Odd Bits of News

Okeene, Okla.—Sunday, while Oliver Zerby was ringing the bell in a church in this place, the clapper fell out of the bell, striking him upon the head. He died Sunday night.

Frankfort, Ky.—Chris Wober, who was buried last week, weighed 320 pounds. The largest stock casket, three feet wide, was too small to hold the body so a special coffin had to be built. It was impossible to get this coffin inside the church at Hopkins. It took twelve pall bearers to carry the remains.

London, Eng.—The king's example on the liquor question was not followed by the clergy in the meeting of the lower house of the convention at York when the following resolution, presented by the Dean of Manchester, was passed: "That this house, while wishing to support all such measures as may in the opinion of the government, be necessary for the strength and safety of the nation in time of war, would look with anxiety upon total prohibition of the sale of all alcoholic drinks."

Galveston, Tex.—Charles Pertolna, the official rat catcher, has resigned. For the past six or seven months he has been catching rats along the water front at the rate of 2,000 a month. He received the regular bounty of eight and ten cents per rat, and in addition a bonus of $210. for each month in which he took over 1,000 rats. When he took the job he said he would quit when he had earned enough money to buy a boat and a gasoline engine. His ambition was realized last week and he handed in his badge.

New York.—Mortimer Thompson, a jeweler, possesses the well known charmed life. After he had been rescued from underneath the wheels of a subway train uninjured after two cars had passed over him, it became known that he had been dropped out of a window when a baby, by his nurse, had fallen out of a fourth story window when a boy and had landed on a clothes line which broke the fall; was shot in the head when he came within range of some revolver play four years ago, and had escaped drowning last month when an automobile in which he was riding in New Jersey, plunged into the river.

Stevens Point, Wis.—F. M. Sackett and H. K. West are neighbors. Sackett made a garden this spring, and West's hens—well, anyhow, West was unable to believe that his hens, which are well bred, would go foraging where they were not invited. So Sackett scattered about his garden grains of corn to each of which was attached a thread and from each thread a placard. They bore such legends as these: "I have just been scratching in Mr. Sackett's yard;" "My owner does not feed me enough and I have to visit the neighbors." When West saw these cards dangling from the bills of his hens he admitted Sackett's proof was convincing.

Fine Patriotism

Theodore Roosevelt would like to have this nation declare war upon Germany and plunge forthwith into the savagery in which Europe is involved. Congressman Gardner would like to have this nation enter the war; for what purpose he does not make clear, beyond the perfectly clear fact that it would add to the consumption of ammunition.

Roosevelt and Gardner are the leaders of what might be termed the "war party" in this country, if there were sufficient following to dignify it so. These two men have been taking the lead for months past in a campaign to discredit the United States navy. They have been declaring the unfitness of the whole military system as well as of the government. They have been making speeches, and printing and distributing pamphlets and otherwise conducting a vigorously operated publicity bureau in a determined effort to prove to the people of the nation and to the world that this country not only is incapable of a war of aggression, but is utterly powerless should there be a call for national defense.

In the face of his propaganda we find Theodore Roosevelt clamoring for war, and we find the useless Gardner proclaiming in Washington "what Roosevelt would do were he president." We cannot fight, they proclaim, because we are not equipped. Yet we must jump, without reflection, into what they themselves assert would be certain destruction. Whatever may be the outcome of the present critical situation, the people of the United States, Congressman and a few others excepted, are a unit in returning thanks that Theodore Roosevelt is not president of the United States, and that he is so far discredited as a leader of men that his frantic clamoring for war will not add seriously to the uneasiness in the public mind and the tension in the nation.—Albuquerque Herald.
