The Kind We Print

Stationery printed at this office is giving the best satisfaction. Last week we printed 500 statements for a man and by their aid he collected all his accounts. Two months ago a man bought of us some note paper and envelopes to use when writing to his sweetheart—and now he is married. Another man forged a name on a check printed in this office—and is in jail. Another stole some of our paper with which to make cigarettes—he is dead. A young lady bought some of our paper to curl her hair on—and now she has a beau. (We only have a little of this left.) By using our statements a man can collect old accounts, tell fortunes, cause rain, change the color of the hair, have teeth extracted without pain, find out the name of your future wife or husband, be successful in business and get elected to office. Give us a call.—Deming Headlight. News stock and printing show even better results.

The Freak Legislator

Every year sees the introduction of freak bills into the legislatures of one or more states, but the spring of 1915 seems to have capped the climax. The freak legislators have run mad. Hardly a state has escaped. It is the fashion of the press to poke fun at Kansas, which may be depended upon to come to the front with something foolish in the way of legislation. And although the Sunflower state has lived up to her glowing reputation in the present session, her companions in the sorority of states have not fallen far behind. Most of the laws have been introduced for the purpose of prohibiting something or other. Here are a few, culled from one day's exchanges:

To prohibit the catching of frogs, Minnesota.

To prohibit the use of face powder, rouge, hair dye or bleach, the piercing of ears and the wearing of earrings, Kansas.

To compel chickens to go to roost before 7. p. m. To provide that bulls driven along the road at night shall wear lights, Colorado.

Providing that all weeds and plants which cause hay fever shall be removed from the roadsides. Bachelors to pay an annual tax of $5 per head. Prohibiting the wearing of whiskers by doctors and dentists, Mass.

Compelling the National Guard to do ninety days work each year on the roads and bridges of the state. Requiring dealers in stock foods to pay an annual license of $25 a year. Prohibiting free lunches, Neb.

Compelling churchgoers to leave their firearms outside, Texas.

Prohibiting treating. Prohibiting the giving of tips to barbers, waiters, porters, hat stanchers, etc. Taxing bachelors of 30 years of age, $50 per annum, Licensing cats $1 per head per annum, Ill.

To furnish lumber jacks with individual bathtubs, Minn.

Establishing a uniform thickness of sleigh runners, N. Dak.

Prohibiting a man from becoming a "ball dodger" i. e. allowing persons to throw base balls at one's head, for hire, N. Y.

Limiting each resident of the state to one gallon of "corn liker" a month, S. C.

Prohibiting the smoking of cigarettes by school, normal and university instructors, Wis.

Prohibiting the publication of liquor advertisements in the newspapers of the state and calling for the destruction of all such advertisements in papers printed outside of the state before such papers are sold, Ala.

All rubber goods, drugs and drug sundries at the City Drug Store.

Why, Jeff

Jeff Livingston, who, in spite of the fact that he is the president of the great Snyder Preserve company, and a millionaire, is as democratic as his first name, was once a poor boy and wore his rags and patches with the rest of the "kids." Jeff occasionally finds time to indulge in a little literary work and his most recent effusion is founded upon an incident in his early career. Here it is:

Two ladies gay met a boy one day; his legs were brim scratched, his clothes were blue, but a nut-brown hue marked the place where his pants were patched.

They bubbled with joy at the blue-clad boy, with his spot of nut-brown hue.

"Why didn't you patch with a color to match?" they chuckled.

"Why not with blue?"

"Come, don't be coy, my blue-brown boy, speak out!" and they laughed with glee;

And he blushed rose-red, while he bashfully said: "That ain't no patch, that's me!"

"My Kind of a Young Man"

In beginning a most interesting story containing an interview with King Albert of Belgium, Henry N. Hall relates that there is pinned on the wall in one of the rooms of the Belgian army headquarters a cartoon from an American newspaper showing Uncle Sam with an approving hand placed on the left shoulder of the Belgian ruler, beneath which are the words: 'King or no king, you are my kind of a young man.'

In homely American phrase this sentence accurately sums up the feeling of the people of this country toward one of the most remarkable monarchs of all history. He is our kind of a young man. Kingship has not spoiled or softened him, homage to his people has not destroyed his sense of responsibility or his keen appreciation of his duty. If in his mind there abides the idea that he rules by 'divine right,' there is along with it a clear recognition that the right entails certain well defined obligations which its possessor should not shirk.

Albert is one king, and perhaps the only one of all the warring nations, to whose person there has attached no particular sacredness since hostilities began. He has gone where the fire was the hottest, has lived in the trenches with his soldiers, has endured the hardships and sufferings brought on by war without a murmur and in every particular has set an example of courage and devotion to principle to every soldier in his army. A giant in physique, he inspires respect and loyalty in his subjects no less by his magnificent presence than by his splendid qualities of heart and mind. As Mr. Hall very aptly puts it, he is 'every inch a king.'

Americans are not accustomed to associating these qualities with kingship. There have been too many of the other sort of kings. And it is safe to say that if there were more kings like Albert there would be less political unrest in Europe, and that those who rule would do so with less danger of being splattered over the surrounding scenery by the sudden and violent agency of an anarchist's bomb.—Albuquerque Journal.
