If the outfit who appropriated our name could manage to appropriate an editor, a compositor and a pressman they might manage to get out a semi-monthly.

We are curious to know what excuse the purloiners of our name will invent for their failure to get their issue out "on time" for the past two weeks

MR. BRYAN has been reaping the reward of ten years of adherence to many of those principles which it has now become good politics for both parties to play throughout the country. He arouses enthusiasm because he is looked upon by hundreds of thousands as a man who lives for his convictions and not for strategy, who has been the victim of corporation funds, and who spoke ten years ago much that the more progressive Republicans accept to-day. By thousands he would be called a less intelligent and less able Roosevelt. By thousands he would be called a partisan, less given to expediency, and more able to prefer his own beliefs to victory.—Collier's.
