heads When Collie Got into the Carriage Behind Them.

About her fine collie, Max Gladstone O'Connor, Mrs. T. P. O'Connor tells many engaging anecdotes in her book, "Dog Stars."

All the children at the embassy, writes Mrs. O'Connor, had a word for Max, and hopefully he frequently got into a waiting vehicle and sat there until the laughing "cobby" drove him up and down the embankment.

One lovely morning in June I was walking through Grosvenor square when I observed an equipage, the like of which is to be seen only in London, waiting for some great lady. The large, smooth horses, jet black, were perfectly fitted; the silver-mounted harness glittered magnificently; the long, lemon-shaped barouche was lined in wine-colored satin; the coachman and footman, both big, fine-looking men, were powdered hair, clear-colored broadcloth liveries, richly adorned with silver buttons, and high hats with silver bands and cockades. Conscious of their importance, they looked neither to the right nor the left, but with proud eyes gazing into space remained immovable. Such magnificence could only be the product of an old, picturesque and self-respecting aristocracy, possibly the carriage of royalty.

Suddenly I missed Max. He seemed to have disappeared as if by magic, for he was not on either side of the street, and yet it had been only a moment since he was trotting by my side. I turned back and as I passed the carriage, looked up, and there he was, smiling and at ease, sitting in the back of the wine-colored barouche on the tufted satin seat.

"Max," I called, "get down at once and come along!"

Those massive, self-important-looking eyes never winked an eyelash. They must have seen him get into the carriage, and certainly they saw him get out, but they made no sign. And I am confident that if a kangaroo had taken a flying leap into that opulent richness he would have been treated with the same silent, crushing pomposity.

LITTLE BIT OF EASY MONEY

Clubman Knew Well What He Was Doing When He Made the Bet With His Friend.

In an office building in the downtown district there is a club on an upper floor, with an express elevator service for members, says the New York Evening Post. The other day two men emerging from the dining room consulted the elevator floor indicator. The arrow moved in two shifts, one of them the club elevator express.

"It's wonderful how much time a man can save by these expresses," remarked one of the pair.

"Nonsense," said his companion; "I can get to the bottom on a local and beat you."

"Bet you ten dollars you can't," was the reply.

The cages in both shafts opened with a click, and without further parley the two men entered different elevators. The local got away a fraction of a moment ahead of the express. When the man in the express stepped out on the ground floor his acquaintance was waiting for him.

"How did you do it?" gasped the express passenger, digging down for the forfeited banknote.

"Easy," said his companion. "I gave my elevator man half the bet in advance—and he didn't make any stops."
